Miss May Palmer and Miss Elsie Gennison Lose Lives While Bathing; Only Possible Rescuer Eighth of Mile Away

Whole Town Grieves for the Young Women, Who Were Members of the Sophomore Class and Socially Popular

WHILE bathing in Lake Waban at Wellesley, Miss May Palmer, eighteen years old, and Miss Elsie Gennison, nineteen years old, were drowned, about five o'clock yesterday afternoon. Both were sophomores in Wellesley College.

There were no other bathers and the only spectator of the tragedy was Edward Rollins, a young man who was fishing an eighth of a mile away. He did his best to save them, but arrived too late.

Miss Palmer was the daughter of Charles H. Palmer, a well known Wellesley grocer, who resides at No. 19 Western road. Miss Gennison was the daughter of Frank A. Gennison, a chemist of Wellesley, who lives at No. 19 Cross road. Both girls were pretty and popular socially.

The young women, attired in bathing suits, with cloaks, left their homes shortly before four o'clock, and proceeded to the shores of the lake, which adjoins the Wellesley College buildings, and is the scene of the water fetes of the college girls.

Heard Girls Scream.

There were no bathers when they arrived at the lake, but both girls could swim, and waded fearlessly in. They were considered quite athletic in town and had been played on basketball teams and girls' baseball clubs. Miss Gennison had been captain of the Wellesley High basket ball team.

"Ted" Rollins is well known about Wellesley, and knew the girls by sight. He was fishing several hundred yards away and paid little attention to the bathers until he heard screams. Both girls were struggling in deep water and seemed to be in each other's arms.

It was evident that one had been taken with a cramp and the other was endeavoring to save her.

Rollins dropped his lines and ran as fast as he could around by the shore, but as he ran he saw the two heads sink beneath the surface. They did not appear again. Nevertheless, he plunged in, but when he reached the spot where they went down he could find nothing, although he dived several times.

Bodies Are Recovered.

It was not until nearly 5:30 o'clock that he recovered one of the bodies, that of Miss Palmer. She was, of course, dead. In the meantime news of the tragedy had spread, and policeman Emerson Northrup had joined the search, while many came to the shore, offering assistance. The policeman recovered Miss Gennison's body.

Chief of Police Kingsley, in an auto, hastened to notify the parents of the dead girls how they perished, and in an incredibly short time everybody in Wellesley knew of the tragedy. When the police ambulance bearing both bodies passed slowly through the streets many tears were shed.

The parents of both girls were overwhelmed by the suddenness and awfulness of the affair.

NAVAL THEFT INQUIRY.

Court at Norfolk to Discover Who Stole $6,000.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—It was announced at the navy department to-day that a court of inquiry will be called immediately to investigate the robbery of $6,000 from the safe of the recruiting ship Franklin at Norfolk, Va. It is reported that $15,000 was concealed in another part of the same safe, and is still intact.

The sentinel who is supposed to sleep in the office where the safe is kept was put in the brig on the charge of inattention to duty.

Black to Oppose Dalzell.

PITTSBURG, July 9.—Dr. Robert J. Black threatened to-day to run on an independent ticket against Congressman John Dalzell in the thirtieth district. He also said he would demand an audit of Dalzell's campaign account, which he could prove was irregular, and the money spent during the primaries was greater than Dalzell had sworn.

Taft Plays Golf With Judge Grant and Goes Autoing

BEVERLY, July 9.—President Taft spent the day quietly here to-day. In the forenoon he drove in his automobile over to the Myopia Country Club, where he played golf with Judge Robert Grant of Boston. In the afternoon he went for an auto ride along the North Shore, and was entertained with Mrs. Taft and Miss Helen by Walter D. Denegre at his Manchester villa.

A. Shuman of Boston, Congressman Samuel W. McCall and Edward E. Mosely, secretary of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, called at he executive offices to-day to see Secretary Charles D. Norton. They were disappointed, for the Secretary had left the offices.

Charlie Taft, with several of his boy friends, went over to the Misquerrai Golf Club links, where they had quite an exciting time. Charlie is evidently of the belief that one sure way of achieving greatness is by playing golf.

To-morrow President Taft will attend the First Parish Unitarian Church. The Rev. Benjamin F. Bulkley is to preach the sermon.

KAISER ON GOELET YACHT.

German Ruler Is Dinner Guest on Board the Nahma.

BERLIN, July 9.—The Kaiser has been followed by an American yacht all through the fiords of Norway. This morning when the Kaiser mounted the bridge of the royal yacht Hohenzollern at Odde, he saw the Stars and Stripes fluttering from the mizzen of Mrs. Robert Goelet's yacht Nahma, which he thought he had left behind at Kiel ten days ago. This afternoon the Kaiser boarded the American yacht and inspected this floating palace. He remained on the yacht for dinner.

STATE ARTILLERY IN CAMP.

Battery C of Lawrence Is First in the Field.

WEST BARNSTABLE, July 9. The First Battalion Field Artillery, M. V. M., went into camp to-day, Battery C of Lawrence being first on the field. The special train of nineteen cars, containing Battery C, pulled into the railroad yard at 9 a. m., four hours late. The men were weary from the long ride. But, with the heat blazing about them, they turned out and unloaded impedimenta and headed for the Buzzard's Bay camp ground.

Dr. Ward, Insurance Man, Dying.

LONDON, July 9.—The death of Dr. Leslie D. Ward, vice-president and one of the founders of the Prudential Insurance Company, is a question of only a few hours, according to physicians to-day. Mr. Ward was taken ill two days ago.

BOY KIDNAPPED BY FATHER RESTORED TO MOTHER

DIVORCE CASE CLIMAX

Little Son Taken to Brookline Home After Two Years in a Strange Land.

BRONZED, wrinkled, and looking ten years older than he did when he disappeared from here two years ago with his son, Robert, and weighing fifty pounds less than he did then, Joseph W. Swan was locked up last night in police headquarters. He is charged with being a fugitive from justice in having taken the child to Brazil from this state after his wife divorced him.

"Don't take papa away from me," wailed little Robert, now past six years old and the innocent cause of much of the contention between Joseph and Adria R. Swan.

Harshly had the man been led from the room until the mother of the child burst in the door and rushed to her boy. Pearlcally she hugged and kissed the wondering child.

Strange Meeting with Son.

"Don't you know me, Robert?" she cried.

"Is this you, Nana?" lisped the boy who, though he has learned to talk Portuguese fluently, forgets but few words of English. "Yes, yes," murmured the mother as she sobbed for very joy and strained the little fellow to her breast.

Police Inspectors Pierce and Lynch brought Swan and the child here from Brooklyn yesterday. Ever since the steamship Verdi landed at Brooklyn on July 4 Swan has been detained in Brooklyn police headquarters until yesterday, when the Boston inspectors brought him here.

The meeting between the mother and sturdy, tanned little boy whom she met early in the Summer of 1908 when her husband slipped away from here to New York and thence to Brazil, was affecting. A woman almost wild with joy, Adria Swan took her child with her to her present home in University road, Brookline.

Barring every appearance of a man breaking under the strains and troubles and griefs of life, Joseph W. Swan passed the night in a cell at police headquarters. He will go into court to-morrow morning for arraignment. His attorney is John F. McDonald, Mayor Fitzgerald's campaign manager.

Asked if she intended to prosecute her former husband for kidnapping their child, Mrs. Swan replied: "I don't know what I'll do just now."

Swan left here for South America, taking the boy with him, three or four months after his wife had been granted a divorce in 1908. He filed a paper at that time promising not to take the boy from his mother for more than twenty-four hours without her written consent.

When Mrs. Swan brought suit against her husband for divorce and alimony amounting to $25,000 she caused his property, at that time estimated to be worth well into the hundreds of thousands of dollars, to be attached. The divorce trial, because of the prominence of the parties, attracted intense interest in this part of the country.

It was finally mutually agreed between Mr. and Mrs. Swan that the petition should be granted, that she should receive $50 a month and the custody of the child, allowing her former husband to have Robert one day each month.

In August of 1908, Swan disappeared and with him vanished Robert. The mother was wild with grief and she rushed to police headquarters. Swan had fled from Dorchester with the boy. He was trailed to New York, thence to Brazil on the steamer Valasquez and he was arrested the moment he set step on terra soil at Rio Janeiro.

Police Inspectors Pierce and Lynch armed with extradition papers went there but the treaty between the United States and Brazil did not recognize kidnapping as an extraditable offence and their mission failed. From that time until now Swan and his boy had lived on a little farm in Villa San Lorenzo, Rio Grande do Soule, about 1,200 miles south of Rio Janeiro.

Had not Swan come North to visit his mother who is believed to be close in death's door he would have successfully foiled the police.

Brockton Blacksmiths Strike.

BROCKTON, July 9.—On Monday the blacksmiths of this city will strike for an increase in wages. They are getting $17.80 a week, but want $19.50.

Senator Lodge Opens Quarters For His Campaign

Goes to Barrister's Hall Where He Will Have the "Gon-Goos" For Next Door Neighbors.

Following a recital recently with Chairman Hatfield of the State Committee, United States senator Lodge walked out of the committee rooms in the Khasaki building in high dudgeon.

"You shall not go to my boss again," the Senator said to Chairman Hatfield, "until I have been reelected in January."

"We don't want to," said Hatfield, "we don't want Mr. Ames canvassing around the State telling Republicans that the 'machine' is against him, that you own the State Committee or any of that kind of rot. We respect senator—we—we love you Senator—but we cannot allow you to ruin the game, for while the game's good."

Whereupon he went away from there, but not too far away. Not so far away that it stiffened much to move back. Mr. Lodge is snugly ensconced in rooms 510 and 511 of Barristers' Hall, across from the Court House.

It may or it may not signify, but the Good Government Association is also in Barristers Hall. This is the closest Mr. Lodge has ever edged up to the "Gon-Goos." Others in the office building are Lieutenant-Governor Coolidge, Grafton Cushing, Judge Logan, Herbert Parker, George Holden Tinkham and Corbett, Jeffries and Johnson—William A. Jeffries, Carl H. Johnson and Joe Corbett.

SURPRISE FOR GEN. WOOD.

Staff Chief Charged with Doling Out Tainted Food to Troops.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Major General Leonard Wood, who is to assume the duties of chief of staff, U. S. A., sailed from England to-day, and among the first things he will see in Washington will be protests against his conduct of the summer maneuvres last summer in Massachusetts.

Col. John H. Foote, of the 14th New York regiment, in no official report says the men were kept on useless marches without proper food.

Surg. Col. Willard C. Fick of the 7th New York says:

"The rations and their issuance were far from satisfactory and seemed to have been arranged without consideration for the nature of the service. The fresh meat ration beef was poor in quality and the carcass light in weight. There were but few issues of fresh meat, and it was delivered frozen so hard and at such hours as to make it almost impossible to use it. Canned corned beef was issued, and at least one-third of the cans were tainted."

SOMERVILLE GIRL MISSING.

Miss Grace P. Howe Gone 19 Days, and Friends Fear Foul Play.

Miss Grace P. Howe has been missing from the home of her sister, Mrs. William J. Talbott, No. 297 Summer street, Somerville, for nineteen days and her friends fear she has met with foul play or has been spirited away.

Miss Howe is 23 years old, has dark hair, blue eyes, and is of light complexion. She had no men friends, and was in perfect health at the time she left her sister's home.

On June 20 the girl left Somerville with the expressed intention of visiting Mrs. Fred Gould of North Weymouth. This was the last seen of her.

MOB SPIRIT IN NEW YORK.

Two Saved From Injury by the Police Reserves.

NEW YORK, July 9.—The prevalence of the riot and mob spirit, which culminated on Friday in the lynching of a detective in Newark, O., and which has flared up in many sections of the country since the Jeffries-Johnson fight, was indicated in New York twice to-day. Thomas Brown, a negro, thirty-five, was rescued by the police from a possible lynching at the hands of infuriated citizens, for shooting Samuel Wade, a negro, thirty-three, after a quarrel caused by a quarrel between two boys. Later the police reserves were called to protect a number of men, who fell victims to the wrath of labor union enthusiasts.

Delaware on Long Trip.

NORFOLK, Va., July 9.—The battleship Delaware, the only American dreadnaught in commission, steamed out to sea this afternoon on her first long voyage. The big ship is en route to St. Thomas, Danish West Indies. The trip is more to test her machinery than anything else.

BROOKINS SMASHES RECORDS FOR HIGH AIR FLIGHT

CAPTURES $5,000 PRIZE

50,000 On Boardwalk See Daring Young Aviator Accomplish His Wonderful Feat.

ATLANTIC CITY, July 9.—Soaring two and one-sixth miles high above the waves of ocean, Walter Brookins, the twenty-two year old aviator, in his eight-cylinder Wright biplane, late this afternoon smashed all existing world's altitude flight records, and won the aero clubs $5,000 prize.

Gradually circling upward in great three-mile sweeps which carried him over the heart of Atlantic City, as well as the ocean, he reached his highest altitude of 6,100 feet in the phenomenal time of 56 minutes. He made his descent in seven minutes and at an altitude 4,200 feet shut off his motor and glided to earth like a bird.

When he landed he was obliged to fight his way through the crowds by physical exertion. The 150,000 people who witnessed the feat went wild with enthusiasm.

It was an ideal day for people who seek recreation at Summer resorts, but scarcely the kind of day hitherto considered suitable for record breaking aviation feats, as the wind blew with such force from the ocean that the banners on the piers stood out stiffly. It was known that Brookins intended to make an effort to win the $5,000 prize for the altitude record, but no one supposed he would set out to accomplish it in the face of such atmospheric conditions.

About 4 o'clock this afternoon Brookins notified the committee in charge of the meet that he would attempt the flight. While the signal flags were hurriedly hoisted on the piers the engineers who were to take the altitude with transits, hastily made their preparations. City Engineer J. W. Hackney who was stationed at the Steel Pier and Assistant City Engineers F. D. Mount and William A. Craif, took their places.

INVALID A SUICIDE.

Hyde Park Man Shoots Himself in Wife's Presence.

HYDE PARK, July 9.—After one shot missing, John H. Jones sent a second bullet crashing through his temple, at his home, No. 34 Neponset avenue, to-night. He was despondent, having suffered a stroke from locomotor ataxia. He secured a revolver in a bureau unknown to his wife. When she was in another part of the house he killed himself. Medical Examiner Charles Sturtevant pronounced the case one of suicide. Jones was fifty-five years old. Up to a year ago he traveled as commercial salesman.

RUSSIAN BALLET COMING.

Troop Engaged for the Metropolitan Company.

PARIS, July 9.—Gatti-Casazza of the Metropolitan Opera Company, to-day engaged a Russian ballet troop, including Nijinska and Mlle. Kasavina. Kasavina and several of the best dancers of the troop which played at the Opera House at Paris last Spring will perform at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York and its allied theatres under the direction of De Diaghelew during the seasons of 1911-12 and 1912-13.

ABRUZZI IS CONSTANT.

Still Pays His Court to Katherine Elkins.

LONDON, July 9.—Despite interference by royalty and others, the Duke of the Abruzzi is still paying his court to Miss Katherine Elkins.

Though he is not the ardent swain while on Italian soil, the Duke regularly motors from his station at Veness across the border to Roblech, where the Elkins family is staying.

WIN LITERARY PENSION.

EUGENE N. FOSS

Party Chiefs Declare For Representative From the Fourteenth District to Head Ticket.

CONGRESSMAN EUGENE NOBLE FOSS of the Fourteenth District wants to be Governor of Massachusetts. Democrats of real prominence in the party, whose one object is success at the polls, said last night that the ticket to be nominated by acclamation in September will be "Foss and Riley." The candidate for second place is Representative Thomas P. Riley of Malden for two terms the Democratic leader on Beacon Hill and one of the two or three orators of recent legislatures. Mr. Riley is a Boston attorney. He is the law partner of Daniel J. Kiley.

Congressman Foss is a genuine candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor. He has stopped being coy about it. He is in the hands of his friends. These friends include Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, Chairman Fred J. Macleod of the Democratic State Committee, Chairman John F. McDonald of the executive board of that committee, and Chairman Joseph A. Maynard of the Democratic City Committee.

These friends of Mr. Foss have been told to "go ahead with it." They are going ahead with it.

Mr. Foss has made but one reservation. He has said to his friends and political advisers that he wants the nomination "without a contest." They have assured him that there will be no contest. They affect to believe regardless of all that has been said to the contrary, that the name of former Senator James H. Vahey will not be presented to the convention. Senator Vahey says it will be.

PRELIMINARIES TURNED OVER TO MACHINE.

These positive statements of fact regarding the ambition of Mr. Foss to succeed Governor Draper on Beacon Hill ought to set at rest each of the forty-seven varieties of Foss statements that has lately appeared in print. Within ten days it was given out in two or three places as having come straight from Foss himself that the Cape Cod Congressman had said that he was "out of politics." Mr. Foss may have said that he is "out of politics for the Summer." He is. He has turned over the preliminaries to Macleod, McDonald, Fitzgerald, Maynard and practically all the members of the Democratic Committee.

The work of getting up a Foss convention is already well in hand. It is being conducted without vulgar display. One prominent member of the Democratic State Committee went so far last night as to say that the cities are are already bottled up against Vahey and that the former Senator, who came within 7,000 votes of Draper last November, will this year fail to name the delegation from Watertown. Mr. Vahey's home is in Watertown.

FOSS STATE CONVENTION IS BEING PICKED.

The extreme quiet with which the work of picking a Foss convention is going ahead is reminiscent of the Springfield convention in some of its aspects.

The men on the job say that Congressman Foss's vote against the labor unions in the last week of Congress will in no way affect the availability of Mr. Foss as a candidate for Governor of Massachusetts. Foss voted with characteristic courage against a bill exempting trades unions from the effects of the Sherman anti-trust law. His position was that this was class legislation; that there is no good reason why anybody, or any class, who might be affected by anti-trust laws, should be exempt from their provisions.

The trades unions hold that it was never contemplated that the Sherman act should reach or affect wage-earners banded together to better their conditions. Nobody thought of it, they held, until up came the case of the Danbury hatters. They seek, they say merely to take out of the Sherman act some odious things which were never intended to have gone into it.

Ask any of the gentlemen who are booming Foss how they expect to get over the probable opposition of the trades unionist

FACTORY FLAMES DO $8,000 DAMAGE IN SOUTH BOSTON

ENTIRE DISTRICT IN PERIL

Elevated Road Offices and Big Lumber Yard Saved by Heroic Work.

FIRE burned out the interior of the Hunt-Fuller Manufacturing Company in Dorchester avenue, near D street, South Boston, shortly before 10 o'clock last night. The loss was estimated at $8,000.

It is the belief of District Fire Chief Perkins that hot castings, made late in the day and set to cool at one end of the long building, set fire to the woodwork, which quickly climbed to the roof. The building is about fifty feet wide and 150 feet long.

So rapid was the progress of the flames that when Chief Perkins arrived sparks were flying from the roof and the big lumber yards of the Elston company nearby were in danger.

A second alarm was sounded and soon the lumber property and district offices of the Elevated Company were also in danger.

While much of the interior of the Hunt-Fuller building was filled with heavy machinery and sand pits, there were many wooden benches and wooden patterns which piled out by years of close proximity to the casting pits, burned like shavings.

The firemen found excellent opportunity to fight the flames from every side and within three-quarters of an hour the danger was past and the fire under control.

The building was the property of the Boston Elevated Company, being leased by the Hunt-Fuller Company. The building was insured, but it is not known what insurance is carried by the Hunt-Fuller Company.

BEAR HUNTS A HUNTER.

NASHVILLE, Ill., July 9.—The Rev. William Eaton, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, received word that his son, J. H. Duncan, met with a dangerous adventure while bear hunting in Mexico, where he is superintendent of a copper mine. While trailing two bears, one doubled on its track and came back in the rear of the hunter, who supposed the game was ahead until he felt the animal's paw on his back. The blow sent him rolling 200 feet down the mountain side, but he escaped with his life.

HONEYMOON PAIR EVICTED BY FIRE

Bride Starts a Disastrous Blaze Cooking Supper on an Oil Stove.

NEWBURYPORT, July 9.—Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Gibson of Providence, R. I., who are spending their honeymoon at Milton Cottage on Plum Island, had a narrow escape with their lives tonight when their home was destroyed by fire.

Mrs. Gibson was preparing supper on an oil stove, which set fire to a wooden shelf.

Husband and wife attempted to quench the flames, but the fire kept spreading. Seeing that the house was doomed the couple rushed to the kitchen door. Mr. Gibson lifted his wife in his arms and made a flying leap through the flames that were eating their way through the house, but all else was saved in. His hair and eye brows were singed and Mrs. Gibson suffered from the shock.

The house burned like tinder. Scores of cottages, headed by Captain Maddock with his fire fighting crew, organized a buried brigade and fought the flames. The fire had gained such headway that the cottage was burned to the ground, hundreds of dollars worth of wedding gifts and personal effects were lost.

CHARGE ATTEMPTED BREAK.

James Barr, twenty, of No. 14 Chippewa road, Lynn, and Edward D. Palmer, twenty-two, of No. 190 Baysette street, Lynn, were arrested by the Revere police late last night on a charge of attempting to enter the home of Mrs. Bertram S. Smalley, at No. 5 Revere avenue, Revere Beach. Mrs. Smalley reported to the police that two men had tried to enter the rear door last night. She heard a prowler on the piazza and pressed the Lynn pair and arrested them. False whiskers were found in their possession, the police say.

FOSS MAKES HOLES IN NEW TARIFF LAW

Wholesalers From the South Are Warned That Protection Has Reached Limit.

IN the first formal speech he has made in Boston since he left to go to Washington this spring, Congressman Foss last night told the Southern Shoe Wholesalers' Association at the Somerset that the whole fiscal policy of the nation is wrong, that we have "tried protection to the limit" and that we are practically where England was twenty years ago.

Hemphatically declared that, until the tariff is properly revised, uncertainty and unrest will continue to hamper business, men. He said that, if the other industries of the country had acted as the New England shoe and leather men did, last year, the tariff would have been revised properly, and Congressman Fitzgerald and the financial interests of Boston. He said that Boston needs more water communication with the South. He blamed the financial interests for this, declared, prefer questionable investments in other parts of the country to steamship development for their own city.

Foss's Tribute to Shoe Men.

Congressman Foss was the closing speaker of the evening session. He said, in part:

"I am glad to be here and pay tribute to the shoe men who took such an active interest in the revision of the tariff. I believe that if other industries had taken a like active interest, that the business uncertainty regarding the country today would have been obviated. I believe that the business uncertainty and unrest because the tariff was not honestly revised, and that the people were disappointed right you will find the same conditions to exist.

"If other industries had come forward as you did and forced the situation as they should, the tariff would have been settled right and we should not have the conditions which exist today.

"I found myself in a minority in the Republican party when I voted for free hides and was defeated last Fall I went over to the Democratic party and made a larger opportunities service.

Regarded as a Heretic.

"But I found I was regarded as a heretic even by some Democrats. I believe that the doctrine of free raw material is good Democratic doctrine, though one Southern senator has told me that it is not.

"I think the time has come for this country to change its fiscal policy. Everyone where England was seventy years ago when the reformed Corn Laws, and we must take the duty off raw materials, and we must have a scientific investigation into the industrial life of the nation to equalize the duties on foreign markets.

"After Mr. Fitzgerald had spoken about the harbor and shipping developments for Boston, the following officers were elected: President, W. Lee Brand of Roanoke, Va.; first vice-president, C. E. Bray of Richmond, Va.; secretary-treasurer, J. A. Fullmer of Richmond, Va.; second vice-president, H. W. Johnson of Atlanta, Ga.

ALBERT IS INDICTED.

Must Come to Trial in Assault Case.

Ephraim Albert was indicted for assault with intent to kill by the Suffolk Grand Jury yesterday. It is alleged that Albert made an assault with a pistol on Sarah E. Goldberg with intent to kill her. Miss Goldberg is engaged to Frank Small. The defendant is a cousin of Small and jealousy is given as the cause of the alleged assault.

There were quite a number of other bills found, one against Max Peretz, who is now under an appeal from a sentence of eighteen months as a "white slaver." Peretz was indicted for assault, battery and robbery on Dr. Antonio N. Vranhinos and Grace Hospital, and for an assault on Miss Margaret Gavin of No. 197 Silver street. Dr. Vranhinos testified that the young woman were walking in the Fenway when they were attacked and the former was robbed. He was found against Edward S. Willman, president of the Taco Bay Lumber Company, which has extensive plantations in Cuba. He is wealthy and has a beautiful estate at South Natick. Josephine Evans is named in the bill.

Andrew J. Fish of No. 15 Auburn street, was convicted of carrying a loaded revolver. He is charged to have killed Cox with a shot fired by him which the police charge was fired for his wife.

CHARITIES ARE ACTIVE.

Daily Excursions Being Run for Children of Tenement Districts.

Every agency of the Federated Jewish Charities of Boston is now employed in the shop, tenement work. Excursions for the sick and needy have started, weak children, mothers and working girls are being sent to the country, the hospitals and homes for convalescents are filled and while daily excursions are being given the children of the congested tenement districts.

Max Mitchell, superintendent of the Federated Jewish Charities, is in general charge of all this work. Excursions for the sick and needy have started, weak children, mothers and working girls are being sent to the country, the hospitals and homes for convalescents are filled and while daily excursions are being given the children of the congested tenement districts.

Max Mitchell, superintendent of the Federated Jewish Charities, is in general charge of all this work. Excursions for the sick and needy are being arranged by Miss Goldstein. This year all the different energies of the Summer workers are being combined through the efforts of the Federated Jewish Charities and none of the good work will be overlooked and duplication will be avoided.

APPOINTEES ANXIOUS.

Time Limit for City Appointments Is Near.

The Civil Service Commission has until midnight to-morrow to confirm the Mayor's appointment of Andrew A. Badaracco as principal assessor.

Mayor J. Fish, who was appointed on the same day as Badaracco, was confirmed by the commission Friday evening.

SAY M'CARTHY'S WAR ON GOVERNOR WILL COST HIS JOB

Three-Time Surveyor Is Slated to Go, Declares Republican Leaders.

NEXT MOVE IS UP TO LODGE

Senator May Let Matter Rest Until After Election; After Then, Watch Out.

JEREMIAH J. McCarthy, surveyor of the Port of Boston since 1899 at a salary of $5,000 a year, is on the eve of summary removal from office by President Taft "for the good of the service." Mr. McCarthy may be ousted with an extension until the political war is over in November, but he has to get his resignation.

This was the prediction made positively by Republican leaders last night by some of the most eminent of Massachusetts Republicans. In view, first, of the personal attack of Surveyor McCarthy on Governor Draper, and, second, in view of the surveyor's threat to do everything in his power to defeat the re-election of a Republican Governor, these eminent Republicans said that there is nothing for the President to do but remove Mr. McCarthy "for the good of the service."

The head of the anti-Draper faction spoke of "peradicous political activity," and suggested that "if matters happened to favor" the good of the service would be served.

May Send in Resignation.

There was one story in circulation yesterday to the effect that McCarthy may beat Big Lodge to it by handing in his resignation. This report went into such details as describing McCarthy as a successful Republican candidate for the Legislature from Democratic Charlestown. In such an event he could vote for United States Senator.

McCarthy is the prominent Republican worker who was named by the Democratic Mayor of Boston on April 22, 1907, as Tax Commissioner, at a salary equal to that he receives from the Federal Government, and kindly came in his present office a few days next Summer.

When the nomination was rejected by the State Civil Service Commission the Surveyor of the Port appealed to Governor Draper. He sent to the State House what was generally a petition for a pass he bearing. The petition was addressed to the Governor and Council.

Governor Draper declined to bring the petition before the Executive Council. He sent McCarthy a long letter.

Bitterly Assails Draper.

"In conclusion, I feel that I have been treated outrageously by Governor Draper in this matter, and it is about what I might expect from a man capable of being the himself the condemnation of his dying brother, General William F. Draper, a distinguished soldier and an honored member of Congress, who gave absolute orders to his family not to allow the Governor to be present at his funeral.

"The people who know General Draper in this locality do not believe that this action was taken by him without just cause. I have been a Republican all my life.

Mr. McCarthy persisted in his effort to get his case before the Governor's Council. He got it there on Thursday. The Council looked at it and decline do set.

It was signed statement sent immediately to the newspapers the Surveyor of the Port said this:

Out to Defeat Draper.

"There is nothing further for me to do than to ask a generous public to decide as to the action of the Civil Service Commission, Governor Draper, the Council, and your petitioner—as to who was right in the History of the Port of the Square deal, and the rights of a petitioner, which has hitherto been recognized as sacred under the Constitution of the Commonwealth.

"If they agree with me, they will do what I certainly will—use every influence in my power to help defeat the defeat of Governor Draper, should he again be a candidate for re-election."

CORSET CAUSES PANIC.

A corset of the straight front type created a panic among the dwellers in the North End about 10.30 o'clock last night. It took a solid hour on the part of the police to convince the crowd that no lives had been sacrificed.

It was the closing up time and the keeper of a little shop at No. 64 Prince street was getting ready when a man passed by, and, looking in, saw a woman behind the counter. Words were exchanged and the former was robbed. He ran around against Edward S. Willman, president of the Taco Bay Lumber Company, which has extensive plantations in Cuba. He is wealthy and has a beautiful estate at South Natick. Josephine Evans is named in the bill.

Andrew J. Fish of No. 15 Auburn street, was convicted of carrying a loaded revolver. He is charged to have killed Cox with a shot fired by him which the police charge was fired for his wife.

CHARITIES ARE ACTIVE.

Daily Excursions Being Run for Children of Tenement Districts.

Every agency of the Federated Jewish Charities of Boston is now employed in the shop, tenement work. Excursions for the sick and needy have started, weak children, mothers and working girls are being sent to the country, the hospitals and homes for convalescents are filled and while daily excursions are being given the children of the congested tenement districts.

Max Mitchell, superintendent of the Federated Jewish Charities, is in general charge of all this work. Excursions for the sick and needy are being arranged by Miss Goldstein. This year all the different energies of the Summer workers are being combined through the efforts of the Federated Jewish Charities and none of the good work will be overlooked and duplication will be avoided.

APPOINTEES ANXIOUS.

Time Limit for City Appointments Is Near.

The Civil Service Commission has until midnight to-morrow to confirm the Mayor's appointment of Andrew A. Badaracco as principal assessor.

Mayor J. Fish, who was appointed on the same day as Badaracco, was confirmed by the commission Friday evening.

The following appointments, besides Badaracco's, await action: Charles Brown, appointed Schoolhouse Commissioner June 24; Time Built, July 24; Patrick F. Donald, appointed Superintendent of Supplies on July 5; Time Built, August 4; Joseph P. Lomasney, appointed to be Health Commissioner July 5; Time Built, August 4.

MANY PROSTRATED AS THE HOT WAVE INCREASES

LITTLE HOPE FOR RELIEF

South Boston Giant, Mind Affected by the Heat, Puts Thousand to Flight.

AND the heat came back stronger than ever.

At 8.30 last night the gentle east wind, which made the city fairly comfortable during the afternoon and evening after the stifling experiences of the morning and day before, was pushed out of the way by a hot blast from the south and southwest, and Boston sizzled.

The sufferers by the excessive heat last night were many and legion. People were prostrated. They sought relief by going in bathing, and four cases were brought to the Carney Hospital yesterday by drowning, while there were many escapes.

In the evening there was a mad rush to the beaches. One hundred thousand people thronged the Revere Beach boulevard, or lay about on the sands during the afternoon and evening. The Metropolitan police and the State Bath House went to the relief of those in the water. It is estimated that 15,000 persons were in the water at one time in the ocean during the day and evening. The Bath House alone had its biggest crowd yesterday, for nearly 20,000 patronized the bath house during the day.

But those who suffered most were the poor in the congested sections of the West, North and South Ends.

Weather Was Suffocating.

And yet the thermometer was not unusually high. It did not touch 90 at any time during the day or night while the humidity was only 60 which is four degrees below normal.

But there was something in the air which made people wilt, a hot sultry, suffocating something that caused great suffering.

The Bromley went about flushing the streets with cool water, which delighted the people exceedingly. Little children in their scanty clothing stepped into the cool water and sloshed with pleasure at the approach of the Bromley.

Along towards midnight the mercury began to drop and a cool breeze which degree brought infinite relief.

In Howard street Brimmer Street Baptist Church was obliged to hold its Gospel meeting in the street instead of in the church because of the great heat.

The hot weather drove others to relief. Pale and continued warmer for Sunday and Monday, with a chance of thunder weather on Monday. There will be light to fresh westerly winds.

The heat prostrations reported yesterday were:

Mind Unbalanced.

"I have just whipped Jeffries and now I'm after Jack Johnson," remarked Judge Curran, six feet tall and thirty years old whose mind was temporarily unbalanced by the recent heat last night, when he ran through the business district of South Boston stripped to the waist. Curran fell from his home at No. 901 West Fourth street, South Boston.

Shouting at the top of his voice, Curran battled with telegraph poles, tree fences and even with walls. Some in fear for their share of opponents, and a small brass band throng pursued the fleeing man. Down Broadway he ran towards C street. Fully 1,000 men, women and children pursued Curran, but he was too fleet-footed for all the runners. As he approached the Broadway police station he ran into the arms of Patrolman McCormack.

"Don't you know I'm Judge of Reno," Curran said. "If I had I'd have cleaned up the whole thing and you'd never heard of Jack or Jeff."

2 BROTHERS DOWN WHILE ONE BATTLES TO RESCUE THE OTHER

PROVIDENCE, July 9.—Peter and John Sarin, two Austrians in the employ of the Dodier Marsh Company, were drowned and drowned in the river off the company docks about 6 o'clock this evening, while bathing to get relief from the excessive heat.

The two men, who are brothers, had just finished work, and both being excellent swimmers stripped and prepared for a dip. John dived into the water and was immediately followed by Peter. Both started bearing his cries for help plunged in after him, were drowning men in the water, caught his rescuer down with him and both were dead before help arrived. The police recovered the body of Peter, but are still dragging the river for the body of his brother.

Another victim almost terminated fatally when Rudolf Fiedler took a plunge in the pond of the Riverside Mills at Olneyville and found the water was over his head. A cramp, lost by quick work the volunteer life-saving corps pulled him out of the

Packers Deny High Price Responsibility

NEW YORK, July 9.—The Beef Trust is turning upon its accusers. It is laying at the doors of the hotel and restaurant managers of New York full responsibility for the high prices they charge for steaks, chops, roasts, etc. Representatives of the trust claim that at least two advances have been made by New York bonifaces since the Beef Trust last advance, and that they are simply cheating their customers.

Thomas H. Hicks, manager of the Metropolitan Hotel Supply Company, supports the charge of the packers.

"I don't know of any one's knowledge that the hotels and restaurants have raised their prices recently," he said today, "but I do know that there has been no advance made in prices to wholesalers and distributors."

Asquith Frightened; Changes Program

Irish and Labor Members Aid Liberals to Prevent Shelving of Fight in House of Lords Reforms.

LONDON, July 9.—Although no definite announcement has been made it is known on all sides to-day that Premier Asquith has failed to force the Liberal Party into an agreement with the Conservatives for the indefinite shelving of the reform program for which the Liberals have been working for so long.

The Premier's defeat is due to the Progressive Liberals, who realized if a bargain were definitely closed between the Premier and Arthur Balfour, leader of and leader of the Conservatives, it would be at least a year before the Liberals could get a chance to push their legislative campaign.

The Progressives had the support of the Irish and Labor members, and the combined opposition to the proposal that Asquith was frightened into dropping his scheme.

POLICEMAN SHOT IN DARK ATTIC DUEL

Cornered Robber Suspect Attempts to End Own Life After Shooting Officer.

EAST BRAINTREE, July 9.—A desperate revolver duel at close quarters took place in the attic of a house on Factory Hill this afternoon between Patrolman Anson T. Loring of the Braintree police, and John C. Leahy of Dorchester, who has been staying in East Braintree of late, under the name of "Tim" Sullivan.

After being taken to the Massachusetts General Hospital, where his wounds were dressed, Leahy was brought back here and put in the station house. The revolver which Leahy used was identified by Frederick R. Smith of No. 81 Hayward street as part of loot stolen from his home on June 28.

Further past three months John C. Leahy has been staying at the home of William Leahy of Factory Hill, his cousin. He was known to the town as "Tim" Sullivan.

Loring today spied John C. Leahy on West Howard street. As Loring was going down the street some boys told the officer he was in the Leahy home. Loring returned and Mrs. William Leahy said John C. Leahy was in the attic.

Loring hurried to the attic. The single room gave no sign of life. Loring noticed a hole in the ceiling, opening into a blind attic. Leahy was lying on the bed under the hole. Loring stood up on the bed, lighted a match and put his head up to the hole.

Then, according to Loring, John C. Leahy suddenly leaned over the edge of the hole and fired a pistol-shot at Loring, who was not two feet from him. The bullet grazed the skin of Loring's right breast. There was a report of a second shot, but Loring was unhurt. Loring struggled and Leahy tumbled through the hole to the floor. Leahy, according to his own statement, then shot himself.

When Leahy was brought back here and booked he said that his name was Leahy, 29 years old and lived at No. 33 Mallet street, Dorchester.

DYRENFORTH WIDOW TO CONTEST WILL

WASHINGTON, July 9.—There will be a contest over the will of Colonel Robert D. Dyrenforth, filed here, prescribing the conduct for the next sixteen years of his grandson and adopted son, Robert St. George Dyrenforth, sixteen years old, who is now in the care of his uncle, William H. Dyrenforth, in Chicago. Mrs. Dyrenforth, the widow, who had been legally separated from him since 1901, said today:

"That boy is not able to carry out the provisions of this freak will. He is too delicate, and my husband knew it. I shall demand my share. I can only excuse the peculiar provisions of the will on the theory that my husband was mentally unbalanced as the result of long illness."

Homer Kidder Seriously Ill.

Homer Kidder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Kidder, and an instructor at Harvard University, is critically ill at a private hospital. Mr. Kidder was summoned as an operation, and his failure to rally properly is causing his relatives great anxiety.

MEYER BACK, PROBES BATTLESHIP ARMOR

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Secretary Meyer returned today from his Summer home at Hamilton, Mass., to take up personally the report of the destructive armor on the dreadnaughts Utah and North Dakota.

It is said here that the Secretary, when he inspected the North Dakota, pointed out "blisters" on one or two places of armor.

The early discovery of the defects made it possible to have it inspected more thoroughly, with the result that only one piece of plate caused detection, and that was remedied after it had been attached to the ship's side.

MRS. NORTON UNDER KNIFE.

BEVERLY, July 9.—Mrs. Charles B. Norton, wife of the secretary to the President, was operated on today for appendicitis at Beverly Hospital by Dr. Samuel J. Mixter, of Boston. The operation is said to have been in every way successful and a speedy recovery is expected.

TANK STEAMER AND SCHOONER IN CRASH

NEWPORT, July 9.—The German tank steamship Hesperus and the schooner Hattie Godkin were in collision at 1 p. m., according to a wireless report from Sandwicket Lightship received by the naval torpedo station here this afternoon.

The lightship wired just the bare fact of a collision, and no details could be secured.

The Hesperus carries oil between New York and Bremen. She has a gross tonnage of 6,335 and is only two years old having been turned out at Newcastle-on-Tyne in 1908. She is commanded by Captain Dahlke. The Hattie Godkin is a small two-masted coasting schooner.

AIDS WHITE PLAGUE WAR.

LOWELL, July 9.—Frederick Fanning Ayer of New York city, sent a check for $5,000 to the trustees of the Lowell General Hospital to pay the expenses of the tuberculosis clinic. There are twenty-eight patients at the camp on the hospital grounds and more applications are on the waiting list. Mr. Ayer has made many gifts to the hospital and other Lowell institutions in previous years.

When Jack Johnson Trained on "Hot Dogs"

He "Stood Off" Deacon Dean and Gave Him a "Knock-out" 6 Years Ago.

ADRIAN, Mich., July 9.—Deacon Charles Dean of the colored Methodist church of this city, says that he received a "knock out" from Jack Johnson some six years back when the now colored champion visited the Fence City giving boxing exhibitions with a troupe of open-air entertainers. Johnson and the party were the principal attractions at the county fair being held at that time.

The reason why Deacon Dean acted as he did and why he was "counted out" at the end of the "canter" stalled him off for $32 of the $48 he won by betting on Johnson.

"I fully believe Jack will pay me," says the Adrian man. "But the bill will be pretty soon and I am going to tackle him for the money when he comes to Adrian with his barrels of gold."

SEINE THREATENS ANOTHER DISASTER

PARIS, July 9.—The Seine and its confluents are steadily rising today. All the large rivers have been forced to tie up owing to the height of the river, making it impossible for them to pass under the bridges.

There is general alarm but another disastrous flood as was the case in 1876. Already breaks have appeared in the banks of the Seine, through which the water is flowing. Auteuil, Grenelle and Passy are again threatened.

ITALY DEMANDS CHARLTON.

Formal Request for Extradition Sent to Washington.

ROME, July 9.—The formal demands of the Italian Government for the extradition of Peter Charlton has been forwarded by the Foreign Office to the Italian Embassy at Washington, charging the young American who murdered his wife in Italy and was captured a few days ago in Hoboken. The writ went forward to-day in accordance with documentary evidence that has been authenticated by the American Embassy in Rome.

THINKS U. S. WILL NEED MORE GOLD

LONDON, July 9.—The presumption here is that America must secure considerable gold this Autumn in view of the peculiar conditions existing in the cotton belt and at the West. The New York money market appears to be firmer for the moment, so that it is possible that we shall not ship them gold next week.

But shipments are regarded as inevitable later in the season, as conditions apparently demand it. The movement will be governed more by the ability of the United States to command the gold than by the power of Europe to supply it.

WORCESTER HEARING.

On Tuesday the Railroad Commission will hear several citizens of Worcester on their request for a re-opening of the hearing on the petition of the Worcester Merchant's Association that the Worcester Consolidated Street Railway Company be required to carry baggage and freight, and was refused a hearing ages ago in Hoboken. The writ went forward to-day in accordance with documentary evidence that has been authenticated by the American Embassy in Rome.

CRETE IS WARNED BY THE POWERS

CANEA, Crete, July 9.—The consuls of the four protecting powers are using no threats despite many conservative meetings of the Christian members of the national assembly, no agreement has been reached by the consuls in the admission of Mussulman members to that body, have notified the Cretan government that if the decision of the protecting governments is not executed by Monday, they will occupy the customs buildings.

GLIDDEN TAKES FLIGHT.

Massachusetts Makes Lowell Start in Favorable Weather.

LOWELL, July 9.—The balloon Massachusetts made an ascent at four o'clock this afternoon from a field on School street, near the gas works. The passengers were Charles J. Glidden of Boston, John J. Van Nydenburg of South Framingham and Edward H. Stront. Weather conditions were favorable. The Massachusetts sailed in an easterly direction to make a landing near Lawrence.

BIG AVIATION MEET FOR BOSTON IN SEPTEMBER

Greatest Aeronautsof the World Will Participate in Events on Soldier's Field.

OFFER $30,000 IN PRIZES

Mayor Fitzgerald Pledges Boston's Support to Enterprise to Cost $100,000.

SOLDIER'S FIELD will be the scene of one of the greatest international aviation meets the world has ever witnessed during the first week of September. Final arrangements were made for the meet yesterday through the cooperation of the Harvard Aeronautical Society, Mayor Fitzgerald and President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard.

Arrangements for the meet have been in progress for some time under the direction of the Aeronautical Society of Harvard. James V. Martin, manager of the society, has been in communication with the leading aviators of the country, most all of whom have decided to fly that week.

Captain Baldwin of Mineola, L. I.; Clifford B. Harmon of New York, Charles F. Willard of Los Angeles, Glenn Curtiss, Walter Wellman, Count De Lesseps and others will appear. The Blerlot, Antoinette, Curtiss and Wright machines will be exhibited. Brookins and Johnson will fly the Wright machines.

The sanction of the Aero Club of America has been secured and the club members will give exhibitions. An attempt is also being made to get at trial flight of the Wellman airship which will try to cross the Atlantic Ocean about that time.

Five Wright machines will be entered. One day will be set aside for altitude flying, one for speed contests and others for endurance tests. There will be about $30,000 in prizes. There will also be a special prize for a trip from the Stadium to above the dome of the State House and return.

President Lowell of Harvard wrote Mayor Fitzgerald a short time ago to see whether the city would join with the nautical society in staging the meet. In the letter the president stated that if the latter body would join with Soldier's Field could be had for the proposition.

The Mayor was quick to reply and stated that he would do all in his power to boom the meet. The executive committee of the Chamber of Commerce has already expressed its willingness to further the proposition.

The expense of the undertaking will be tremendous, and it is expected it will amount to more than $100,000. The railroads throughout the country have been communicated with and all declare that they will give cheaper rates to Boston during the week.

The Stadium, together with the adjoining fields which comprise the whole of Soldiers Field, has been selected because the general committee believes that it is the ideal place. For the long distance events a suitable course is offered for several miles over the river, both up and down. The miles of marshy flats on both sides of the river also provide safe landing places in cases of accident.

The committee estimates that there will be at least 50,000 persons attending the flights daily. The top arches of the Stadium accommodate 5,000 from which an unobstructed view can be obtained. From the other seats the spectators will have no difficulty in witnessing all the events.

There will also be other special events such as a regular military in the middle of the field, a band, alighting directly on a dropped handkerchief from an airship and many other attractive events.

The two biplanes of the type with which Curtiss won the International Cup last year will be constructed by the Hammondsport aviator. A number of others will be made during the coming week by the manufacturing headquarters, 164 Huntington avenue, which are in charge of William A. P. Wilmerding, assistant manager.

Manager Martin in speaking of the proposed meet yesterday said:

"I feel positive that the Scientific meet on Soldier's Field will be the greatest affair of the world has ever seen. It will be a boom for Boston and the International Aero League of America. The various committees are working day and night for the success of the event.

MISS GLADYS REYNOLDS.

LYNN GIRL WHO ALMOST BECAME MRS. A. C. HOOPER

'NEVER AGAIN' SAYS GIRL NEAR-ELOPER

Pretty Miss Reynolds of Lynn Happy That Father Shoved Cupid on Side-track.

GLADYS REYNOLDS, a pretty seventeen-year-old pupil of the Lynn High School, eloped with an eighteen-year-old schoolmate named Alexander C. Hooper on Friday, but Miss Reynolds's parents caught her before the marriage could take place. Now Miss Gladys is pleased that love's young dream is over.

"I will never elope any more," she said yesterday. "There isn't any fun in it. You worry from then until you get back, don't feel comfortable at all. "I won't go away from home any more—not for years, anyway. I guess I'm too young to get married."

That's the way the young lady felt about it yesterday. The day before she thought differently. She and Alexander Hooper decided that they could not live apart so they boarded a trolley car in Lynn where they had happened to find themselves and waited for the next car bound for Boston to them to Nashua, N. H., where marriages are performed while you wait.

Heartless Parents Get a Tip.

Unfortunately for the elopers, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Reynolds, Gladys' parents with whom she lives at No. 11 Parker avenue, Lynn, got a tip that the couple had started for Nashua and they took a train. The train beat the trolley car by two hours and when Alexander Hooper and the street car they found father and mother waiting for them.

The only satisfying feature of the whole affair was that Mr. Reynolds paid the fares on the steam cars back to Lynn.

Gladys was disappointed at not being be comforted on the way home but Alexander Hooper was disappointed in a different Spartan.

Miss Gladys awoke yesterday morning repentant and glad she was not on her honeymoon with an eighteen-year-old husband and little flats and kitchen stairs singing cheerfully and sat down to breakfast in an ungrateful frame of mind never run away. When a reporter called on her she expressed herself quite emphatically: "Never again. Mrs. Reynolds explained everything."

"Gladys left home in a huff on Wednesday night and didn't even wear a hat," said Mrs. Reynolds. "She went over to Salem and spent the night with friends there. Thursday she started to walk back home, and when she reached Lynnfield Center I learned that she met several girl friends, and they gave her a ride the rest of the way home.

"Gladys went back to Salem instead of coming home, and succeeded in arranging matters with Alexander Hooper, to whom she had been keeping company. I heard from Gladys yesterday that Mr. Hooper accompanied them to Nashua, so my husband and I took a train and arrived there shortly after 9 o'clock. We were pleased to see us, and I think they were rather glad to see us.

NOISY CHANTECLER STARTS A LAW SUIT

Templeton Inn Guests Can't Sleep on Account of a Barnyard Concert.

"Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," "red blood in his veins" and other uplifting sentiments are involved in a boyard injunction from Templeton.

The plaintiff is the Village Improvement Society of Templeton, which owns the Templeton Inn. It alleges that the fun there has kept it awake.

The respondent is Miss Julia E. French, who keeps hens and roosters on premises adjoining the inn.

Miss French says, among things that "Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness means as much to her as to anybody."

What Mr. Blodgett Says.

On the other hand, Percival Blodgett, president of the society, declares that the poultry is a nuisance. The society asks Miss French be enjoined from keeping crowing cocks and cackling hens.

"I do not care to spend my money enough to infringe the injunction," said Mr. Blodgett today, "and I am willing to stand a great deal. I have offered more than her property was worth and I am willing to give her twice as much as it is worth in the betterment of my fair-minded real estate dealer or business man in Templeton.

"The poultry kept by Miss French is a nuisance. Last year they were considerable of a nuisance. This year they are much worse. So obnoxious are their antics in the early morning hours that the guests who occupy the rooms in the annex of the inn near the hen house. Such crowing and cackling would awaken a dead man and that's going some."

A Most Peculiar "Idiom."

"The guests at the inn are confined in a small house and every morning at one o'clock the roosters start crowing and the hens cackle in such a manner as to make a most peculiar idiom of the poultry is kept up till sunset. Then it starts again with the red rooster who could keep quiet under such circumstances. Miss French says nobody can sleep. I have heard of the action of the Improvement Society. Here is how she expressed herself:

"If I have kept hens for twenty years, which is ten years before the inn was built, I propose to be left in the future, but no improvement society can swerve me in my desire to live, to be free, and to pursue my 'Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness means as much to me as to anybody else.' That's how I feel about the situation."

HARBOR BOOSTERS GUESTS ON A TOUR

The Chamber of Commerce will have as its guests on a tour of inspection of the harbor front next Tuesday many notable persons, chief among them being Governor Draper, the members of the Harbor and Land Commission, Lieut. T. T. Hunter Harwood, representing the United States army corps, Congressman John A. Keliher, and other persons interested in the improvement and development of the Boston water front and harbor facilities.

All the matters pertaining to commerce with the harbor front question and such has done much towards its development For instance, Governor Draper has signed three harbor improvement bills, of which two had their origin with the Chamber of Commerce. The Harbor and Land Commission, which is composed of George E. Smith, Herman E. Harding and Samuel M. Mansfield, has charge of the expenditure of $7,000,000 appropriated by the last legislature for the improvement of the East Boston water front, and $1,000,000 for the new Commonwealth docks at South Boston. This same commission also has charge of the new harbor line now being bounded by the Chamber of Commerce.

Lieutenant Harwoods interest in Boston lies in the fact that he is in charge of the engineering for the $25,000,000 drydock which will when completed, make Boston accessible to the largest type of the merchant marine. Congressman Keliher has taken a deep interest in the new Immigration station in East Boston.

Others who will be present are Mayor Fitzgerald, Congressman Joseph O'Connell, Rear Admiral Bowles of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., Major Sohier, and Capt. Edward Pease, harbor master. A number of invitations have been issued to commercial interests along the water fronts but have not been accepted.

Following the tour, there will be a banquet at Faneuil Hall, at which Governor Draper will be one of the principal speakers.

Corn Surely Grew Some.

BLOOMSBURG, Pa., July 9.—Thomas Keefer, of Benton township, Columbia county, is authority for the statement that he has a stalk of corn in his field that grew four inches in forty-eight hours. He measured the stalk on Wednesday and again on Friday, and stands by the statement.

SOMERVILLE LAUGHS AT MR. LONGWORTH

INSIDE STORY OF LOMASNEY'S JOB

If you want to start something put in your spare time and a Democratic politician if Nick Longworth converted him to the Payne Tariff.

Longworth says he did. He told an audience in Cincinnati that he and Senator Lodge went to Somerville and talked to an audience of 1,200 people in the Auditorium and overflow of 3,500 people about the Payne tariff. When Longworth got through speaking, so he says, everybody was converted and Somerville now thinks the tariff is a corker.

Nearly all lots of prominent Democrats in Somerville, but most of them are not in office because the latter belong to the most votes. But instead of being cast down by the wholesale Longworth conversion they are jubilant.

"Longworth didn't convert anybody that I know of," said Mayor Edward W. Wyllie, Jr. E. Mongan, who is some Democrat. "That Congressman has got his head on the audience preferred to remain outside the hall and Longworth has it. Somerville is by pitching into the lumber people. This people like to see big men in office like the Mayor of Somerville, who was sitting on the platform in a fancy rocking chair. They waved their arms and sweated, but they didn't make any impression.

"The fact is that the people of Somerville are asking what the Republican party is afraid of when they take Senator Lodge and Nick Longworth in the middle of their campaign vacation and send them out on the road to talk tariff. It looks as though they were scared.

"But you aren't converted to the tariff, now?"

"Not so that you can notice it."

Dr. Mongan's views are those of the other Somerville Democrats who were seen. John J. McCarthy, Michael W. Wylie, Daniel S. Bradley, Charles P. Lincoln, ex-Representative Edwin Dingley and Alderman Hall deny that Longworth converted anybody.

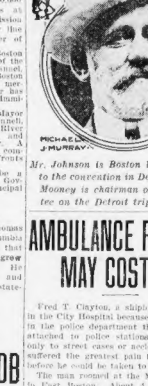
"But you aren't converted to the tariff, now?"

"Not so that you can notice it."

Dr. Mongan's views are those of the other Somerville Democrats who were seen. John J. McCarthy, Michael W. Wylie, Daniel S. Bradley, Charles P. Lincoln, ex-Representative Edwin Dingley and Alderman Hall deny that Longworth converted anybody.

PROMINENT ELKS IN BOSTON DELEGATION OFF TO CONVENTION

GEORGE H. JOHNSON, P.E.R.



MICHAEL J. MURRAY

Mr. Johnson is Boston lodge delegate to the convention in Detroit, and Mr. Mooney is chairman of the committee on the Detroit trip.

ELK DELEGATES OFF TO DETROIT SESSION

A DELEGATION of 225 members of Boston Lodge of Elks, accompanied by about fifty ladies, left South Station yesterday afternoon at 4:30 on a special train for Detroit to attend the forty-sixth annual convention of the national order on Monday.

Before leaving their Somerset street home, the Elks held a reception, which was attended by almost a thousand members and friends of the order. At the reception it was agreed that "Ned" Hayden was the banjoneast man; "Joe" Ewing, decked out in a linen suit, the coolest man; Oscar Shaffer, tiler of the lodge, the busiest man distributing baggage checks, while Michael J. Murray, chairman of the Detroit convention committee of the Boston Lodge, and his associates, were all right as managers of the trip to Detroit.

Reviewed by Mayor.

The Elks marched from their clubhouse to the South station through the principal streets, headed by a band and Exalted Ruler Thomas B. Dowd and Michael J. Murray, being reviewed in front of the City Hall by Mayor Fitzgerald.

The party takes lunch today at Niagara Falls, and then proceeds to Detroit, leaving there on Thursday and returning to Boston by way of Albany, the special taking a trip across Lake Erie and through the St. Lawrence, arriving in Boston next week from to-morrow.

The delegation will make a strong bid for the choice of Boston for the conventlon city next year.

Big Day for Delegates.

Prominent among those taking the trip were: Ex-Mayor Tracey of Taunton, W. E. Beggs of Woburn, Stephen Chamberlain, Dr. Richard Cabot, Arthur J. Bennett, F. L. Goff of Pawtucket, Edward Gary of Hornblower & Weeks; Daniel J. Kiley, secretary of the Boston Lodge; James B. Lyons, Dr. John B. Leonard of Haverhill, O. A. Meade of Waterville, Me.; John and Martin Sullivan, John H. Connor, J. P. Carroll, M. F. Carney, Henry F. Corcoran, Joseph Driscoll, E. C. Good, Oscar Shaffer, Joseph Ewing, Thomas Fitzgerald, E. Johnson, Michael J. Murray and Committeemen Nolan, Hayden and Rice.

AMBULANCE RULES MAY COST A LIFE

Fred T. Clayton, a shipbuilder, is dying in the City Hospital because there is a rule in the police department that ambulances attached to police stations shall respond only to street cases of accidents. Clayton suffered the greatest pain for eight hours before he could be taken to the hospital.

The man rowed at the Maverick House in East Boston. About 4 o'clock Friday morning he was seized with violent cramps. An appeal was made to the East Boston police station in East Boston. The ambulance at Station 7, where there is an ambulance for emergency cases, it was said the wagon could not go out on the case.

Before the man could be taken from his home it was necessary for an ambulance to travel all the way from Boston City Hospital. When taken back to the hospital his condition was so serious he was at once placed on the dangerous list.

Dr. William H. Grainger, ex-member of the Boston School Board, was called to treat Clayton after he was stricken with cholera morbus.

"There is no question that the delay experienced in trying to get an ambulance hurt Clayton's chances," said Dr. Grainger last night. "Had we taken Clayton and placed him on the sidewalk the police would have sent the ambulance. The man was in danger of dying any moment in the room by himself.

"I do not think the police are to be blamed. That rule should be changed. The ambulance should be permitted to respond to other than police cases such as emergencies like this one. It should be left to the discretion of those in charge of the station to obey the orders of a physician in emergencies."

SALVAGE CAUSES DISPUTE.

Award of $48,000 Pleases Boston, but Not New York.

Boston underwriters are well satisfied with the award of $48,000 to the owners, officers and crew of the Norwegian steamship Erika for the rescue on February 8 last towed the crippled steamer Varzin into the harbor in the teeth of a tremendous gale. New York underwriters, on the other hand, have signified their intention of resisting the award on the ground that it is exorbitant. The cargo of the Varzin was valued at $1,000,000. The steamer was on her way to this port from Australia and the Erika left her when 400 miles from Boston. The Erika was bound from New York to Lisbon.

NEW HEALTH SYSTEM.

Edward F. McSweeney Proposes an Innovation for Boston.

The establishment in Boston of the "Elberfeld" system of medical inspection to prevent disease is recommended by Edward F. McSweeney, chairman of the Consumptives' Hospital trustees, in a letter to Dr. Richard Cabot of 1001 Beacon street.

The "Elberfeld" system was devised by Daniel Von der Heydt, a wealthy banker of Elberfeld, Germany. As practiced in Elberfeld, it provides for a division of a city into sections, each of which is given charge of a board of health and charitable disbursements by an almoner. A group of sections are in turn governed by a supervisor, and the several districts are in turn governed by a central committee of nine.

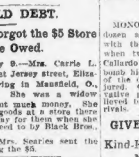
"I BELIEVE PE-RU-NA SAVED MY LIFE."



Mrs. Charles Anspaugh

Mrs. Charles Anspaugh, of Cromwell, Ind., says:

"Peruna has been a godsend to me. I can feel safe in saying that it saved my life, as I was all run down and was just miserable when I commenced taking your Peruna, but am on the road to recovery now. I cannot thank you too much."

GIVE A COW TO TRIPLETS.

Kind-Hearted Villagers Hire a Nurse for Youngsters.

MILROY, Ind., July 9.—The first triplets born in Rush County in twelve years have arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Campbell. The family is poor, and in stringent circumstances, but the men of the town have "taken up" a collection with which they have bought a cow and hired a nurse to care for the triplets.

The women gave a shower, when enough wearing apparel was donated to last the three boys the remainder of their baby time.

FAVORS SUNDAY BASEBALL.

Fr. O'Neill of Los Angeles Sees Good in Western Sport.

The Rev. James O'Neil, pastor to a Catholic parish in Los Angeles, Cal., who has been visiting friends in Boston, sailed on the Yale for New York last evening, leaving his journey home.

The California priest will be accompanied on his trip across the continent by his younger brother, Charles, better known as "Chick" O'Neill, a former pitcher with the Boston College baseball team.

Fr. O'Neill is an enthusiastic supporter of the national game, and what is more, he believes in Sunday baseball and does not hesitate to say so.

"Sunday ball is played in Los Angeles," said Fr. O'Neil, "and it keeps the young men out of saloons. There is nothing better for them than an innocent game in the afternoon, during the hot weather, and baseball is conducted in California without the slightest disorder. Boston would be better off for Sunday baseball now."

GRADUATES FOR BOMB OUTRAGE.

New Arrests Made for Killing at Spanish Dinner.

MONOVAR, Spain, July 9.—More than a dozen arrests were made in connection with the bomb outrage of last evening when three of the dinner guests of Don Callardo were killed by the explosion of a bomb hidden in the dining room. Another dozen persons including the host were injured. Callardo is a banker and a conservative politician, and the attack is believed to have been the work of political foes.

BRIDE STAKE IN GAME.

Rivals Play Cards, and Loser Is Hit Hard.

SAN BERNARDINO, July 9.—A strange contest for the hand of Dora Reed, a comely girl of Needles, was waged when Frank Hamilton and Dan Johnson, rivals, agreed to leave the decision to a game of cards. Bitter threats prophied to be forgotten and the affair end with the decision of the game, until Hamilton struck Johnson cheating. The result was a fight and the wounding of Johnson, a bullet from a gun fired into his hip by Hamilton, who fled and was a fugitive for several days. He was finally brought to the county jail. Needles and will be held to answer to the charge of murder. In addition to Hamilton's ill luck, the girl is said to be nursing the wounded Johnson back to health.

HELD FOR BOMB OUTRAGE.

Dinner Guests Killed by Explosion of Infernal Machine.

MADRID, July 9.—Three persons were killed and a dozen injured by the explosion of a bomb hidden in the dining room of Don Callardo, a banker, at a dinner given in honor of Senor Joseph P. Lomasney came to Somerville and a Democratic politician if Nick Longworth converted him to the Payne Tariff.

Longworth says he did. He told an audience in Cincinnati that he and Senator Lodge went to Somerville and talked to an audience of 1,200 people in the Auditorium and overflow of 3,500 people about the Payne tariff. When Longworth got through speaking, so he says, everybody was converted and Somerville now thinks the tariff is a corker.

Nearly all lots of prominent Democrats in Somerville, but most of them are not in office because the latter belong to the most votes. But instead of being cast down by the wholesale Longworth conversion they are jubilant.

"Longworth didn't convert anybody that I know of," said Mayor Edward W. Wyllie, Jr. E. Mongan, who is some Democrat. "That Congressman has got his head on the audience preferred to remain outside the hall and Longworth has it. Somerville is by pitching into the lumber people. This people like to see big men in office like the Mayor of Somerville, who was sitting on the platform in a fancy rocking chair. They waved their arms and sweated, but they didn't make any impression.

"The fact is that the people of Somerville are asking what the Republican party is afraid of when they take Senator Lodge and Nick Longworth in the middle of their campaign vacation and send them out on the road to talk tariff. It looks as though they were scared.

"But you aren't converted to the tariff, now?"

"Not so that you can notice it."

Dr. Mongan's views are those of the other Somerville Democrats who were seen. John J. McCarthy, Michael W. Wylie, Daniel S. Bradley, Charles P. Lincoln, ex-Representative Edwin Dingley and Alderman Hall deny that Longworth converted anybody.

SUES PASTOR FOR PRAYER.

Illinoisan Says Pastor "Report" Was Bad.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 9.—Because the Rev. R. B. Fisher of the Neoga Presbyterian Church refused to give the Lord a favorable report concerning the character of Jacob Stroh, he has been made defendant in a $5,000 damage suit brought by the latter.

Fisher and Stroh had differences growing out of the merger of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church with the Presbyterian Church. The other day Fisher conducted funeral at which Mr. Fisher officiated, they met to effect a reconciliation.

The opening prayer was by Fisher, in which he asked the Lord, with emphasis, to give the minister more grace. Then Fisher prayed, invoking the assistance of the Lord to convert Jacob Stroh to a better man, to cause him to pay his debts, and to have him repent backsliding. Then he related numerous faults of Stroh's and asked Divine interference to rectify them.

HOUSE BUILT FOR WIDOW.

Woodmen of World in One Day Put Up Dwelling.

TACOMA, Wash., July 9.—Woodmen of the World celebrated Memorial Day by building a house for Mrs. Frank Fish and her two little children at Buston, near the Tacoma smelter. Her husband was killed by the cars last Fall and the Woodmen decided to build her a house where she can live and carry on a little store for a livlihood.

Seventy-five men gathered at sunrise and by noon were working on the second floor. The house was finished in a day.

A Woodman from Denver happening in town heard of the good deed and showed up in his shirt sleeves to help the good work. The building cost $1,800.

WIND TOSSES HER IN AIR.

Rancher's Wife Lifted From Bed and Carried 25 Feet.

FORT MORGAN, Col., July 9.—Lifted from the bed in which she was sleeping by a cyclone which demolished the house, Mrs. W. L. Randolph, the wife of a prominent living near here, was carried twenty-five feet through the air and deposited in a wagon full of hay on a field behind the house. Beyond a few minor bruises and the nervous shock resulting from her experience the women apparently has suffered no injuries. Two small children who were in the bed with Mrs. Randolph were unharmed.

PAYS OLD DEBT.

Woman Never Forgot the $5 Store Bill She Owed.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Mrs. Carrie L. Searles of No. 72 East Jersey street, Elizabeth, N. J., was living in Mansfield, O., forty-six years ago. She was a widow with one son, without much money. She bought $5 worth of goods at a store there and said she would pay for them when she could. This was agreed to by Black Bros., the proprietors.

A few days ago Mrs. Searles sent the firm a letter, including the $5.

RECOVERED HIS SPEECH.

While Dying from Poisoning Caused by Dog Bite.

HARTSHORNE, Okla., July 9.—Frank Thompson, aged forty-one, who had been deaf and dumb since he was seven years old, recovered his speech and hearing while dying from blood poison, caused by a dog bite. When a large abscess that formed over his head was opened he began to talk, and told his mother he would die in an hour, which prediction proved correct.

Hammerstein Returning.

LIVERPOOL, July 9.—Oscar Hammerstein, the impresario, left this port today on board the Mauretania for his home in New York.

Stone & Webster Men Guests.

PLYMOUTH, July 9.—About four hundred of the members of the office force of Stone & Webster, of Boston, were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Stone at their country estate at Rocky Point, to-day.

POLICE SEEK GIRL FOR A BUNKO GAME

The police were last night asked to be on the lookout for a young woman who bounced twelve-year-old Mary Madden of No. 9 Tremont street, Charlestown, out of $6. The woman is described as being about eighteen years old, medium height and completion, wearing a light yellow dress and no hat.

The little Madden girl came out of a grocery store in Bunker Hill street where she was making purchases. She had $6. The woman asked her to go to No. 23 Prescott street, nearby, and collect some money. She took Mary's $6 for security and vanished.

Mrs. Thompson Drops Dead.

BRAINTREE, July 9.—Mrs. Alice Thompson, fifty-two years old, died suddenly this afternoon at her home on Pond street of apoplexy. Mrs. Thompson attempted to sit on a chair when she dropped to the floor, expiring a few minutes later. Mrs. Thompson was well known in this town and was a prominent member of the South Congregational Church. She is survived by a husband.

Kermit Roosevelt, Maybe Love-Lorn, Exits to Europe

Now the Question Is: Does He Go to Brush Up for Harvard or to Woo a Vanderbilt Heiress?

NEW YORK, July 9.—Though he has just returned from a fifteen months' trip abroad with his father, the ex-president, Kermit Roosevelt sailed to-day for Paris on the Hamburg-American liner America. There is a strong hint that his visit will be made more extended by the fact that Miss Margaret Rutherfurd is to spend the Summer in Paris.

The purpose of his trip, it is stated, is to continue his studies, interrupted by his trip to Africa. It is assumed that Kermit will return to America in time to resume his course at Harvard, where he has been a student only a year when he went abroad. But this seems not to have been decided definitely.

The former president would not discuss Kermit's trip to Africa. Nor even his friends, who live near Sagamore Hill, could get a response from the Colonel. Reports from Paris during Colonel Roosevelt's recent visit there spoke of Kermit's devotion to the beautiful Margaret Rutherfurd. They were much in each others' company, and it was hinted that a bond greater than friendship existed between them.

HELEN GOULD NAMED NIECES' GUARDIAN

NEW YORK, July 9.—At a conference of the Gould family, when it was known that Frank J. Gould would wed Edith Kelly, the actress and that Mrs. Gould would marry Ralph Hill Thomas, it was decided that Miss Helen Miller Gould should have full charge of the two daughters of the couple, Helen and Margaret.

The children of this unfortunate union is announced will not only be reared by Miss Helen Gould, but they will receive the greater part of her great fortune. They are at present at her country home in Tarrytown.

ENOCH H. HOWE DEAD.

WORCESTER, July 9.—Enoch H. Towne, for thirty-nine years City Clerk of Worcester up to 1907, who is retired because of failing health, is dead, following a stroke of paralysis suffered last week. Mr. Towne was born in Easton April 14, 1837.

He was City Clerk continuously until September 16, 1907. In every year but one of his thirty-nine years service he was elected by a unanimous vote. Democrats joining with Republicans in casting ballots for him.

BOY DYING FROM ACCIDENTAL SHOT

PLYMOUTH, July 9.—What may prove to be a fatal accident happened this afternoon, when Allen Bagnell, eighteen, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Allen Bagnell, was shot in the abdomen. Bagnell, with two friends, Ashley Cooper and a boy named Dyer, were in the fields near the home of the latter, and Cooper attempted to regress a revolver from a holster which was hung on his side.

He placed a finger on the trigger, not knowing the gun was loaded, and it went off, the ball entering the abdomen of Bagnell. He was removed to the Jordan Hospital, where the Misses of Boston was summoned. The bullet was finally removed, and hopes for his recovery are high.

Robberies at York Harbor.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., July 9.—While the residents of the Summer homes of Mrs. Frank Gross of Boston and E. B. Childs of New York, at York Harbor, were in bathing to-day, thieves made wholesale raids carrying off jewelry, silver and other goods to the value of over $500.

WALTHAM-MARLBORO ROAD IS APPROVED

A high-speed electric railroad between Waltham and Marlboro and passing through the towns of Framingham, Wayland and Sudbury, is needed by the public, according to the State Board of Railroad Commissioners, who gave a certificate yesterday. The question has been before the State Commissioners nearly four years. Three petitions for such a railroad were filed with the board. The first two were dismissed and that of February 1, 1909, approved.

MISS ANHEUSER SUES.

Asks $1,000 Damages for Attachment on Her Gowns.

CHICAGO, July 9.—Miss Nellie Anheuser of St. Louis has filed a suit for $1,000 damages against Dr. Robert Goodenich. This action is the result of the discomfort and embarrassment which the says she suffered when the bailiff of the municipal court attached her opera robes and evening gowns at the Congress Hotel last April in a suit brought by the dentist.

Four-Year-Old Girl Run Down by Trolley

Her Skull Fractured As She Is Crossing Street Holding on to Brother's Hand

Four-year-old Nora Casey, daughter of James Casey of No. 7 Dunn court, Dorchester, was knocked down by the fender of an inward-bound Dorchester avenue car early last night, when the child, holding on to the hand of her eight-year-old brother, Joseph, was crossing in the direction of No. 1,149 Dorchester avenue.

The child's skull was fractured. She was attended by Dr. E. J. Beerstrom of No. 26 Savin Hill avenue, Dorchester, who ordered her removed to City Hospital. The car was in charge of Motorman Thomas Malone and Conductor Stephen Welch.

Charity Whist Parties.

Each Monday afternoon and Friday night during the Summer and Fall charity whist parties are to be held in the convent building at 556 Quincy street, Dorchester, in aid of the Free Home for Consumptives. It is hoped by this means to materially aid the work of this institution, which is in need of contributions.

AUTO IS SMASHED IN TROLLEY CRASH

PLYMOUTH, July 9.—Alton D. Edes, superintendent of the Plymouth Fire Alarm System, had a narrow escape from death this afternoon. He was just coming from his cottage in his auto and failed to see an electric car that was coming along at that time.

Before the car could stop the machine struck the electric car and was hurled against a post and demolished. Mr. Edes being hurled in the ruins. He was assisted from the ruins and luckily escaped with but a few bruises, but his car was a total loss.

Answered Lincoln's First Call.

Benjamin F. Barnard of Wakefield, the first man to report at the armory of that town in response to the first call of President Lincoln for troops, will celebrate the eighty-seventh anniversary of his birth to-day. Mr. Barnard and Edward Henry Walton of the same town are the only surviving members of the "Richardson Light Guard."

MRS. RICKER HANDS IN PAPERS FOR GOVERNOR

Question of Her Eligibility Is Put Up to the Attorney-General.

CONCORD, N. H., July 9.—Mrs. Maria M. Ricker today and Henry Robinson, her attorney, Mayor of Concord, the with Secretary of State Persons a formal declaration that she is a Republican candidate for Governor. She declared some time ago that she was by the field and now she has put her word.

Since announcing her candidacy, Mrs. Ricker has received ten offers of marriage and a great many letters of encouragement, so she writes from her cottage at San Jose, Cal., to Colonel True L. Norris, editor of the Portsmouth Times. Besides the letters have been received by her from men all over the country, urging her to fight the Republican ring in New Hampshire.

Because of her sex the Secretary of State refused to accept the declaration, but Mr. Robinson left the documents with him. They will be referred to Attorney-General Eastman for an opinion on the law points involved. If his decision that a woman cannot legally be a candidate Mrs. Ricker will institute mandamus proceedings to have her name put upon the ballot. The direct nomination law will go into effect in New Hampshire yesterday. This is the only State east of Michigan which will nominate by direct primaries. Candidates this year in primaries.

Several years ago Mrs. Ricker tried to run for Congress against Cyrus A. Sulloway. For thirty years she has paid a poll tax, and she has gone to the polls to vote, and always had paid it without protest. But this she pays her taxes under protest. She says that without representation there should be no taxation, and if women are taxed they have a right to vote.

BOMBS WRECK NEW RAILROAD BRIDGE

NEW YORK, July 9.—Jersey City, Secaucus, Staten Island and Lower Manhattan were shaken by two dynamite explosions early today. Bombs had been exploded under the Lehigh Valley Railroad Bridge, which is being constructed on the New York bay front at Bidwell avenue, Jersey City.

Steel girders weighing tons were destroyed. Tremendous columns were hurled into the air. Houses a mile away were shaken, windows smashed and residents fright-ened into a state of panic. Houses near the scene of the explosions seemed to totter on their foundations. Hundreds fled into the street.

Captain Nugent and the reserves of the Lincoln avenue police station had a narrow escape from death in the second explosion which occurred forty minutes after the first. They were screening the surrounding territory for the dynamiters when the second explosion, which was more terrific than the first, occurred. A piece of steel from one of the girders passed by Capt Nugent and crashed through the side of a steel freight car.

No clue to the dynamiters has been obtained.

HORSE WRECKS STEAMER.

Frightened Animal Falls Into Ship's Engine Room.

ASTORIA, Ore., July 9.—In a battle with a frightened horse shortly after leaving Astoria for Portland, Capt. Jerry Haslam, Chief Engineer Shatto and the crew of the steamer General George Washington received a crushing defeat, the principal humiliation being meted out to the animal fell into the engine room, and with vigor and kicks put the machinery out of commission. The General Washington had to be towed back to Astoria by the steamer B. Miller.

TURKEY SNAPS HER TEETH AT GREECE

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 9.—Taxeir are thousand Turkish troops are today on some towns Edessa, on the Turkish-Grecian frontier to protect Turkish interests from the hands of Greek raiders. The feeling between the two countries is so intense that it is predicted that hostilities, of which the present disturbances are believed to be the forerunner, will break out before the end of the Summer.

99. SPEAKS IN PUBLIC.

Oldest Soldier in Maine Addresses Veterans.

BANGOR, July 9.—It is seldom that a man nineteen years old can address a meeting of 100 or more soldiers, but Benjamin Priest of Canaan was one of the distinguished honors at the annual encampment of the Maine Veterans' Association, where he was the guest for the day. Mr. Priest is the oldest veteran in Maine. He was 99 last April, being a member of the Union army.

GREEK gods and goddesses, fauns and nymphs and all the human emotions personified, danced and sang in the picturesque fashion of Bostonia's "Pompeiian times" at the charitonnik playgrounds yesterday afternoon. It was the first annual production of a play for children by the Elizabeth Peabody House, and although it is doubtful if the thousand of mothers and their children present knew the pretty play ever heard of the Greeks and their mythology, they gave unstinted evidence of their enjoyment.

Several score children of the West End made comfortable Greeks, their scantily-bright costumes being most becoming for their dark faces and dark skinned legs.

Some of the principals in the charming pastoral were Miss Virginia Tanner, who had and thus enjoyed their work with seeming-ly more zest than the better children supporters.

Radcliffe Girl Dances.

The play was arranged by Miss Edmund M. Curtis, assisted by Miss Virginia Tanner, a Radcliffe graduate, whose dancing class under her Back Bay society friends has created a furore.

Miss Tanner's slender figure, about which the graceful folds of her simple Greek costume clung with charming effect, was the center of much admiring interest by the children. The mothers and children from the upstairs houses of the West End peered and soon stood a picture of health and charming beauty as that which Miss Tanner portrayed as she swung about in the green-sward in her alluring dance.

Again and again they encored her, showing their appreciation in loudly spoken comments. Miss Tanner, flushed with the genuine expression of joy which her dancing evoked, repeated again and again her wonderful dirtation dance.

Later she had a pretty scene with the school boy, which part was taken by Max Leaman. The two made a handsome pair and calm during the scene. In fact, they enjoyed every minute they were upon the green grass.

They were purchased under the direction of Miss Tanner Thursday night. Miss Tanner was told that the animals were little thirty-pound creatures, but when they were delivered to her she found that they weighed at least seventy pounds.

They are the hardest creatures to handle you could imagine; they tug and pull with the strength of a full grown cattle" she said afterwards.

"We had a terrible time getting them into a wagon, and then we didn't know how to take them. Finally we took them to my home on Sepember 2 and then in Dorchester. Then just as all seemed happy with them they broke away. They broke down all night and the neighbors couldn't sleep, and my cousin's maid left the next day, and oh! these sheep have been the cause of all my life," the young teacher exclaimed today.

The story of the life of Prometheus was given in a series of pantomimes in which the children participated, their parts with song and dance choruses like trained veterans. The fate of Prometheus's punishment for his earth by Mercury because he gave the earth the secret of fire, and his return later from banishment was told in the first scene.

Miss Tanner as Pandora.

In the second scene, Pandora, which part was taken by Miss Tanner, appeared in her lively flirtation with Epimetheus with W. B. Faith, the brother of Prometheus as the latter. The scene in which Epimetheus Pandora dances herself into the affections of Epimetheus.

The third scene and last opened with Prometheus chained to the rocks, with the wedding march carried out in admirable manner by the children, and the gift of Mercury, given the wedded pair with the injunction that they must not open here into the plot.

Epimetheus and Pandora could not refrain from the temptation of finding out what the box contained, and when they did, that upon its opening Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Envy, Jealousy and Hope leaped out. At first all were overcome at the sight but Hope soon recovered herself and pursued the wicked spirits thus liberated upon their flight.

Miss Curtis, who is well known throughout Boston for her clever work in dancing and presenting plays, carried out the part of Temperance with a grace and dash that she and Miss Tanner gave most graceful exhibitions of dancing which were easily the features of the afternoon.

Those who took leading parts in the production were Joseph Goodinsky, W. B. Faith, S. Lawrence, J. Goldman, M. Worono-off, J. Riley and the Misses Virginia Tanner, M. Curtis, E. Beaumont, M. Lawrence, E. Schaffer, E. Hirsh, R. Grossman, A. Crooks, E. Woronoff, B. Jaffee, B. Borger, A. Nathanson and Mrs. E. W. White.

WILL GIVES WIFE $1 AND THOUSANDS TO WAITRESS

Eccentric Mr. Veazie of Malden Also Doled Out $3 to His Children.

FROM an estate of several thousand dollars, Lewis R. Veazie of Malden doled out one dollar apiece to his wife and children. He left the rest of his estate to Susie Roberts, who, he says in his will, was his "true friend in sickness and in good health." Miss Roberts was a waitress in a Boston restaurant.

Referring to his wife, Veazie says in his will: Mrs. Alice D. Veazie receives $100 cents because she has deserve, for she gave me an uncomfortable life while I lived with her and during my absence broke into the house, stole all my furniture and removed it to another part of the city."

"Wasn't he the wretch!" said Mrs. Veazie at her home when told of the contents of the will. "He abused me and our children until I had to leave him, and now he accuses me of making him miserable! But we'll break that will!"

Young Son Is Pleased.

"The dollar will very nearly buy me a new hook. I took it with the consent of the court, which ordered him to pay me $4 a week as well."

"Since 1905 I seldom saw Veazie though he lived in Malden. For a few weeks last Summer he lived on the same street, while I was there, but I took care that if he knew us he failed to show any signs of recognition. I have still a son named Roberts and entered his life within the last few years and although he was ill during his last illness, but I never saw her."

Veazie is said to have been very economical, and during the days of the war terror at the restaurant he patronized, for he always complained of his food and the dishes back to the kitchen at the slightest excuse.

He never told anybody any details about Miss Roberts except that he was befriended by her when he was ill and she was a waitress in the grocery delivery at Boston would reach her.

During Veazie's last illness Miss Roberts carried his meals to his room. When he died at the Malden Hospital on January 1 Miss Roberts was a frequent visitor. But since she died on the 17th, almost a year ago, she addressed to the hospital she has not been seen about Malden at all.

MOTHER TRIUMPHS.

Back Home with Son After Exciting Race.

PITTSBURG, July 9.—Mrs. George Baldwin, of Bradford County, is again at home after one of the most exciting experiences ever recorded in that section.

Her former husband kidnaped their eleven-year-old son and fled. Armed with a loaded gun she caused him fifty miles, compelled him to return the boy and make away with a deadly warning.

Census Men Charged with Fraud.

HELENA, Mont., July 9.—F. P. McDonald and W. E. Martin, recently arrested in Helena from Great Falls, were arraigned in the Federal Court on the charge of making false returns. They are accused $2,000 bonds each. McDonald states that Joseph Thompson, another enumerator, was under arrest at Great Falls on a similar charge.

BROCKTON HAS 30 CENTS.

General Fund Is Depleted, and City Fathers Are Puzzled.

BROCKTON, July 9.—The city of Brockton looks like thirty cents; for that's all the city is worth at the present time. Expectant glances are cast these days in the direction of the office of the Clerk of Court by members of the finance committee of the city government, and speculation is rife as to how much the city's general fund will be fattened by the quarter's return of fines.

The general fund is in a blighted condition, thirty cents being all that remains to meet demands for about $5,000, and the members of the government are at their wits' end to know how to meet the emergency. The new mouth inspector says he will need $1,500 for the next six weeks' work, the board of health is due $1,500 for contagious disease expenses and there are several other small debts to be paid.

BOY OF TEN KILLS BEAR.

Cannot Raise Gun to Shoulder, but Shots Land.

EUGENE, Ore., July 9.—The youngest bear-killer in Lane County is Ernest Morton, the ten-year-old son of O. Morton, residing on Bear Creek, along Cogswell. The lad encountered the animal in the woods, his dog treed it, and the boy, who was not armed at the time, ran as fast as he could to a neighbor's house for a gun.

He was given a .32 Winchester rifle, and when he returned to where he saw the bear he found his dog faithfully standing guard at the foot of the tree. The boy could not bring the butt of the gun to his shoulder, but aimed as well as he could and two shots brought the bear to the ground.

SUICIDE PACT IS MURDER.

Conviction of Man Who Failed to Keep His Part Upheld.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 9.—The Supreme Court held that if two men agree to a suicide pact and one kills himself while the other does not, the one failing is guilty of murder in either the first or second degree.

Rube McMahon and Sam Ashley were in a boggy drinking and, according to McMahon, agreed to such a pact. Ashley shot himself in the head with a pistol and killed himself, the man alive says; he was killed by the man alive, contends the State. At any rate, under a suicide pact, so admitted by McMahon, he is guilty and the life sentence of the lower court is affirmed.

ACCUSED CLERK PUTS BLAME ON HIGH LIVING COST

Nicholas D. Sully, Charged with Opening Letters, "Needed More Money."

NICHOLAS D. SULLY, Fenway postoffice clerk, who is accused of stealing money letters from the mails and pleaded "not guilty" when arraigned before United States Commissioner Hayes, complained of the high cost of living when seen in the home of his mother-in-law, at No. 1,278 Tremont street, after being released from custody under bond. He said that if clerks who handle money got better salaries they would not be tempted. It was a sad household. The accused man's little sons clung to him fondly, as if they feared the law would drag him away.

Sully is thirty years old and has been in the government employ for twelve years. Being efficient he obtained advancement to the position of chief, and nearly a year ago bought a home at No. 15 Ditson street, Dorchester.

"Oh, how could you do it?" asked his wife, as they sat on a sofa in the home of her mother. "Did you never think about the children or me?"

Thought He Needed More.

"I don't know how I did it," he replied. "It is my expenses which have been bothering me lately. When you see everything going up in price and things which you formerly had beyond your reach, you lose control. It is always a temptation to be a little better money and not get it.

"When a month is needed in your family and out of a small salary you are not able to provide for your children there is a temptation coming over you when you are in charge of money. I don't offer this as an excuse. Then when once you have done something which is wrong you will grow hardened to it. I have never gambled, either have I spent money foolishly. I have always had an interest in my home and wanted to make the children happy, but it seemed that I could not do enough for them. My salary would not allow me to, while other fathers were doing it. I kept thinking about this; it kept me awake at night. I wanted my family to have more than my salary would give me. My desire to do this got the better of me and I did it. One thing what brought some more of relief to my family. I overlooked what I was doing, and it grew upon me.

"Pay Tor Small."

"I think if clerks got better salaries they would not be tempted. We see people going around enjoying themselves, as I did in the Back Bay, and then you think why should you not have some of the nice things?

"I have had a hard time in keeping down expenses, and I tried hard to get extra work so that I could get more money, but I never could succeed. The Summer was one of real hardship for me, more than my salary would give.

"I have told this to my wife. "I'll try to do more for you when I get out of this difficulty."

NORTON IS MODEST.

Taft's Secretary Objects to Newspaper Publicity.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Charles D. Norton, the "unassuming" Taft man who is "made good." This is the verdict of official Washington. Mr. Norton is to succeed his both as assistant secretary in the Department of Commerce and Labor and right-hand man of President Taft, he is, from the nature of his position, obliged to have a talk with him. "I'm green on publicity and don't want any," he began. "But I know that the success of my job depends upon the newspapers getting the correct relations that I hope will grow confidential with the newspaper representatives. I believe I can do it. I'm not going to be discourteous, generally speaking, is the country."

Then he added, "there is only one request that I am going to make. That is, that my name be kept out of the papers. I am not notoriety myself. Use what I give you for publication, but don't say that I'm secretary to the President, or Secretary Norton today plans."

MOOSE DELAYS MAIL.

Maine Critter Liable to Get Term in a Federal Prison.

BANGOR, July 9.—There is a law against delaying the United States mail and the person who hazards the interests of the mails by delaying it is a federal prisoner. This only applies to human beings, however, and a driving bull moose when dumb animals performs the feat. It is reported that a moose on Hunter four, Caribou, was held up for fifteen minutes by a big bull moose. The mail which stood defiantly in the road, and refused to budge an inch. The mail carrier ready." The hold-up occurred in Perham, the home of Mrs. Nick Wardwell. Men gently were working on the road, and a herd of cattle, a moment, and a magnificent glance at Mr. Fisher, and then with a look of disdain, jemped a fence and with leisurely made his way into the woods.

TO ARM PAYMASTERS.

Brockton Manufacturers to Take Warning from Lynn Holdup.

BROCKTON, July 9.—Every large manufacturing concern in the city which needs paymasters to carry their money to the banks has adopted the pay-roll money, has applied to City Marshal Tower for permission to allow these conveyers of currency to be armed with revolvers to protect the money. The Lynn tragedy has taught Brockton a lesson and every precaution is being taken. Inspector James H. Grace one of the best officials in this section has informed several local merchants that it is dangerous for the young lady bookkeepers and cashiers to walk the streets doing errands with two, three, four and even five thousand dollars in their hands and pocketbooks.

SARDINE CATCH LIGHT.

Maine Season Cut Down Almost One-Half.

BANGOR, July 9.—The sardine packing season is now over, and it has been a distinctly light. The sardine season has extended from eight to nine months for four months. Still it is possible that a normal pack may be made up before the season closes. The large schools of herring are usually delayed until August, when they continue up to December, or to the cost of the East. Just now, however, several thousand residents are eagerly waiting for the fish.

OPIUM SAUSAGE STUFFING.

Ingenious Smuggling Scheme of Chinaman.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 9.—In searching the baggage of a Chinaman just arrived from the Orient, a customs inspector found among the Celestial's effects what appeared to be a string of sausages. Investigation proved the innocent looking "frankfurters" contained more than four pounds of opium, valued here at $700.

Using his spurious sausages as links in their chain of evidence, the officials will try to sustain a charge of smuggling against the Chinaman.

So says Professor E. H. Arnold of Yale.

Professor Arnold means that the baby represents an actual money investment of that figure. For instance, if you were taking account of family stock you would list baby this way:

Item—one baby—$75."

Horrible, isn't it? Ridiculous, too. And a libel upon baby?

What young mother would set a value in dollars and cents upon her pink, plump, pretty baby boy or girl? She wouldn't take $75 for the love-weary end of one of his little fat toes.

But Professor Arnold is a medical man and a scientist and he deals in tables and computations and statistics and averages and all that sort of a disagreeable thing. He treats babies impersonally, which is a good mistake.

Professor Arnold declares that each baby represents an actual money investment of $75, and he carries out his deductions to show the amount of money each child costs yearly by easy figures, wedding clothes to engagement rings.

Children from one year, $75 each.

Children from one to four years, $175 each.

Children from five to nine years, $500 each.

Children from fifteen to eighteen years, $2,000 each.

From $100 an article for introducing his babyship into the world is the price charged by a baby specialist who is employed by the 400.

J. F. O'CONNELL IS BARRED AS SPEAKER

Oratory Not Allowed at Lawn Fete for the Daly Home.

Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell, advertised to speak at the annual lawn festival of the Daly Industrial School yesterday, did not deliver an address because the executive committee decided against it.

The three-cornered contest for Congress in the Tenth district, with O'Connell occupying one of the corners, prompted the committee to act thus. It was feared by the committee that the Congressman's presence as a speaker might be interpreted as an indorsement of his candidacy by the charity institution. It was agreed to by the committee that the Congressman's presence as a guest would be accepted as an indorsement of his candidacy by the charity institution. It was agreed by the committee that the Congressman's presence as a guest would be accepted as an indorsement of his candidacy by the charity institution.

Congressman O'Connell said last night: "I went to the fair to help a charity and not to advertise my candidacy. I did not know that a speech was expected from me, but if my being advertised to speak swelled the crowd I have no complaint to make."

Patrick F. Burke, chairman of the executive committee, said: "We don't want any man who is running for office to give his views on address at an affair of this kind. There is a political fight in the Tenth District and some might think that Mr. O'Connell's point of view was not in accord with our movement."

Richard A. Lynch, secretary of the executive committee, said that there was no political ban on Congressman O'Connell, but that "no fairness to all it would not speak."

Congressman O'Connell arrived at the festival, which was held on the grounds of the Daly School in Dorchester, a few minutes before the committee's action. It was said that Miss Katherine Walsh, in charge of the Boston tables, had invited him to speak.

There were twelve thousand people at the festival. Seventeen tables decorated with red, white and blue and Japanese patterns dotted the school grounds. Athletic events, a minstrel troupe, punch and judy show and ring-the-bell-and-get-a-doll features provided amusement. A band played afternoon and evening.

At 62 Will Wed Brother's Widow.

BROCKTON, July 9.—A surprise was sprung today when it was learned that Joseph Mawber, sixty-two, had taken out a license to marry his brother's widow, Mrs. Sarah Mawber, who is the same age and resides on Glenwood avenue.

CAVALRY AND SIGNAL CORPS NOW IN CAMP

Short Drill on Program for Today, When Visitors Will Be Received.

FRAMINGHAM STATE CAMP GROUND, July 9.—The First Squadron of Cavalry, M.V.M., and the Signal Corps arrived here to-day and pitched camp. To-morrow morning there will be a short drill. In the afternoon many visitors are expected. The troopers are preparing to look their smartest for the benefit of the pretty girls who are expected to adorn the camp by their presence.

About 2 o'clock a sergeant from the Roxbury Horse Guards arrived in camp in charge of about a dozen stragglers. It was after 3 o'clock when, at a signal by Lieutenant-Colonel Bancroft, the troopers under command of Major William A. Perrin rode into the camp grounds in close parade and to their quarters. Wednesday will be Governor's day.

Roster of Squadron.

The roster of the squadron is as follows: Major William A. Perrins, commanding. Staff: First Lieutenant John W. Hall, squadron quartermaster and commissary; Second Lieutenant Malcolm E. Sanborn, squadron quartermaster and commissary; Dr. Arthur W. May, veterinarian; Captain William N. Tenney, assistant surgeon; First Lieutenant Edwin B. Wilde, inspector of small arms practice.

A Troop (the lancers)—Captain John S. Barrows, First Lieutenant Charles B. Appleton, Second Lieutenant John Kenny.

B Troop—Captain John A. L. Blake, First Lieutenant S. Hamilton Wood, Second Lieutenant Benjamin S. Blake.

D Troop (Roxbury Horse Guards)—Captain Charles A. Schmidt, First Lieutenant Frank J. Goggins, Second Lieutenant Adelbert J. Perry.

The first arrivals on the camp ground were Captain Harry A. Sawtelle and First Lieutenant Frank F. Edwards of the 8th battalion of field artillery from Tufts College. The mounted platoon of the corps left the armory in Charlestown at 9:30 and arrived at Framingham at 10 o'clock. They were in command of Sergeant Harry Perks. The dismounted detachment, under command of First Lieutenant Everett O. Dodge, came by trolley and arrived at 10 o'clock.

Open Telegraph School.

To-morrow morning the camp will have a short drill and the afternoon will be devoted to entertaining visitors. A telegraph school is to be established in the mess hall with twenty instruments. The new advertised new wireless equipment with the Adjutant-General's office for the corps has not been received, and the men will have to do their work with the old-style wigwag-phernalia.

There are four officers and fifty-six men present in the corps. The officers are: Captain Harry L. Hosse, Lieutenant Frank P. Edwards, First Lieutenant S. Hamilton Wood and First Lieutenant Everett O. Dodge.

HAUNTED, HE CONFESSES.

Convict Burglar Makes Unexpected Disclosure of Murder.

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., July 9.—John Avery, who on January 21 began serving a five-year sentence for a burglary committed in Los Angeles, has confessed to the murder of a deaf-mute's niece, confessed to the murder of a deaf-mute's niece, confessed to the murder of a deaf-mute's niece,

RAILROAD BILLS ARE HELD UP BY POLITICS

Action on Grand Trunk and New Haven Petitions Go Over Until After Election.

DANGER IS FORESEEN

Commission, It Is Declared, Will Leave Question to Legislature of 1911.

BECAUSE of the imminence of a red-hot campaign for the governorship and the next Legislature, with so many years in the United States Senate at its disposal, it was said last night by politicians that the Massachusetts Railroad Commission will to-morrow end both the New Haven railroad and the Grand Trunk railroad to the Legislature of 1911. Both roads have petitioned for the right to construct new lines in the south central part of the State.

Politicians said a decision at this time in favor of the New Haven, apparently clearing forever the door to railroad competition in Massachusetts, would defeat the Republican party at the polls in November and would certainly imperil the future of Henry Cabot Lodge.

There will be "no politics" in the decision of the Railroad Commission. Rather, the argument will be that politics will attempt to keep far away from politics.

Commissioners Hard at Work.

By the order to be handed down to-morrow the Board of Railroad Commissioners will dispose of the rival petitions. Ten hours after they were reported to have disposed of a portion of the problem before them, Commissioners Hall, Bishop and White were still at work on it yesterday.

The report had been printed that the commission had voted in favor of the New Haven's petition. Nothing was said in this report about the petition of the Grand Trunk, although the Grand Trunk folks had said to the Board of Railroad Commissioners that they will be glad to build whether the New Haven gets a similar certificate or not. The New Haven holds that it has a "priority of right" in the field. It will not build if the Grand Trunk is to be in.

At the Beacon street offices of the Railroad Commission yesterday it was said just before the closing hour that the commissioners had come to no conclusion as to either petition. "When the board has acted," it was said for the commission, "an order will be filed. That order will be public property at once."

Grand Trunk in Rhode Island.

The Grand Trunk, so far as appears from the petition it has filed with the Railroad Commission, asks Massachusetts for the right to get into the neighboring state of Rhode Island. The Rhode Island Legislature has granted the Grand Trunk a charter, letting the Canadian road into Providence.

Controlling the Central Vermont, which leases the New London & Northern, which touches at Palmer, the Grand Trunk asks for a certificate that "public necessity and convenience" require the construction of a new Grand Trunk line from Palmer to Blackstone, there touching the Rhode Island line.

Fearing the competition of the Mr Canadian system, which could thus put Providence and Southern Central Massachusetts into direct communication with Chicago, the Pardee Coast and the Connecticut River Haven asked quickly for a certificate permitting the extension of their line from Southbridge on to Palmer. Mellen, it is said, asserted that there has been no rate war.

The Railroad Commission may grant one or both or neither of the petitions. The decision of the commission may be the occasion for a fight in the Legislature of 1911.

PASTORS PLAN PARADE.

Midnight Temperance Torchlight March In West End Proposed.

A midnight torchlight parade of the ministers of this city and their followers in the cause of temperance is a novelty which Boston may be treated to in the near future. Charles Howe Manley, the active head of the Anti-Saloon League, with No. 292 Cambridge street, is the moving spirit in this startling scheme, and at a meeting of the temperance workers last night at the mission quarters it was practically decided to issue invitations to all of the clergymen of the city and their Saturday night form, in line somewhere in the West End, and march through the city district, occasionally halting to address the populace. Ministers are to be invited from their churches and each organization will have a distinctive banner, while everyone in the parade proper will carry lanterns. Mr. Manley is the son of the late Archie of the British consulate at Washington, and during the Boer war he served as a chaplain in the British army.

GIRL EMPLOYES FLEE FIRE.

Assurance of No Danger Fails to Check Run Down Stairs.

Fearing that the flames might cut off their exit from the factory of the Globe Skirt Manufacturing Company, No. 2 Hanover avenue extension, yesterday, five girls rushed down four flights of stairs to the street. The blaze was discovered in a closet, but was extinguished before much damage was done. The girls were working on machines when the fire was discovered. The foreman tried to calm them by telling them there was no danger, but they made sure of safety in the street. They returned to work when the fire apparatus left.

District Chief Seamott and his men were delayed in reaching the fire on account of several incorrect telephone messages.

BUSY DAYS AT OPERA HOUSE PLANNING FOR SECOND SEASON

By FREDERICK JOHNS

ALTHOUGH the opening of the second season of the Boston Opera House is still more than three months distant, there is considerable operatic activity about the opera house. The ballet and American chorus are rehearsing almost daily. Upon the great stage painters are at work upon new productions, and most important of all, Theodore H. Bauer has returned.

Bauer is the press representative of the Boston Opera House. He strolled down the long plank of the Cymbric the other day, wearing an expansive smile and a cane, and could hardly wait until the ship news reporters reached him to talk about the coming season and how fine it would be.

There is no doubt that the season will be full of surprises. Bauer knows all that will be done, but he is too shrewd to empty his bag of tricks at once. He will let his news dribble during the last months and thus keep the Boston Opera ever before your eyes. Still when he was cornered in his office he gave up a good deal of important information.

Fourteen New Operas

"There will be fourteen new operas during the coming season," he said. "By that, I mean operas that require new scenery, not of course operas that have not been composed. For example there will be revivals of 'Falstaff' and 'Othello,' operas which were produced last season, but which we could not find time to produce.

"Then there will be 'The Pipe of Desire,' by Wintersee, and a new Cadman opera by Mr. Converse. The second night reporters could tell him to talk about the coming season and how fine it would be.

"Then there will be 'The Pipe of Desire,' by Wintersee, and a new Cadman opera by Mr. Converse. The second night there will be a ballet based on the story called 'L'Enfant Prodigue,' a work by the composer of 'Pecheurs de Mislaude,' a ballet in days.

"Of course, the most important announcement of all is the engagement of Sibrikoff and Baklanoff, whose name by a hard struggle to get him. Mr. Russell finally got the consent of the Russian government through the Russian ambassador to France to permit the latter to himself from the Imperial Opera at St. Petersburg until January 1, so we shall only have him during half the season.

"The Russian will make his debut the opening night in 'Mefistofele,' Boito's heroic opera, and will be followed in succession by a phenomenal bass to handle that pondrous music. It is one of the most superb parts of all operas and therefore fitted for an opening night, and though we gave it several times last season.

Just Wait for Cavalieri.

"As for the women singers, we have, first of all, Lina Cavalieri. Wait until you see her in Trials." She will make Mary Garden look—well, never mind what you will see. Cavalieri is a beauty and a great singer. Then we shall exchange with the Metropolitan for Destinn, Farrar, Homer and others. Besides we shall have Alice Nielson, Lipkowska and Frances Alda.

"Then there is Celine Boshelm, a famous contralto, and Mary Louise Rogers, an American woman who has had great success abroad in contralto roles. A third contralto is Janka Capilinska. We are going to be very strong in contralto roles this year.

"This season the Boston Opera House will produce the modern French operas of Massenet and Debussy, and therefore a distinguished French conductor, Andre Caplet, has been engaged. Caplet comes directly from the Opera Comique in Paris and is a former conductor at the Paris Opera.

"The Girl of the Golden West' will be given by our own artists, but by the Metropolitan singers. Baklanoff will sing the great role of the Sheriff. That's all I can tell you, but we shall have other announcements to make that will surprise you," and Mr. Bauer looked mysterious.

FINDS LAW DEFECTIVE.

Lowell Judge Points Out Loophole for Petty Thefts.

LOWELL, July 9. Judge Hadley in the Lowell Police Court to-day startled everyone in the court room when, during the trial of Kate Duran, charged with larceny of two pieces of cloth, he declared that in cases where the amount was under $5 under a new law passed by the last Legislature many petty thieves were practically couldn't punish the offenders.

He is the Law, Chapter 348, Section 20 "Whoever is convicted by a Police, District or Municipal Court of larceny, or fraud, of stealing money, or goods not exceeding the amount of $5, may be committed to the House of Correction or workhouse in the city or town in which the crime was committed, for not more than six months; or he may be punished by a fine of not more than $50, either with or without a condition that if it is not paid within a time specified he shall be so committed for a term designated in the sentence."

Lowell has no House of Correction or Workhouse. When Kate Duran was brought before Judge Hadley he sentenced her to pay a fine of $25 on the count and $20 on a second count. The woman happened to have the money and so she paid her fines.

PAROLE FOR PITMAN.

Nicaraguans to Let Young Cambridge Warrior Go Free.

William Pitman, the Cambridge man, who was sent to prison by the Nicaraguan government after he was saved from a worse fate by the intervention of the United States government, will be released and permitted to return to his family. No word has been received directly from the young man, but a report was received yesterday that he would probably be released this week, and it brought consolation to his mother, Mrs. Bertha Pitman, of No. 178 Spring street, Cambridge. His brother, Edward Pitman, has received a letter from a friend of William's at Bluefields, who saw him the night before the battle. It is full of encouragement, and pays a high tribute to the courage and character of the young man. The United States government warned his captors that they will be held personally responsible for his safe keeping.

GIRL TO DOCTOR HORSES.

Second in United States Who Is So Qualified.

There was only one woman veterinary in the United States until a few days ago, when Miss Florence Kimball of Dartmouth, became the second. Miss Kimball received her degree from Cornell, and is now ready to cure the sick horse or a fighting cat. She can set a broken leg of a drafty horse or bind up the wound of a bird dog or a plowed shoulder of a hunter. She has an expert in all branches of animal surgery. "It is my love of animals that urged me to become a veterinary," said Miss Kimball. "Dumb creatures have their troubles as well as human beings, and should be taken care of. I have not yet decided what my future plans shall be."

DISCUSS SITES FOR IMMIGRANT STATION

Secretary Nagel to Meet Merchants Tuesday on Harbor Trip.

Dispatches from Washington that Secretary Nagel of the department of commerce and Labor will find it necessary to wait until Fall to begin work on the new immigrant station in East Boston owing to the delay in making the exchange of sites are disappointing to Commissioner George B. Stallings, Congressman Keliher and others interested in the station.

"I believe that Secretary Nagel is as much annoyed over the delay in exchanging sites as is Colonel Billings or myself and Congressman Keliher yesterday. The Department of Commerce and Labor could begin work on the new station if some of the other side were ready to make the exchange of sites."

Colonel Billings thinks that Secretary Nagel is quite impatient over the delay and will not put off the work on the station until his return from Alaska in the Fall if he can see any way to hurry it along.

It is no secret that the immigration officials are fearful less the break out in the present Long Wharf station or in the vicinity. At times there are 200 or more immigrants detained at the Long Wharf detention quarters, in a wooden building sheathed with Georgia pine, the most inflammable of building materials. In the adjacent buildings there are several hundred bales of wool, which are also highly inflammable. The officials of the Chamber will then make their wishes known in the matter of the exchange of sites, Henry M. Whitney, the father of the plan of waterfront improvement in East Boston, which makes the exchange of sites necessary, will also be in the party.

BOSTON BANKER'S BRIDE.

Maine Girl Becomes the Wife of Stuart W. Webb.

BATH, Me., July 9.—One of the most prominent society weddings in this city for the season took place today when Miss Marcia Sewall, daughter of Samuel Swanton Sewall, became the bride of Stuart Weston Webb of Brookline, Mass., Harvard '01.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Culbert McGay and Grace Episcopal Church, Arthur S. Hyde, organist at St. Bartholomew's, New York City, and formerly at Emmanuel, Boston, rendered a soft organ accompaniment. The best man was Albert Borden of Beverly, Mass., and the ushers were all Harvard men, Harris Paine and Albert A. Borden of New York City, Samuel Titcomb of Augusta, Lester F. Gilbert of Buffalo, N. Y., and L. White and John Boyd of Boston. The maid of honor was Miss Ruby Sewall of Kansas City.

Mr. Webb is a son of the late Rev. Stephen West of Brookline. He is assistant secretary of the Old Colony Trust Company, Boston.

DENY WHITNEY AIDS WAR ON NEW TUNNEL

President Rothwell of Chamber Says Heavy Cost Would Burden People.

The officials of the Boston Chamber of Commerce strongly resent the inference drawn in some quarters that the opposition of the Chamber to the excavation of a new tunnel under Boston harbor for the use of the Boston & Eastern Electric Railroad was inspired by Henry M. Whitney's alleged desire to throw all the stumbling blocks he could in the way of the new railroad project. Bernard J. Rothwell, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, said yesterday:

"The Boston Chamber of Commerce will not oppose the excavation of a new tunnel if it is shown that a new tunnel is necessary, but we do not believe that it is necessary nor expedient. The useless expense of excavating, amounting to many millions, would fall upon the traveling public. The present tunnel to East Boston is not being used to anything like its present capacity, and its capacity could be enormously increased and the public much better accommodated if a loop were excavated at the present dead end under Court street. I believe that with such a loop five times as many cars could pass through the tunnel as are passed through to-day.

"When I say the statement in the papers that the Chamber of Commerce would build a new tunnel I am not aware that anyone has been whose authority. The Committee on Public Utilities respectfully recommend that, unless the new and present arrangements as to the use of the existing East Boston tunnel should be so fully unobtainable the use of that tunnel by the projected Boston & Eastern Electric Railroad, this committee be authorized to oppose the issuance by the Railroad Commission of a certificate of necessity for the building of a new tunnel by the Boston & Eastern Electric Railroad, since the building of an unnecessary tunnel would involve an enormous waste, which must eventually be borne by the community.

"Moreover, it would be for the advantage of the community to have the Boston & Eastern cars connect directly with the Boston Elevated's system, rather than to have a separate terminal in Boston.

GOOD CRANBERRY CROP.

Latest Report From Bogs Indicates Big Yield.

WAREHAM, July 9.—Despite the pessimistic reports of the first of the season on the poor cranberry crop, present day reports indicate there will be a much larger crop than was at first expected. The bloom is now set on the bogs, and a canvass of the larger ones shows a good looking crop. If the pests now fought now on there will be a good chance for a full crop.

The advertising scheme seems to have fallen for a little while at least, and the growers will wait another season before opening the campaign.

MUSIC LECTURER, SECRET BRIDE OF A SCHOOL PRINCIPAL

MRS. EDGAR KAHARL

WILL RECORD QUAKES.

Boston College Is Installing Seismograph at New Home.

When the new Boston College at University Heights, Newton, is completed, it will have one of the most fully equipped scientific departments of the educational institutions of this country, according to the plans of President Thomas I. Gasson, S. J. Among other scientific instruments, a seismograph for recording earthquakes will be installed. Father Gasson said last night that Boston College would have had a seismograph long ago, if physical conditions at the present site had not precluded the establishment of one. The college now stands on made land, he said, and the constant vibrations due to traffic would interfere with such an instrument.

The seismographs used in the Jesuit colleges have a sheet of smoke paper, over which is suspended a sharp platinum point or needle which records the tremors of the earth. So delicate is the mechanism that the balancing irons, which weigh 150 pounds, may be swayed by the human breath.

EDUCATOR KEPT WEDDING SECRET

Boston Musician Is Bride of Principal of Maine High School.

MISS CAROLYN ATWOOD, but that isn't her name now, has just proved to her scores of Boston friends and admirers that women can and do keep secrets when they desire. While they have lost found that she has been married over since last Christmas without ever giving the slightest intimation of it.

Carolyn Atwood is really Mrs. Edgar Kahari. Her husband is principal of the Brunswick, Me., high school and an educator of no high standing, comparatively, in his own State as his talented wife is in musical circles in this city.

Very cleverly concealed was the romance which led to the marriage of Carolyn Atwood and Edgar Kahari in New Bedford during the last Christmas vacation. The couple met here years ago when Mr. Kahari was visiting in Boston. He grew to be a great admirer of Miss Atwood, who is now a lecturer at the Fox-Buonamici School of Pianoforte, Steinert building.

Miss Atwood had been a pupil of Signor Carlo Buonamici, one of the directors of the Fox-Buonamici Piano School, through his friendship for the grandchildren of Fritz Fox, the well-known pianist, she rapidly became a proficient pupil.

Last October Miss Atwood was retained to deliver a course of lectures before the school, but friends now know that she was married to her pupil on the 27th of Edgar Kahari, who would spend week-ends in Boston. It was noticed by Mr. Kahari's pupils in the Brunswick high school that his absences were keeping an added hour for music, according the history of music.

Miss Atwood lived at No. 20 Elm Hill Park, Roxbury, while she studied with Carlo Buonamici and Felix Fox, and ended until the close of the school year early in the Summer. She and Mr Kahari frequently, but they appeared as good friends as nothing more. During the Christmas holidays they slipped away to New Bedford, where they were married, and where they arranged so well for the keeping of their great secret that it was only divulged by the High School principal yesterday in Maine.

Mrs. Kahari is touring Europe now, gathering material for her lectures. Mrs. Kahari will also study the plans in Florence under the instruction of Signor Giuseppi Buonamici, Carlo Buonamici's father.

Professor Kahari is spending his Summer vacation in Bluefields, and will return from Europe early in the Fall and they will be at home to their friends there and her husband will begin housekeeping.

NEW R. R. RATE IS THREATENING MILK

Consumers May Be Compelled to Pay Cent a Quart More for Product.

A NEW milk war threatens. It promises more complications than the one just settled. It may result in the consumer being assessed an extra cent per quart. The milk producers (the farmers) demanded a flat rate per can for railroad transportation of milk. That is, they asked that a small farmer be allowed to ship a can of milk for the same rate per can as a big producer or a contractor could ship a car load for the same distance.

The Boston & Maine has just announced a new tariff with a flat rate. But the rates, though flat, are so much higher for distances within 100 miles of Boston, that the farmers in this radius are liable to be put out of business. In the first place they will be unable to compete with producers from greater distances, since the freight rates are not increased to any extent and where pasturage expenses and other cost of producing are much less. In the next place, their milk freight is higher than before, irrespective of rates to reduce profits.

The big Boston contractors, also, are accessed at the increased rate. W. A. Grindstein of the Boston Dairy Company, for instance, declares that the flat rate bids fair to rake in over $1,000,000 extra per year, by the increase in rates in the zone nearer to Boston.

The Boston & Maine's new schedule of milk tariffs was laid down with the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington.

Fight New Schedule.

The contractors have asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to suspend action on the new tariff. They have also taken steps to have the Boston & Maine enjoined from putting the new rates into effect.

Furthermore, the contractors are holding up all contracts which they had made with the producers, based on the Winter price demanded by the producers for September milk. No contract will be signed before August 1 at least.

Distance	8½-qt. can	10-qt. can	20-qt. can	40-qt. can
miles	cents	cents	cents	cents
10 to 20	4.5	5.0	9.0	17.0
21 to 30	4.5	5.0	10.0	18.5
31 to 100	5.0	6.0	11.5	21
101 to 150	6.0	7.0	13.5	25
151 to 190	7.0	8.0	15.5	29
191 or more	8.5	9.5	18	32

For example, a farmer in Bennington, Vt., which is 177 miles from Boston, can ship to one eight and one-half quart can of milk to Boston for 6.2 cents. A farmer in Abercorn, which is only forty-two miles from Boston, has to pay 5.0 cents for the same amount. The Bennington farmer's freight per can is only six-tenths of a cent more than that of the Abercorn farmer. The latter's operating expenses are much nearer Boston are, of course, greater.

Hearing in New Haine.

W. A. Graustein explains the ratio of increase thus:

"The new schedule will increase the rate for hauls up to forty-one miles of Boston to 12 cents per can. This means the big farmer in that zone will lose on a can of milk that forty cents and the milk, from forty-one to 100 miles the increase is about sixty per cent. From 100 to 190 miles the increase is five per cent. At Newport, Vt., for instance, the increase is about one per cent.

"The railroad assigns as its reason for the new tariff, the so-called Saunders bill. But this is not true," declared Attorney Ropes, Gray & Gorham, attorneys. Their expert opinion is that the law which the Saunders bill is no excuse for the railroad's exercising carload rates and shipping rates for transportation.

"The Boston contractors have paid the farmers three-fourths of a cent a quart more for milk than New York market has. This has been going on for nineteen years. The difference in the freight rates into Boston and on milk into New York, is small. Still the same the price paid will be the same and the profit less.

"Right here let it be said that the extra cost will not be out of the contractors. You can't break up the contractors. We can get all the milk we want. The purchasers are the men who are going to lose on this proposition."

DARING WOMAN WHO WILL EXPLORE WILDS OF FARAWAY YUCATAN

Sizzling Wire Nearly Starts Panic in Street

Fire Department Called Out When Loose Cable Striking Elm Tree Causes Pyrotechnic Display.

A pyrotechnic display of great beauty, caused by a feed wire of the Edison Electric Company coming in contact with a large elm tree at the corner of Dover street and Shawmut avenue, about 8:30 last evening, almost brought about a panic in the thickly congested district between Shawmut avenue and Washington street.

Some one turned in an alarm from Box 73, and with the advent of the fire department, everyone scampered out of their houses pellmell. The Boston Elevated repair wagon responded, but seeing that it was not their wire refused to touch it, and the sizzling and snapping and shooting of sparks continued to the great delight of the youngster contingent.

Electrician David Murphy of the Edison Company soon appeared on the scene however, and sending the thirty-five foot pole, lightened the wire and freed it from the tree.

AVIATORS AT OLD SAUGUS.

Famous Race Track to Be Given Over to Flyers.

An aviation field is to be established at the old Saugus race track. It was reported yesterday that many of the successful flights had agreed to make demonstrations there.

The old stables, selected comprises 200 acres of level land. The old race track is a hundred feet wide, pretty even and good. Lately it has been unused. H. B. Hammond, of Boston, who is promoting the plan for the reconstruction of the track, said yesterday that many changes were contemplated. These changes would entail replacing of the old wooden grand stand by a concrete one with a capacity for seating 25,000. Bleachers are to be built to accommodate 25,000 more. The rest of the buildings, including the famous old hotel, is to be renovated.

WOMAN SAILS ALONE TO YUCATAN WILDS

Mrs. Flora Edmond of Manchester, N. H., Will Add to Laurels as a Explorer.

NEW YORK, July 9.—Bound for the unexplored ruined cities of Yucatan, where Indians are now at war with the Mexican Government, Mrs. Flora Kendell Edmond, woman explorer of Manchester, N. H., sailed to-day on a Ward Line steamship. She was warned of the danger in venturing into Yucatan while an uprising is taking place, but she declared she did not fear interference from the natives and would not postpone her trip.

Mrs. Edmond has twice visited the wild places of the earth. She spent a Summer on the wild Labrador coast, where Dr. Grenfell lives, and lived with the fishermen, and last year she penetrated the fastnesses of Mexico and climbed Mt. Popocatepetl to the top. She is still a young woman, is rather handsome and slight of figure, but she is an accomplished horsewoman and an excellent pistol shot.

"I know what to expect," she said when waylaid at the dock by reporters. "I know. My only fear is that I may not be able to obtain guides, as they are shy on the contemporaneous there.

"I will sail from New York to Cuba and after a week there as the guest of friends I shall take boat to Progreso on the north coast of Yucatan and there, attended by two Mexican guides, I shall paint my route will be decided by circumstances.

"It is my aim to explore the ruins of the prehistoric cities in the interior of that little-known country and to complete the study of the ruins which I began last year in Mexico—not from the viewpoint of the archaeologist of scientist, but from that of the layman.

"I want to visit places where no white woman has been before. It is my hobby to visit places off the beaten path and I always try to avoid the usual tourist routes. I always travel alone except for my guides.

"I have a special costume designed for both walking and horseback riding as I expect to travel many miles in the saddle. It is of French linen of a khaki shade, waterproof, but light and cool and is made with blouse, bloomers and skirt. I shall wear a wide-brimmed hat and high hunting boots. I have three revolvers, one of which I will carry in my traveling bag."

Impending traffic over the Eastern bridge from Boston to Charlestown, by far the busiest of the bridges across the river on the air brakes on an incoming engine, when the cars could not be moved, and it took half an hour to get the traffic in motion again.

Senator Lodge announced yesterday the appointment of Curtis A. Hoit as United States Pension Agent for Boston. His commission will not expire until the Senate ends its December session.

Out of a total membership of 174 in the last senior class of the Newton High School, eighty-eight will enter college.

Mary Linden, sixty-two, and Rose Wax, thirty, were shot and wounded with guns in their hands, by a naval department guard.

Charles A. Balcom, No. 85 Perkins street, Jamaica Plain, and Henry Berson, No. 4 Chambers street, the city, were fined $5 each in the Charlestown District Court for the crime of turning the penny. Both appealed. The men had been arrested by Officers Thomas J. Burns, Samuel Kress, Ernest Dube and Thomas A. Keenan, who have the trial, charged with conspiracy in attempting to defraud Lawrence Gallagher of Revere, December 10 in an attempt to remove Fire Chief Hennessey from office.

Mayor White, on the stand, denied any conspiracy to remove Chief Hennessey. Clerk Hamilton and Mayor White testified that they had preferred charges against Hennessey and that the chief would have been removed if the Mayor could have secured enough votes of aldermen to do it.

DEEP PROBING FOR LABOR OFFICES

Commission Begins This Week on Employment Bureau Investigation.

The commission appointed by Governor Draper to investigate intelligence offices will buckle down to work this week. The commission is composed of Attorney Hon. Jacob Brown of Brookline, Hon. Nathan L. Amster and Miss Allen L. Higgins of the Boston Associated Charities. While the "white slave traffic" has been mentioned only indirectly in connection with the duties of the commission, it is expected that witnesses will be called on to tell whether or not there is any relation in Massachusetts between the traffic in human souls and intelligence and employment bureaus.

The commission is determined to get at the bottom of the charges against the conduct of some intelligence offices. Charges have been made that some of these offices are intimately associated with persons who deal in "white slaves." An inquiry by the Legislature into the calling for the appointment of the three commissioners was the result. The first, to investigate and study the conditions and management of employment agencies and intelligence offices of all kinds in the Commonwealth, and the duties of the laws relating thereto; secondly, to investigate the nature of the business of soliciting the services of the State free employment offices; the expense of the same as to provide farm labor through out the Commonwealth.

The commission has power to summon witnesses and compel their attendance. The duties serve without compensation. They will make a report to the next General Court.

Commissioner Brown, who was first named and who will most likely be the chairman, said yesterday: "We intend to start from the beginning and go to the bottom of the matters we are to investigate. The white slave traffic was mentioned, and incidentally by those who advocated the investigation of intelligence offices as the hearings before the legislative committees. It was argued that they should be investigated, the charge being made that sometimes girls are procured through such offices."

The main work of the committee will include a set of regulations by which the intelligence office business will be governed under the State control. The commission will hear arguments as to the advisability of requiring bonds from intelligence offices; of preventing collusion in the offices; of the division of fees; of requiring reports to be made to the bureau of statistics, and of the collection and uniformity of fees and the proper inspection of the offices.

The credit of bringing about the investigation is due to Walter Lincoln Sears, Superintendent of the Massachusetts Free Employment Bureaus. For years Mr. Sears has been agitating the need of creating legislation required in the business. Through his efforts there have been many discussions in the Legislature, in the Governor's office, and occasionally both branches have come to pass some legislation in the measure. It is expected that the coming investigation will result in partial duties of intelligence office and employment bureau business on a higher plane than heretofore.

LAWRENCE CASE NEAR END.

Now Believe Charges Will Go to the Jury by Tuesday.

SALEM, July 9.—The defense in the Lawrence bribery cases, which have been on trial here in the Superior Court, will be completed by Monday night. It is expected that the cases will be given to the jury Tuesday. The defendants are Mayor Frederick P. White, George Sharon, Michael Burns, Samuel Kress, Ernest Dube and Thomas A. Keenan, who face the second trial, charged with conspiracy in attempting to oust Chief Lawrence Gallagher of Revere, December in an attempt to remove Fire Chief Hennessey from office.

Mayor White, on the stand, denied any conspiracy to remove Chief Hennessey. Clerk Hamilton and Mayor White testified that they had preferred charges against Hennessey and that the chief would have been removed if the Mayor could have secured enough votes of aldermen to do it.

SOCIETIES AID THE FLOATING HOSPITAL

Many Donations for the Benefit of the Sick Babies Received Yesterday.

Many donations were received yesterday by Manager G. Loring Briggs of the Boston Floating Hospital. They included $50 from the First Parish Lend-a-Hand Society of Hingham, $40.80 from the Sunshine Club of Cohasset; $12 from the Elder Bowling Club, and $2.50 from three young girl residents of Littleton. Many other money subscriptions are expected during the coming week.

Yesterday the year carried $13, many of the being infants who were confined to the hospital with a number of them quite ill, were greatly relieved by the cooling atmosphere of the harbor.

Wonderful improvements have been shown in the babies in the hospital, who are taking the daily trips. Some of them when first brought here never recovered from various hot-weather troubles, have taken on flesh and are rapidly recovering, looked for. Each day brings a slight increase in the number of children.

A little sadness some times enters into the joy of the occasion when a child whose death seemed to be imminent came on board, their little one was fully restored to health, to meet it at the dock. Nurses later said her that her baby had pressed the Manager Briggs has delivered a number of lectures on the floating hospital, which have been very effective towards aiding the cause. The expense of the ship is tremendous, and the support comes from voluntary gifts.

MINORS BARRED BY BOARD.

Industries Specified at Which They Must Not Work.

To protect the health of minors under eighteen years, the Massachusetts State Board of Health announced yesterday that they can no longer be employed in certain manufacturing processes, notably those exposing them to poisonous or irritating gases, dusts, substances or fumes or extreme of heats. Other States, in making the provision, have barred minors from entire industries which contain certain injurious processes, irrespective of any noninjurious processes. The Massachusetts State Board of Health cites dangerous processes alone, among them being:

Processes in the manufacture of colored lead, lead pipe, solder and plumbers' supplies, cutting metal articles mixed with lead, tin or of lead alone, exposure to lead or its dust, and the use of it in stripping, handling of white lead or or lead monoxide in rubber factories, lead paint grinding, dry working in lead paint or batterdor, die cutting by hand, setting, cleaning or repairing type by hand, glazing pottery, exposure to graphite in making stove polish, brushing, wiping, polishing, grinding, cutlery or glazing and polishing emery and buffing wheels, working pearl shell, talc dusting in rubber works, exposure to benzine, benzol or benzine or leather factories, gassing in textile plants, print work in textile mills, gold dipping and melting and silvering glass.

BANK EXAMINERS MEET.

Seven Institutions Liquidated During First Half of Year.

For the purpose of perfecting the system of national bank examinations the eight national bank examiners of the New England district, upon recommendations of Comptroller of the Currency Lawrence Murray held a meeting at the office of Chairman Alfred Ewer, No. 101 Devonshire street, Monday morning and yesterday noon. In the report to be sent to Comptroller Murray at Washington the following table will be embodied: Number of banks in New England to week ending October 7, covering the six months just ended, 7; number of banks in voluntary liquidation, 1; by liquidation, 2. Chinese Slippers and Rice to Figure in Farewell to Dorchester Couple.

CHINESE slippers and Chinese rice will play an important part in the farewell to be rendered by the relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Isaiah Lee Sharpman of Dorchester, who will leave Boston Tuesday on their unique honeymoon trip. Slippers and rice usually are expected when honeymooners leave, but they are exceptionally fitting on Tuesday when the Sharpmans leave, for a honeymoon in China. The groom was graduated from Harvard Law School. The couple will sail direct to Tien-Tsin, China, where the groom will teach economics and law in the Imperial Pei-Yang University. The young couple were married last week Thursday night, the wedding crowning a schoolgirl romance. Mr. Sharpman also was a graduate of the Boston Latin School in 1903, Harvard in 1907 and Harvard Law School this year. He is a member of the Association for Re- At Harvard he was President of the Harvard Memorial Society. Mrs. Sharpman before her marriage was Miss Minnie Skinner of Chicago. She was graduated from Dorchester High School and was associated with a number of clubs and charitable organizations.

ALEXANDER IRVINE OPENS CONFERENCE

Cambridge Episcopalians to Hear New York Churchman Tomorrow Night.

With the doors of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension of New York City barred against him, Alexander Irvine, the well-known lecturer on social questions, has been received with open arms by the Episcopalians of Cambridge. He will speak tomorrow evening in Christ Church parish rooms, where Rev. Prescott Evarts, son of the late Senator Evarts, is rector, with the endorsement of the Episcopal Conference for Church Work, which has just begun their sessions in that city.

Under the heading, "The Ethical Tragedy of the Economic Problem," he will deliver an address, and take issue with many of those who criticised his attitude in New York. After being a Congregational minister for many years in the State of Connecticut, Mr. Irvine entered the Episcopal ministry and became a lay-reader, and began his work among the toiling masses of the city slums. The Conference for Church Work has given prominence to Mr. Irvine, by formally open the course of study outlined by that body.

Other speakers of note who will be heard during the week July 9-16, are: Bishop David Z. T. Yui of China, Bishop Knight of Cuba, Rev. Hiram B. D. F. Hyde of New York; Rev. P. M. Rhinelander of Cambridge, Bishop of Indianapolis and others. Mr. Yui, who will speak upon mission work in China, is a graduate of Harvard. For three generations his family have been Christians.

The Bible studies will be conducted by Rev. Max L. Kemp of Cambridge, and Rev. Harvey O. Officer, O. H. C., of West Park, New York. Among the women who will take part at the conference are Mrs. Mary Cummings, wife of Rev. Alexander V. G. Allen of Cambridge, Miss H. E. Kemp of Lowell and Miss Frances S. T. Knapp of New York. Robert A. Woods of Boston and Robert A. Gardiner of the city will discuss the problem of the negro in the church.

$99,500 DAMAGES ASKED.

Fourteen Civil Suits Are Filed in Dedham Courts.

Fourteen civil suits for damages totalling $99,500, were filed with the clerk of the Superior Court in Dedham yesterday. Several of the suits are against the New Haven, the Boston Elevated and the Old Colony street railroad companies.

Augustus Anderson, administrator of the estate of the late Frederick A. Dennison of Stoughton entered suit for $15,000 against Mr. Murray B. Fearing of Newport, R. I., charging that F. A. Anderson was killed by Mr. Fearing's automobile in Stoughton April 14 and died from the injuries. The father and mother of the dead man are together for $7,500 for their son's services.

Mary Ellen Dowling of Dedham entered suit against Francis P. Allen of Brookline for $5,000 damages. Miss Dowling, a former 8 inst., met after alighting from a trolley car near Tufts Medical School on Washington avenue, he was knocked down and injured by Mr. Allen's automobile.

LAWYER IS DISBARRED.

Warren Divorce Case Incident Disposed of by Court.

PROVIDENCE, July 9.—The Supreme Court of this State to-day handed down an opinion in the case of Maurice Murray, a lawyer of Newport, who was fined $400 from Attorney Maximilian Ferger. By the decision of the court Lisott is disbarred for a year and Murray's fine is abolished. The action grew out of the divorce action brought by Mary A. Warren against Edmund M. Warren. Murray was engaged by Lisott, who was attorney for Mrs. Warren, to collect money from the case. A Boston attorney engaged by Mr. Warren, it is charged by Lisott, who was instructed to engage Murray for the defense. It was charged that Murray agreed to divide sides in the case, but failed to receive the $400.

LODGE TELLS REPUBLICANS NEW TARIFF IS THE BEST EVER.

SENATOR AT BRIGHTON REPUBLICAN CLUB OUTING DEFENDS G. O. P. POLICIES

Party Leaders, Including Governor Draper, Hear Doctrines Expounded at Bass Point Gathering---Representative Washburn Tells a Story---But the Name of Butler Ames Was Not Mentioned by the Faithful.

HENRY CABOT LODGE, who had a good deal to do with it, stood up before 250 Republicans from Brighton yesterday down at the Bass Point House in Nahant, and said a good word for the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill. Mr. Lodge carefully called it the "Payne" bill. He says it isn't perfect, but on the average it represents a 5 per cent. reduction from the Dingley rates and is the best tariff bill ever enacted into law.

The 250 members of the Brighton Republican Club, having sailed down the harbor on their first annual outing, cheered and applauded Mr. Lodge to the echo. They were having a fine time, the sail had been simply delightful, and they were in the mood for cheering Od Doc Cook, or the fourth dimension, r re re-ciprocal demurrage, or about anything else you don't want to waste any time over on a day off.

Washburn Carries the Day With a Story.

Senator Lodge, looking as fit as a fiddle, was talking to all the people of the Commonwealth, and he took this occasion to go on record as to a Board of Tariff Experts, which we've got to have, he says, the rights and privileges of business, and the duty of everybody in general to heed of a Democratic majority in the next House of Representatives if we don't want commerce and industry in this fair land to go straight to the pot. Also, the Senator placed a beautiful laurel wreath on the noble brow of Eben S. Draper.

The folks from Brighton had a bully time of it. They put away a lot of clams and schrod, and lobster, and stuff, they listened to a brass band that they brought along with them, they got into a mammoth group picture with the big fellows (price one dollar) and they heard a few selected thoughts from Governor Draper, Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham and Representative Robert M. Washburn of Worcester. Mr. Lodge was the intellectual and oratorical dessert. There was no talk about the United States Senatorship, or Butler Ames of Lowell, except that "Bob" Washburn told this story:

"I have been informed that the next Massachusetts Legislature will have to discriminate between two prominent sons of Massachusetts. That reminds me," Mr. Toastmaster, of an experience of Mr. Bryan, when once he essayed to go to Congress.

"I am sorry to say he sought the office, and, laying out through the rural districts, confided to the peoples that he was willing to serve them at Washington.

"He was particularly delighted when he found one farmer who knew that the fight was in progress. Mr. Bryan, happy, confided him to learn where he had got the information.

"'I was up to the store, last night,' said the honest yeoman, and I here the boys lafing about it.'"

Washburn didn't mention Butler Ames. He didn't have to. The Brighton Regulars nearly fell off their chairs with laughter. Senator Lodge's whiskers bobbled. A laugh could be seen spreading all over his countenance. Washburn was the hit of the day.

The notables at the head table included: Representative Martin Hayes, toastmaster; Senator Lodge, President William H. Squires of the Ward 25 Republican Club, having its "first annual outing;" Governor Draper, Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, Representative Washburn, Senator George Holden Tinkham, Charles H. Innes, the Rev. John O. Hasrvig of Allston Congregational Church, who offered prayer; Representative Joseph B. Brown, Mayor Charles E. Hatfield of Newton, chairman of the State Committee; Postmaster Edward C. Mansfield, Courtenay Guild, Chairman Edmund C. Graves of the Republican City Committee, Secretary Charles Hunnel Groves of the State Committee, Frank W. Krogman, former Senator Charles D. B Fisk, Representative Channing Cox, Representative Courtenay Crocker, former Representative Lewis J. Hewitt, Bristow Draper, Secretary Edward Hormel of the City Committee, and "Ted" Clark, Mr. Lodge's hired help at campaign headquarters in Barrister's Hall.

The feature of the day, of course, was the Senator's speech. More men and women climbed upon the head waterwork of the Bass Point House to hear it than there were auditors in the dining hall.

make up our tariff schedules on disinterested and expert evidence and not in the helter-skelter way in which all tariffs hitherto have been made.

"Nothing in any way has been to resist all attempts to get the facts through a board of experts.

"Some people have seemed to have an inborn dislike for facts (laughter) just as they have to any reference to history. (Laughter). They want to come in and repeal the tariff in the old way, on the principle of a tariff for revenue only, which means that they are really for protection.

"That is what it means for their own districts, at least, and free trade for the districts they don't represent.

"Mine was not one of any ideal party. You don't get any party that will come in and give to you, specifically, to every American industry and at the same time let everything in free that you particularly desire. That party has not yet existed. You won't get any party of that kind. You get in the Democratic party, and with all its merits the Democratic party is not a party of angels. (Laughter.) It is a party of human beings; very human beings. (Laughter.)

Quotes Bryan on Tariff.

I want to call your attention to the divergent views of some noteworthy Democrats. I had been a speech by Senator Bailey of Texas, one of the ablest men in our public life of either party. It is a reply to Mr. Bryan, who had been down in Texas criticising Senator Bailey.

Senator Lodge quoted a statement of Mr. Bryan's in Texas—quoted over again in Massachusetts—as "nullifying" and some Republicans contending for a real protective tariff, while some Democrats were contending for something getting rid of the tariff altogether. Then said Mr. Bryan, "that Republicans are any worse than Democrats who favor a tariff for revenue only?" Read on, you Texas Senators are divided. Which are you with?

Out of their own mouths be revealed that they are not going to deal with the tariff, and yet we are asked to come in and help them. I am asked to come in and fear and doubt in every industry in this country, asked to let them do what they are divided about; to make this great search for the truth, and to run the risk of disaster failure of revising the tariff.

Now let me mention the "money" article from a Washington newspaper of last Spring. It is dated April 29, and it deals in part with the Democratic victory at the polls in the Congressional districts of New York.

The article said that the Democratic victory at Rochester had been given as a valid reason for the attack, as a challenge to a Democratic majority in Congress which, in the words of the Democratic leaders of the country was frightened or the more suggestion of Democratic victory.

Revision Method Faulty.

Some may suggest that the stock market, after all, is only a barometer, yet the captains of industry, the leaders of business make a serious error. The barometer is not a storm, to be sure, but when it registers indication that the storm is coming an indication that it well to take this out great essential fact into consideration. The important thing is to prevent another period like the last tariff until we have first revised and changed the method on which tariff schedules have been made.

That can only be assured by holding the House of Representatives in the control of the Republican party. I freely myself this week that I freely admit was a faulty method, we have been good in revising and could have been made under the circumstances better than I say, for more complete and more thorough than I am on the committee which has its every item and every line and to eliminate all that I think I know that it contains what I think were faults.

Remember that we were dealing with the Dingley law. We started a great deal about it by not being a downward revision. It was not a revision of protection to what the actual results of this tariff have been in the collection of duties.

Our opponents always calculate the rate on dutiable articles alone. They never take into consideration the dutiable article, and of course, every article that comes in ought to be calculated in giving the average rate. The Dingley law, I have here enumerates first the dutiable articles and then the articles admitted free.

Under the McKinley tariff, the average rate was 48 8-10 per cent. on dutiable articles and on all articles 20 1-10.

Under the Wilson tariff, the great Democratic revision in the interest of free trade and lower duties, the average rate on dutiable imports was 46 8-10, or only two per cent lower, and the average duty on all articles was 22.7.

Under the Dingley tariff, 42 5-10 on dutiable articles and 22 9-10 on all articles.

Under the Payne tariff (Senator Lodge referred to it as the Payne-Aldrich law) in force for ten months, the average was 41 7-10 per cent. on dutiable articles and 20 8-10 per cent. on all articles, and in the last month for which figures are at hand, the month of May, the average was 35 3-10 on dutiable articles and on all articles was 19.2.

Two per cent. lower than the Wilson Democratic bill, 6 per cent. lower than the Dingley bill, and, on all articles, 1 per cent. lower than the lowest rate ever charged. This shows a greater revision downward than any tariff legislation for years and a great deal more than in the Wilson bill. To have dropped the rate 5 per cent. from the figures of the Dingley bill was enough of itself to justify every man who voted for the Payne bill. It simply rushed for the boat.

(Which led Senator Lodge to say that "we should see, of all the States, that one which has suffered the most at the hands of the Republican party and more particularly the brutal Payne-Aldrich tariff, should be some fine things about Draper.

Senator Lodge was applauded.

Fears Business Shake Up.

Nothing could be worse for the business interests of this country than to plunge into another revision of the tariff. The suggestion of it is one of the leading causes to-day for the business we observe throughout the country. It will be shown in the stock market reports on the day following the election, if there is to be a Democratic House.

We shall see a universal decline. The barometer will fall rapidly, indicating the approach of a gale in which it will be seen since 1892.

Industries as Massachusetts They are found in every valley, every village and every hamlet of the Commonwealth. The question of the tariff means more to this State than to any other. None of the States, excepting New York and New Jersey, perhaps, has such a variety of small industries. Industries, large in which not more than $1,000,000 is invested.

Senator Lodge said that they had spoken of specifically in this one single item of hosiery and knit goods. Small concerns, working as a rule with not more than $1,000,000 capital.

Shake Up Coming.

Now, I say, that the Democratic victory at Rochester had been given as a valid reason for the attack, as a challenge to a Democratic majority in Congress which, in the words of the Democratic leaders of the country was frightened or the more suggestion of Democratic victory.

Revision Method Faulty.

Some may suggest that the stock market, after all, is only a barometer, yet the captains of industry, the leaders of business make a serious error. to Mr. Foss for Governor and he will say in effect:

"We are not going to try to. We will not have to. What is the unlawful going to do? Vote for Draper, who twice vetoed the eight-hour bill for laborers employed on public works?

One of the most peculiar phases of the situation is that Senator Vahey persists in telling his friends that he is very much of a candidate, and, indeed, the only candidate, for his friends say Senator Vahey will not believe that Foss is a candidate for the governorship. He believes that when the time comes" Foss will be 2nd Vahey.

Senator Vahey has lately sent a scout to two through the State on his own account. Both reports have reported as to himself local Vahey sentiment. They can not have failed with many members of the Democratic State Committee.

When it was put up squarely to one of the Foss shouters yesterday that Mr. Foss might withdraw his name if the Foss shouter replied that the Foss people are getting up the convention, notwithstanding. If, however, anything should happen to the Foss candidacy, the convention, he said, will be switched to some other man. "And that won't be Vahey," he said.

Vahey Man Raps Machine.

One admirer of Vahey declared yesterday that Senator Vahey having demonstrated his ability as a vote-getter, the big fellows who have long controlled the Democratic machine in Massachusetts should not think him dangerous, will want to be rid of him. They do not try again. These big fellows have always looked upon Vahey as too much of a radical. They never approved of his course on Beacon Hill. They let him have the nomination for Governor in 1908 because the Springfield convention having just come off—nobody else would take it, and they could not have foreseen the discovery of Foss, and the campaign Foss helped to put up, these big fellows would have blocked the Vahey nomination last year.

The attitude of the Boston Democrats towards Vahey was explained yesterday by one of the most influential men who are for congressional nomination.

"Jim Vahey," said this young man, "has no reason to find fault with what the Boston crowd has done for him. He has had his chance, and if he had been a real Democrats ought to be left free to turn themselves loose.

"Vahey has never been strong in the convention. He met who have to go out and do the work throughout the year have never appeared for him. You saw that last Fall when, addressing the convention, he boosted Gillis, a Hill man, for presiding officer, and expressed the hope that some day he might place Hill's name in nomination for the governorship.

"Democrats know that convention yelled back at him? 'Do it now.' Do it now, Jim!' Hamlin hasn't been a real Democrat since he left the Democratic State Committee. Eagan, one of the most influential men of the town who sneeze when Hon. Hosea Knowlton—Boston Boy—Foss.

Mr. Foss is giving out no statements. The consultation of political physicians which is going on at the Parker House in Boston is above everything else to refresh their memories.

Until well along towards Tuesday, September 27, when the State Convention will be held to Faneuil Hall, Mr. Foss is to have only a handful of men at his elbow—Macleod, McDonald, Fitzgerald, Maynard and a great army of workers are getting up the show.

LODGE CUTS SUBSIDY FOR NAHANT BOAT

The Republican party is strong for shipping subsidies and Henry Cabot Lodge is one of the strongest supporters of subsidy in all affairs, but when it comes to subsidizing Bass Point Steamboat Company to give direct service between Nahant and Boston the junior Senator draws the line.

There was a town meeting in Nahant the other day and among those in the meeting was Mr. Lodge. Nahant knows the fact that he is a United States Senator didn't keep him out of the town meeting, where some of the citizens had to be excused by the other citizens of Nahant.

It's about three-quarters of an hour from Nahant to Boston by steamer, and by train and trolley will about the same if you make connections. Therefore, the town of Nahant has always given up to the Bass Point Steamboat Company a modest subsidy for direct service with Boston.

Cut Subsidy Allowance In Two.

In former years it was $2,000 that the steamship company received, but this year the council so voted to reduce the subsidy to $1,000. President Fred Wilson, of the steamship company, is said to be one of the very much grieved. His grief might have been lessened by giving Lodge's wife the boot for Henry Cabot Lodge.

Admission of Nahant into Massachusetts was sitting in a rickety chair in the front row of the House, but he feel like withdrawing right over and so did President Wilson of the steamship.

The delighted residents of Nahant then heard Lodge, the statesman, who has charmed the United States Senate, bring down the house when the Democratic Senators used to pull it opposition to national shipping subsidy. Lodge was willing to pay $1,000 for the service, but he put up the argument that the people should rather than pay $2,000 he would be willing to pay $1,000 for the service.

As Lodge hardly ever comes to Boston and then only over to Beverly, and then in case a motor car, his vote not a great deal of interest to the people of Nahant when the town meeting.

The Council to Quit Nahant.

It was voted to give the company $1,000, take it or leave it, but in response to the appeals of President Wilson the period of the service was shortened to end September 5 instead of September 15.

Lodge declared that the steamship company was making money and could get along without the subsidy. Wilson said that extra trips to Nahant would soon put on what little profits the steamship line was winding, and there you are.

Senator Lodge was victorious, and it though the steamship people threatened to abandon Nahant and confine its efforts to Bass Point it decided not to do so.

"I AM A REPUBLICAN" SAYS SENATOR LODGE

I am one who dislikes very much the classification of Republicans. I am not an Insurgent or a Reactionary, a Progressive or a Conservative. I am simply a Republican. A Republican who differs with another Republican about the details of a bill need not be classed as an Insurgent.

I believe myself that, working on what I freely admit was a faulty method, we made as good a revision of the tariff as could have been made under the circumstances. And nobody is more conscious of the errors than I am, for I was on the committee which was obliged to frame it and to examine every item.

You per cent. lower than the Wilson Democratic bill, 6 per cent. lower than the Dingley bill, and on all articles 1 per cent. lower than the lowest rate ever charged.' This shows a greater revision downwards than any tariff legislation for years, and a great deal more than in the Wilson Bill. To have dropped the rate 5 per cent. from the figures of the Dingley Bill was enough of itself to justify every man who voted for the Payne Bill. It shows that, working as I admit on defective methods, we brought out a remarkably good result—Senator Lodge in Bass Point Speech.

BOSTON DEMOCRATS MAY LOSE TWO SEATS

AT just the hour yesterday when Chairman Fred J. Macleod of the Democratic State Committee was about to claim the election this Fall of Democratic Congressmen in place of Butler Ames of Lowell and Charles Q. Tirrell of Natick, Chairman Charles E. Hatfield of the Republican State Committee put out bulletins in which he forecasted the capture by Republicans of the O'Connell district and the Andrew J. Peters district in Boston.

The Republican leaders seriously hope and expect to wrest two of the three Boston districts from the Democrats. They assume they are going to do it. The districts are the Tenth, now represented by Congressman J. O'Connell, and the Eleventh, represented by Andrew J. Peters.

In the Tenth district two years ago Congressman O'Connell beat J. Mitchell Galvin, Republican, by 1,000 votes. This year O'Connell will have to fight Councillor James M. Curley for the nomination. Whatever the outcome of this contest in the primaries the winner will have to face Galvin in the finals.

Would Draft O'Meara.

For the fight in the Eleventh district Senator Lodge hopes to draft Police Commissioner Arthur O'Meara. Senator Lodge and those about him believe O'Meara would be a strong candidate. Whether the police would be a strong candidate. Whether the police chalked out to be safety Republican. It would be a fight between the police who not had early ambitions as a Republican, and the friends of Congressman Peters, who assess O'Meara for the nomination and was beaten at the polls by John A. Sullivan, one of the Finance Commission, the strictest integrity he would have indeed once or so Frank Richardson of Essex, or some other friend of his, and that convention would have been stampeded.

Boston Saved Vahey Before.

"As it was, Conghlin of Fall River, who was the Democratic candidate, gave Vahey a splendid run for the nomination.

"But Boston stood solidly for Vahey and Vahey, being a Bostonian, and a very genial, so soon to split in the city fight, Boston has a right to turn to Foss."

Speaking of Boston politics, democratic politicians of the town who sneeze when Hon. Hosea Knowlton—Boston Boy—Foss.

Mr. Foss is giving out no statements. The consultation of political physicians which is going on at the Parker House in Boston is above everything else to refresh their memories.

Until well along towards Tuesday, September 27, when the State Convention will be held to Faneuil Hall, Mr. Foss is to have only a handful of men at his elbow—Macleod, McDonald, Fitzgerald, Maynard and a great army of workers are getting up the show.

Fight for Keliher's Seat.

The Boston district that not even the most optimistic of Republicans is going to carry—is John F. Keliher's, the Sixth, represented by John A. Keliher. The Ninth is about the centre of the warmest fight in its history. Keliher is back from Washington and says the fight is beginning to get hot. They say there is nothing to it that the Congressman will run again, whereupon these fellows are that are talked of—one doesn't know exactly why—Congressman like he has run over those who have momentarily stood in his way.

The Democrats who are after it in number In July, with indications pointing to the elimination of Keliher, there will be a small pot of contestants enter the ring.

William Cahir, of Charlestown, who was in the House of Representatives a few years ago, is now the only announced candidate member of the Governor's Council, but it is known that he has been out there for months like a fine tooth comb. So much for the work in the district, which includes Charlestown, East Boston, the Captain and Ward 2 in Ward 3, Wards 7 and two precincts in Ward 12...la comprise the district.

Murray is twenty-nine years old, weighs less than 120 pounds and is a veritable fire wire. He was graduated from Harvard in 1904, from the Harvard Law School in 1908, working meanwhile as a newspaper reporter, and then got up the law firm of Brown, Field & Murray. He was born in the district which he is seeking, and is of a type of Boston politician that has about passed away, and seems to that effect.

Sooner or later Congressman Keliher will meet Murray, and Murray is a most characteristic fashion, and then, as Dr. Holmes says, then it is Murray is expected to be longing for that time.

David H. Shaw, also of Charlestown, former election commissioner and for two years a member of the Governor's Council of the Legislature, and Timothy A. Calahan of Ward 11, Dorchester, are also said to be after the Congressman's place.

Inside of the moment is, which man among them has the fullest support of Mayor Fitzgerald? Murray said yesterday that he doesn't care.

Keliher was the bitterest opponent of Fitzgerald in the city fight. His friends say Fitzgerald isn't the power under the new charter that the Mayor of Boston was in other days. Keliher expects to win handsomely if he should go down it will be fighting gloriously.

Thoughtful Democrats out in the O'Connell district say the thing for every true Democrat to keep in mind is that margin of four measly votes by which O'Connell pulled out from Galvin in the high two years ago.

James M. Curley said the other day that it was this situation, largely, which brought him into the contest. Curley says O'Connell has had two terms. He says O'Connell raised the "no third term" cry four years ago against William S. McNary.

"Since last February," Curley said yesterday, "I have addressed 150 different organizations throughout the district. The people of the district are with me. The sentiment is practically over now as Mr. O'Connell will learn when he begins to get around a bit."

Congressman O'Connell is inclined to laugh at the contest reported to be in progress against him. "The fact is," he says, "that there isn't a leader in the entire district with Curley. Personally I do not believe that Mr. Curley is quite serious in his candidacy."

The O'Connell Club will hold its customary August outing at Nantasket and the real big guns from Congress are coming on to bowse for O'Connell.

Meantime James R. Connolly, known to the world of readers as the author of sensational tales of the sea, and a warm personal friend of Theodore Roosevelt, is quietly conducting a campaign in this district against the Finance Commission. Mr. Connolly believes that the Democrats are utterly tired of the practical domination of the city and that when the district has heard from him and has had a chance to see him man to man, Congressman O'Connell and Councillor Curley will have somebody else to power at Washington.

Congressman Andrew J. Peters has let it be known in the Eleventh that he would like to go back to the Democratic city district, at least, to Washington.

Some of them talk as if that is about all there would be to it. Congressman Peters—"go ahead"—from Mr. Macleod—and the election is all over.

Speaking figuratively, the smoke—in July—the Republican managers say—in the Eleventh district are not very much. They say they are not worrying as to a lot about what happens in November to Congressman Peters. Some of Peters' friends say looks in July like a sure winner. As for John Mitchell beating Tirrell, or beating Brother Wilder if Wilder forms himself in the convention, what will it matter, in the round-up, the machinists say. Anyhow, they are in the machine camp up a workable personal machine and can be depended upon to get out and help meet him at every step and the battle will be worth while.

Seaver Finds Opening.

Former Senator Seaver is bearing from his friends in the Eleventh that now is the time for a good man like Seaver to come to the aid of the party. Mr. Seaver's friends are explaining to him that Democratic majority can be become red hot at any moment. In that event, Mr. Seaver, he believes his friends, is just the man to come to the front. "Boys, don't remember the dear old party! If you don't remember it, I shall have to do it quietly, I shall have to go down to Washington myself."

Which, in the opinion of the astute Captain Judge, is the psychological moment to signal from the bench for a squeeze play. Seaver is known in the Eleventh district where Mr. Lodge pulls W. Dudley Cotting's wires. He is a friend of Mr. and Mrs. O'Meara.

Former W. Prentiss Parker, of Kidder, Peabody & Co., who has been his name in connection with the presidential nomination in the fight of Mr. Lodge hopes Mr. O'Meara will be induced to run for Congress in the Eleventh district. Senator Parker is likely to be heard from in the near future in the Eighth Suffolk District.

Representative William Bullock, Democrat, of Ward 16, similarly talked of for Congress in the O'Connell-Curley-Connolly district, will run for the State Senate from Ward 16. Wards 17 and 18 send Senator Patrick H. O'Connor of the Sixth district, who has had two terms.

With the Republican Mr. Galvin in the background of the Curley-O'Connell plan—and that margin of four votes—and with Lodge trying to get O'Meara into the opening that may be made by the Dowdeners, the Democratic campaigns in Boston promise to be more spectacular, some time, than has been seen for a long while, come to think of it, since the Storrow-Fitz episode.

HOW MR. TAFT PUTS IN HIS VACATION AS FAT-FIGHTER

President Puts on the Gloves With His Trainer for a Few Fast Rounds.

BEVERLY, July 9.—Thousands of people paid large sums to visit a training camp in Nevada and see a fat gentleman endeavor to get himself in condition for the prize ring.

Right here in Massachusetts, the President of the United States goes through the same strenuous exercises in order to get rid of the fat that has accumulated on his person since he was inaugurated.

And what's more, he does it for nothing.

President Taft is getting fat. He can't help it. He is getting fat while he is trying to keep from getting fat. He has taken a brisk off-hand walk for miles and miles, but it has done no good. He has played golf, but it has not helped matters any.

He has sat blissfully on the veranda of his summer home, but that has not done the trick.

He has gone sailing and fishing, but that has failed to work the charm.

He has even gone in bathing, but that has not helped him to get rid of the fat.

He has done all these things, and he has done them faithfully, but the fat will not leave him.

So there is nothing else to do but to get into training and fight it out with the fat.

Guards Snoo Away Sightseers.

This started at 7 o'clock, and if the hour were earlier than 7 o'clock it would be necessary to secure a permit to see the morning drill of the President.

The President is not taking any chances of being disturbed by sightseers during the time he is engaged in his daily exercises. He has stationed a number of guards around the cottage, and these guards have been instructed to keep all visitors away from the premises during the hours that the President is engaged in his daily exercises.

The President's training camp is equipped with chest weights, rings, bars and other athletic appurtenances. There is also a wrestling mat and two sets of boxing gloves.

Mr. Taft started in last week to take off superfluous pounds. When he left Beverly last Saturday he weighed 265 pounds. He says that he is going to get down to 250 pounds, and if he can get down to that weight he will be satisfied.

Taft's weight is about 285 pounds, he stands six feet one and one-half inches in his stockings, and he is about seventy-three inches around the waist.

They Up a Lively Bout.

Mr. Taft's day at his home in Beverly starts at 7 o'clock. He is then awakened by a valet, who brings him a large pitcher of ice water.

The President drinks a glass of water, and then he is ready for his morning exercises.

Mr. Taft's trainer, Pierce, arrives at the house at 7 o'clock, and the two men then go to the gymnasium, which is a building in the rear of the President's cottage.

Here Mr. Taft and Pierce put on the gloves and have a lively bout.

After the boxing contest the President takes a shower bath, and then he dresses in a business suit and starts out for a walk or a ride.

Mr. Taft has been walking a great deal since he has been in Beverly, and he has been riding in his automobile a great deal.

The President is very anxious to take a strenuous game of golf, but his friends have succeeded in preventing him from doing so.

They have told him that he is not in condition to play golf, and that if he should attempt to play golf he would overdo himself.

Mr. Taft has been playing golf every morning for some time, and he has been playing a very good game.

He has been playing with Dr. Parker, the physician who is attending him, and Dr. Parker has been giving the President a number of lessons.

The President is very anxious to get a picture of Mr. Parker's golf stroke, and he has tried to get the picture

IRELAND NOW BETTER OFF THAN IN THREE CENTURIES, SAYS MONOGHAN

Declares Democracy That Is Sweeping World Will Drag England Along.

HOME RULE GOAL IS NEAR

Pays Tribute to Irish Christian Brothers as Among World's Great Educators.

ASSERTING that the affairs of Ireland are in a fairer way to-day than they have been in 300 years that new heart and new hope have come to the Irish people, and [illegible] the Irish Christian Brothers for their great work as educators [illegible] Monaghan, acknowledged [illegible] world, Professor J. [illegible] Monaghan of Bell [illegible] New York, gives through the Sunday American to-day, to all friends and sympathizers of Ireland and her cause a complete and graphic picture of the present circumstances and high hopes of the ancient land of Erin.

In his talk for the Sunday American Professor Monahan made a sweep of observation over a vast range of the activities which go to make up the "Irish question," which is to-day is in the forefront of British imperial politics, because of the position held by the Irish party in the House of Commons. In his able exposition Mr. Monahan has shown a full knowledge of European politics and shows conclusively how Ireland is third to the onward march of democracy throughout the world.

"The wind notes and is bound to drag England up with her" is one of the scores of epigrammatic sentences in which Professor Monahan clothes his interesting ideas on one of the great problems of the hour."

Mill Hand to Professor.

This brilliant man whose views on old world affairs the AMERICAN prints this morning had presided the past week over the sessions of the department of Manual Training and Art Education of the National Education Association.

Writer, lecturer, teacher, 8th grade publicist and one of the most eloquent and best known platform speakers between the oceans, Mr. Monaghan is not without limit in his activities. His energy and enthusiasm in whatever he undertakes approach the marvelous. He is ever on the move, traveling, lecturing, instructing. There is not a State in the Union which he has not covered in his speaking tours and no audience that has ever heard him, whether on historical, economic or social problems will fail to all the largest hall in town when he returns to speak again.

He is an authority on the ever interesting Irish question, whose every phase he has followed closely since his boyhood days here in Boston, where he was born. From the very bottom of the ladder he has climbed high by sheer force of pluck and character. In [illegible] first pleasure he worked, real size how as he was, in the mills of Massachusetts and Rhode Island to earn the money to go through school and college. His first came into prominence, after leaving college, when he took the stump for Grover Cleveland and triumphed through State after State in the West advocating the Democratic candidacy for President. His work on the platform was valued so highly that when Mr Cleveland reached the White House one of his first official acts was to appoint Mr. Monaghan as U. S. Consul to Chemnitz, Germany. A reappointment was tendered to him and accepted by the second Cleveland administration. His long residence in Europe gave his quick eye and observant mind rich opportunity to study the men and affairs of the old world, and he returned to America well grounded in its political and economic conditions or every country of Europe.

The son of Irish parents he has ever been deeply interested in Ireland's progress and amelioration, and few men on the American continent can talk in more interesting and instructive style on the Ireland of to-day.

Irish Loyal to Old Land.

Prof Monaghan had just brought to a close the session of the art educational department over which he had presided during convention week in Boston when, in response to the invitation of a reporter for the SUNDAY AMERICAN that he give his views on the Irish situation, he quickly switched his mind from art and its teaching to the great issue of home rule, which is now engaging the anxious attention of

This Week the Boys Who Have Bicycles Are to Be Formed Into a Special Brigade.

SPLENDID progress was made during the past week in the campaign for membership which will stand the Boy Scouts of America in the future in very good stead. GREAT PUBLICLY OWNED WHARF AT NEW ORLEANS, ONE OF THE TWO AMERICAN CITIES THAT OFFER HOPE FOR OUR DOCK SYSTEM.

PROPOSED NEW WHITNEY DOCKS

William Stevens

Bristol was once the second port in England, but she passed as a great seaport when modern steel steamships came into existence drawing thirty feet of water.

No big steamer could enter the Aven, upon which Bristol is situated and the city sank to thirteenth among the seaports of Great Britain.

Business fell off and Bristol slept. But a few years ago there came a realization. The people of the sleepy English city of 400,000 inhabitants woke up. They determined to make Bristol a seaport again. This meant deepening the Avon for several miles to the sea and building at Bristol great docks to accommodate the largest steamers afloat.

In Boston they build docks by erecting piers on piles stretching out into the sea. In Bristol they had to take a great tract of land and dig it out until it was a vast pit forty feet deep. Then they erected piers and freight sheds on the piers and let the water from the Avon flood the artificial docks.

The cost of this enterprise was $15,000,000, and $15,000,000 is a much larger sum to that little English city than it would be to Boston. It was with the greatest difficulty that a State appropriation of $3,000,000 for the East Boston waterfront was secured.

For $15,000,000 marvelous improvements could be effected at Boston, which has a magnificent natural harbor and would not need to dig out the dry land to build docks.

The people of Bristol spent all that money because they knew that it would pay. A city which is a seaport has tremendous advantages over one that has no ocean gateway. The coming of the big steamers brings business. Manufacturing and all the other industries flourish when there is an exit to the sea.

So Bristol was willing to dig a great artificial dock basin and harbor to get the advantages that Boston has and is throwing away.

Bristol has representatives touring this country now drumming up trade and telling Americans what a great city Bristol is and what a fine place to ship goods.

Bristol is not the only city to spend enormous sums on harbor improvements. There are few good harbors in England or on the Continent. Some European seaports have had dredgers literally about as big as Noah's Ark, and have widened and deepened until they could accommodate and depend upon more business than in entering Boston harbor to-day as it was a few years ago.

But It Requires Effort.

MANY EDUCATORS STILL THE GUESTS OF BOSTON

BOSTON SAYS GOODBY, BUT HATES TO SEE THE TEACHERS GO

MISS KATHERINE E. LAHEY.

"Well, its all over. And what a convention week it was!

There have been some who evidently thought that school teachers were absent as an obstructive as the echo of the tread of troops on one of Boston's streets. But they may all be very much mistaken. The sweep down upon the city has made a decided beginning to dissolve more self-assurance, creating the impression that the teacher and in between is not such a mere point of interest as it has been. Things, already in the making, are to be heard about this or as a result of the convention with an emphasis of importance that is bound to come to the front. It doesn't matter how one or two of the delegates may know that there is something to be organized.

Oh, yes there was a convention in town last week. It projected quite ten thousand teachers to the city for its sessions and a great number of reports were generously printed from. The National Educational Association presented its formal report, but those meetings at which its addresses were read, papers were read

New Theories for Students.

Right here it may be said that whether the profession as a whole is to blame or not, the fact remains that the young people are going to need a few theories.

Certain advanced methods and even manner of new viewpoint of the whereof and why of education were most conspicuous in evidence in the usual quality during the past six days.

There were so many notables on around Copley Square at the public meetings suffering from curvature of the spine, bending over their little back loops examining them with a lens that they could point their cameras in almost any direction at any time of the day and get a picture which was famous College professors were in numbers as numerous as Cook's tourists at the Old Art Museum, the headquarters of the local crew.

All New York lights in the education world were registered. State superintendents, glittering Phi Beta Kappa keys and the book marks were so common that one forgot to make a record of the Girls, Girls, Girls, and Then Some.

And the pretty girls and the good looking teachers who used to be gifted. They buttered about and marched to some phalanx they kept the engines of the sight seers on the move at all hours. They filled the air from motormen to trolley pole on the way to Concord and Lexington.

THERE was joy in the hearts of 17,162 Boston fans, who still love Cy Young as a brother, when the real baseball knows how he [illegible] appeared at the Huntington grounds yesterday afternoon and [illegible] for action in the box for Cleveland. Yet before the game was [illegible] in Velocity Lads fell upon Cy and [illegible] the horsehide that he served in [illegible] manner that the joy of the welcoming [illegible] turned into howls of sup[illegible] and derision. PROMOTERS SEEK MAN WHO MIGHT BEAT JACK JOHNSON

All Sorts of Money for the One Who Has a Chance to Win Championship.

While in there in sight to take the measure of John Arthur Johnson champion heavyweight of the world and the greatest pugilist now in the limelight?

To a vast majority the answer comes readily, "No one." Yet in a select few there is an answer. To a few students of the game who for years have listened closely how the winning of championship scraps out there comes a different answer. Youth will be served, the history of the game-ring shows that this has always been the rule and the experts have put on tap fast that it always will be. Johnson is fast passing his limit, and if the pace he lived in the recent past is anywhere to go by the colored champion will now start a gait which is certain to add years to his age much faster than the calendar moves.

Fight promoters, just a bit peevish at the big bunch of coin picked up by the managers of the Fourth of July supplement at Reno, are anxious to get in line for some easy money, and the field of fighters to face Johnson has been looked over closely. The list of prospective champions has been reduced to a score.

Quintet of Possibilities.

Al Kaufman, Tommy Burns, Sam Langford, Joe Jeannette, Con Kelly and Billy Ham Warren Harbour are the ones selected as the last hope of the promoters, and four of these are listed as the "White man's hope." for Sam Langford, the Boston "Tar Baby," and Jeannette are the only colored fighters in the list of supposedly honors.

Although immediately after his defeat of Jim Jeffries, Johnson announced that he would not fight for more than a year there is a strong belief that prospects of easy money against the few fighters in his class will induce the colored champion to enter the ring.

There are now two battles in sight. While in Reno Johnson and Tommy Burns signed preliminary articles for a bout to be fought in London under the management of Hugh McIntosh of Sydney, Australia who managed the affair in which Johnson easily won the championship from Burns a year ago last Christmas.

Just one fight has been arranged in a mystery to all except that it will give Johnson some easy money. The only chance Burns will have will be that of a lucky punch early in the fight. In the last battle between the two, the latter boy did not have a look in, it's a cinch that he has not improved in the eighteen months while Johnson is now better than ever.

People Favor a Langford Match.

Popular sentiment is strong for Johnson's next opponent to be Sam Langford and he is figured by a majority to be the only fighter at present who has a chance to defeat Johnson.

There seems to be some chance of a meeting between the two colored fighters as Johnson is said to have agreed to let Langford if the latter will put up a side bet of $2,000. This proposition has been, called by Joe Woodman, manager of Langford, who announced yesterday that he would post that amount if Johnson would sign articles for a fight with his man.

On representations that Langford was the best right to a battle with the champion the two boys were matched to fight a ten-round affair, but when they fought a draw of six rounds and of twelve in the ten-round affair, the decision over Langford in fifteen rounds. There seems little doubt that the Boston boy Langford would not have been given worse than a draw.

The "White Man's Hope."

Big Al Kaufman is the real "White Man's hope," but even his closest friends openly acknowledge that Kaufman's time is not just ripe and that he needs a year or more to polish up in ring work before he can expect to cope with the great skill of the black man.

In size and weight he looks even with Johnson. Kaufman is 6 feet 2 inches and 4 inches taller than Johnson; in eight years Jeannette weighs not quite 160 pounds and has a reach of 75 inches, which is three inches less than Johnson's reach, but the advantage is of great importance.

In all other physical measurements, except chest normal and expanded, Kaufman is believed to Johnson's equal. A hard hitter, with a good punch in either hand, and with a good knowledge of the skilled boxers might be one fighter who has a chance to carry back the heavyweight championship to the white people.

Joe Jeannette, who has been one of the recent fighting in Paris, is now in this country and will endeavor to be the first to meet Johnson. Jeannette has shown in his battles, the ability to take and give punishment, and to get the distance. He has been badly battered and still won through his gameness in taking and giving a punch. He is one of the few men fighting physically near Johnson as he is five feet eleven inches in height and weighs 190 pounds. He is not a skilled boxer, but of the rugged school of fighting which means that when he is slammed to the floor he gets up and comes back for more and comes back with a punch.

But little known, yet possibly a strong factor in the making of a new champion is William Warren Harbour of New York. Expert authorities who have seen him at work are strong for him to challenge the present champion and they look for a chance.

Harbour first got into the limelight April 12, when he won the heavyweight amateur championship of America in the Pastimes building, this city, by battling his way easily through a field composed of the best amateurs in the country. There was good class to the list of the champion opponents.

His Father a Millionaire.

The main obstacle to matching Harbour and Johnson is the white man's father Amateur Champion Harbour is the son of Colonel William Barbour, millionaire thread manufacturer, who, although an enthusiast in boxing, does not want his son to fight professionally. Although he was at the ringside with a party of friends when the lad won the amateur championship.

Harbour, from every angle, seems to have the goods. He is six feet 2¼ inches in height, weighs 204 pounds in fighting trim. Although only twenty-one, he has been boxing for years and has defeated the mitts with all the great boxers of the day in friendly competition. He has built his own ring with 4-4 timers. Such experts as Charley White, Jim Corbett and Jack Jeffries declare that he has a chance with any of the big ones, so the young fighter has everyone but his parents' objections and John Al Kaufman as the two on whom the white race must rely. Kelley is an unknown quantity—vouched for only by Tommy Ryan, the former welterweight champion.

Moore to Meet O'Toole.

A match has been consummated between Pal Moore, the Quaker City featherweight, and Tommy O'Toole, another great little fighter of that city. They have agreed to battle for six rounds in Philadelphia, Thursday of this week.

up $2,000 with Stakeholder Bob Murphy, the New York hotel man, who was agreed upon, and I had to lend Johnson $2,500."

Rickard exhibited Johnson's receipt for the $10,000 bonus, and said he was going to keep it, with the one from Jeffries, as souvenirs.

As far as the carrying of the purse, said Rickard. It was decided to cut it in two and twenty-five thousand went here. It was a little three days before the date in Reno. When I visited Johnson and asked him if he didn't want to cut the purse differently. He answered, "Cut fifty and fifty. I went to Jeff. I was the only agent between them. No one else knew a thing about it. Jeffries refused to cut it fifty and fifty. He finally accepted a cut of forty and sixty, which seemed to me a most generous offer."

Rickard showed checks for $10,000 and said that he would not like anyone annoyed that his estimate of the gate receipts was correct.

"We drew a house that paid $270,775," he said. "We didn't count in anything in the moving pictures, and the fight against them is only going to make it big for us. It is the best advertising in the world for the pictures."

Pictures for San Francisco.

"There is no ordinance in this city which can prevent the showing of the pictures. We will, show them in San Francisco, all right.

"Those crooked politicians give me a pain. I don't know who is behind Mayor McCarthy, but I do know that the outfit is getting to be run by crooked politicians. This is certainly one crooked town."

GOTCH HINTS THAT JEFFRIES MAY HAVE BEEN GIVEN "DOPE"

RENO, Nev., July 9. Frank A. Gotch, the wrestling champion, who was one of Jeffries' trainers, in discussing the latter's defeat, hinted today that Jeff may have been doped.

"I did not like those three days before the fight," said Gotch, "when Jeff refused to get out and get going and get limbered up. He didn't look right.

"I would agree with William Muldoon as to Jeff's nervous condition.

"When I called him after the fight what he did actually remember from the time he entered the ring," said Gotch, Jim replied: "Well, I remember sitting in the corner and getting up and then I told a man to get my arms up right. I guess I just remembered much about that I did."

In looking over the battle in court today, the lawyers for Jack Jeffries of Los Angeles, where he is very well known, said he had not the speed Monday which he did when pheonomenal for a big man. His hitting power was decreased, he also lost his endurance in the big battle. He was willing to take all kinds of blows in order to land one in return, but that chance never came. Johnson was stronger than in the old days. He was able to hold Jeffries arms backward without any great effort, a thing which probably could have done to Jeff in his prime. In fact, as a matter of history, he is but a shadow of his former self."

MOVING PICTURE MAN DECLARES HIS FIRM NOT IN BRIBE PLOT

NEW YORK, July 9.—"An attempt was made to bribe Jacke Johnson into throwing the championship fight at Reno to James J. Jeffries. Johnson told me the story of the matter, but did not mention the name of the man who approached him. I am certain that the roundabout was framed by a syndicate of gamblers. The story reported in the moving pictures had nothing whatever to do with the fight in the ring or I do not believe that Jack Johnson ever so much as hinted in the most veiled way that the fake and the pictures had anything to do with it. If he did say so much I am sure he will acknowledge it. He was told only in jest when he comes here next week. Our names are clean and we have nothing to conceal."

William T. Rock president of the American Kinegraph Company, which will now ring picture interests on the coast, has combined as the J. & J. Company to produce the motion pictures of the Johnson-Jeffries fight, thus discussed the big battle in all its phases, personal and otherwise, this afternoon.

No Object in Frame-Up.

"What object would there be in us framing the fight?" asked Mr. Rock. "I have been in the picture game long enough to know that you cannot bunk a fight crowd. Had there been the least suspicion of fake in the ringside our investment wouldn't have been worth a cent. Catch the point? Just one cry charging will be back confidence of the public, and a straight man-to-man battle was the only possible chance of establishing that confidence."

"Jeffries was one of the most inspiring athletes you could imagine. His physical splendor, his fighting style did look great. Many a time I stepped for ward to see Jeffries work. When Jeffries was champion he was

CAPITOL MOVED IN REGAL.

Unique Distinction Comes to Well-Known Automobile.

Quite a unique distinction came to the Regal car in Oklahoma the other day. It will be recalled that the State Capitol of Oklahoma was moved from Guthrie to Oklahoma City. Conditions were attached to the removal of the capitol that it should be with its official seal could be left in a safe place for all concerned to obtain it. Accordingly, from time to time, the governor of Oklahoma City has sent a representative to Guthrie to get the seal, but each time he returned without it, as the governor of Guthrie would not trust it out of his hands. Finally the governor of Oklahoma City sent a Regal car to Guthrie, and the governor of Guthrie decided that he would trust the seal with a Regal car. The seal was placed in the tonneau of the car, and the car was driven to Oklahoma City without stopping, arriving there in record time. The governor of Oklahoma City was highly pleased with the way the seal was brought to him, and he immediately issued a proclamation declaring that the capitol had been moved from Guthrie to Oklahoma City.

GLIDDEN TOUR RECORD OF Chalmers "30" Has Never Been Equaled

PREMIER No. 1, 93 Points (Price $3500, H. P. 60)

The Chalmers "30" won fresh honors in the 1910 Glidden Tour. No other car made so splendid a showing. Too much praise cannot be given to any cars which went through this year's Glidden Tour and finished under its own power. No one, except those who actually made the trip, will ever have a fair notion of the obstacles met and overcome on this 2850-mile test.

Words and pictures cannot make plain the racking, cobblestone roads of Kentucky, the stump-studded forest trails of the Tennessee mountains, the swamps of Arkansas, the deep and treacherous sands of Texas, the mud of Kansas, the bridgeless southern streams or the sweltering heat that punished cars and men alike.

One day in Arkansas the Chalmers "30" was compelled to cover 60 continuous miles on first and second speed, yet it never overheated. In Oklahoma all cars had to run for miles along a railroad, over the ties.

Men who have been on every big touring contest held in America say that no other can even compare in harships with the 1910 tour. But in this contest, as in all others, some one car has gained more honors than any other, and that one this time is the Chalmers "30," driven by William Bolger.

This $1500 car was the last to hold its perfect score. It had a perfect record for five terrific days after every other car on the tour had been penalized.

From Cincinnati to Louisville, to Nashville, to Sheffield, to Memphis, to Little Rock, to Hot Springs, to Texarkana, to Dallas, to Lawton, to Oklahoma City, to Wichita—eleven days out of the sixteen—not one point could be assessed against this car, although a representative of a competing company was in the car every minute trying to find some fault on which a penalty could be given.

At Dallas, Texas, local motorists offered to wager 10 to 1 that this car could not retain its perfect score until noon of that day, because of the deep sand that it would have to drag through en route to the noon control—but it did.

The Chalmers "30" made a better showing in the final technical tests than any of its rivals; in this important examination it was assessed only 75 points, as against 84 for its nearest competitor.

The "30" was not penalized for faults in any fundamental feature of construction, not on the motor, the clutch, the transmission, the frame, the wheels, axles, or springs—only on little things, such as body bolts, sthackle-brackets, muffler, fender-iron, etc. And this car still had a brake good enough to stop the car within the required 50 feet; the nearest competing car was heavily penalized on both brakes.

The Chalmers "30" which made this wonderful showing is absolutely a stock car in every respect; not even our competitors have questioned that.

The present leading car has been protested on the ground that it carried certain equipment which is alleged not to be stock equipment on cars regularly sold to the public. The referee of the tour declined to permit the evidence bearing on this subject to be considered, on the ground that the protest was not filed before the cars started on the tour. Inasmuch as there is a rule which prevents any one but members of the technical committee examining cars before the tour starts, the impossibility of one contestant filing a protest against another contestant before the tour is under way is readily apparent.

The question of the possession of the Glidden Trophy is therefore still open—to be settled by the contest board of the American Automobile Association, before whom the protest will undoubtedly be carried. But even if the protest now pending is not sustained, nothing can change the scores and what they signify—nothing can take away from this $1500 car the credit for its almost unbelievable performance.

The public is interested in motoring contests because of the light they throw on the question of which is the best car to buy. Compare the score and the price of the Chalmers "30" with the score and the price of any of its competitors, and then decide where lies the greatest value for you.

The Chalmers "30" has never been defeated in any important contest of speed and endurance by a car in its own power and price class, but on the basis of beauty of line and finish, no less than on that of road performance and endurance, we invite you to compare it with cars of any price.

D. H. HOWLAND GETS NEW WIFE IN HASTE AFTER LOSING ONE IN A HURRY

Marital Adventures of New York Explorer and Author Surprise His Paris Friends.

DIVORCED AND REMARRIED

Miss Hubbell Frees Herself from Him and He Promptly Weds Mlle. Parkina's Sister.

By VANCE THOMPSON.
Special Cable to Boston American.

PARIS, July 9.—Dr. Henry Grinnell Howland of New York, explorer, author and amateur, has acquired a lot of his friends by quietly marrying Miss Adelaide Parkinson of Kansas City, a sister of Mlle. Parkina, the young American singer about whose début in grand opera Mme. Emma Nevada brought out in opera comique a few years ago.

So much secrecy attended Dr. Howland's matrimonial affairs that only a few of his intimate friends knew of the first wife he had married a dozen years ago in Paris. The first wife was Miss Grace Churchill Hubbell, of Greenwich, Conn., and the bridegroom at the time was Dr. Howland, a young New York explorer and author. After the wedding Dr. Howland went to Africa on his honeymoon trip, and Mrs. Howland returned to her own home in Greenwich. Dr. Howland built a new studio for his wife in Paris. Before the studio was completed, however, Mrs. Howland had changed her mind about going to Paris to live, and Dr. Howland went to Greenwich to get his wife. Then it was that Mrs. Howland announced that she had changed her mind about living in Paris.

Her Object Is Accomplished.

"I married you because I loved you," she said, "but I married you because I wanted to get away from Paris."

Dr. Howland, disappointed, gave up the studio and went back to Paris alone. He remained there for several months, and then, it is said, returned to Greenwich and asked his wife to go back to Paris with him. Mrs. Howland refused, and Dr. Howland went back to Paris alone. Soon afterward, it is said, Mrs. Howland began proceedings for a divorce, which was granted.

Dr. Howland has since been much in the society of Miss Adelaide Parkinson, a sister of Mlle. Parkina, the young American singer who made her début in grand opera at the Opéra Comique a few years ago.

Mme. Howland, who is a resident of Paris, was married to Dr. Howland in the studio of Miss Adelaide Parkinson, who was the bridesmaid at the wedding. Miss Parkinson is a sister of Mlle. Parkina, the young American singer who made her début in grand opera at the Opéra Comique a few years ago.

Last week Dr. Howland and Miss Parkinson were married.

Fun Poked At Mr. Roosevelt in New London Music Show

Cockney Comedians Jibe At the Colonel's Universal Knowledge and Freedom of Speech.

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, July 9.—It was bound to come. Ever since the Colonel's arrival in Europe the music hall comedians have been poking fun at him, parodying his every utterance and making him the butt of their jokes. Now comes the first London production of a musical comedy in which Mr. Roosevelt is the principal character. It is called "The Girl Behind the Gun," and is now being produced at the Empire Theatre, Leicester square, London, which is one of the most fashionable music halls in the city.

The first scene in the piece, called "Bon Ton," is laid in the White House, where Colonel Roosevelt enters in a wheel chair, having been made to do American flag and proceeds to tell everything how to run the country. Here is an example of the manner in which Colonel Roosevelt says he gave up the presidency of the city:

"Why, anyone could run it," he says, "Why, I could run it myself."

Then ex-President Roosevelt:

"Who do you say?"

"Why, myself."

MOTION PICTURE PLAYS HAVE WON REAL PLACE IN THEATRICAL FIELD

No Longer a Mere Novelty, but Must Present Really Good Subject Matter to Draw—Picture Trust Keeps Its Views Clean, and Door Receipts Show Public's Appreciation of Value Received.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

ABOUT [illegible] the first motion picture theatre in Boston was opened in Scollay Square, and everybody marvelled at the sublime courage of the man who spent $4,000 to $10,000 just to make two old stores over into a brilliantly lighted and gaudily decorated theatre for so speculative a venture as moving pictures.

It is a matter of record that the net profits of that first picture house during its [illegible] hour life have seldom fallen below $500 weekly—which have rather [illegible] the investment in gold paint and electric lights.

Since the opening of the first picture theatre many others have sprung into existence [illegible] by varying fortunes, until to-day there are about forty within the city limits—and, if you can believe your own eyes, most of them are [illegible].

And now [illegible] theatres for picture displays are being constructed. All of which [illegible] betterment that moving pictures have become a real [illegible].

But [illegible] of the thousands of patrons of the picture theatre have any [illegible] ments involved in the production of films. The [illegible] ... once looked upon as a modest little chaser at vaudeville [illegible] stretched itself into a regular treat with a Standard [illegible] the gay old world knew it. You haven't heard [illegible] waiting in dark corners for the picture [illegible] ory and men's brains are more completely [illegible].

MOVING PICTURE MAKING TRUST.

The [illegible] theatres see various trade-marks upon the films and [illegible] and find that seven of them are American and three [illegible] combined comprise the Motion Picture Patent [illegible].

And [illegible] the picture trust presents advantages to the public that you would [illegible] discover in a century's search through the more popular (or unpopular) trusts. The most important feature of the picture trust's product is the guarantee of decency and cleanliness that goes with every picture. To be sure, many Mayors have announced that pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight will not be permitted on account of the debasing influence they may spread—and these are trust pictures—but in spite of this, every film made by the picture combination is passed upon by a national board of censors before it is [illegible].

Doubtless few people know that the rigid censorship that exists in the production and release of picture films was brought about largely through the picture manufacturers themselves, who invited leading members of educational boards and children's societies to organize a committee of censors to [illegible] good judgement on every film manufactured. The manufacturers [illegible] agree with the public and they are honestly trying to produce [illegible] that will meet with popular approval. That they are succeeding is evident from the constantly increasing number of picture theatres.

VAUDEVILLE AND MOTION PICTURES.

It is an unsettled question in this city whether the introduction of vaudeville acts in picture programs increases their drawing capacity. Houses that have been [illegible] to the simplest kind of variety acts are fully as prosperous as [illegible] but are heavy endpenses for complete theatrical productions. For [illegible], I believe people go to picture shows for the pictures alone, and prefer [illegible] of vaudeville that must be expected for the price [illegible]. Certainly the prediction that moving pictures would kill legitimate [illegible] has not come true, and those managers of theatres where [illegible] are made who attribute the declining interest in theatres to moving pictures are either deluding themselves or trying to work out excuses that will not bear examination. Motion pictures may have taken business from popular-priced houses in which melodrama was given, but it was only because motion photography gave better melodrama at lower price.

No [illegible] a popular-priced theatre or other amusement place has been affected seriously by moving pictures. If the playgoer can get a good run for his money and attend the theatre, but the time has passed when he will accept everything that comes along on the word of a producer that it is a good entertainment.

The amount of money invested in the manufacture of motion picture films earns them serious consideration. The day is ended when picture plays can be successfully enacted before artificial scenery, except in interior scenes. The motion picture of to-day has local color and atmosphere that is impossible to produce in the legitimate drama. Instead of one stock company to enact its camera plays, the big American manufacturers have several companies, which are scattered about the country. There is one company in Arizona, another in New [illegible], another in California, another in Florida, and a large tract of land has [illegible] been leased near the Delaware Water Gap, where outdoor plays are produced.

GOOD ACTORS TO PLAY THE PARTS.

The increasing popularity of moving pictures has been a great thing for actors, too. A film manufacturer does not hesitate to pay Broadway salaries for the right player.

When I asked Manager R. P. Jamette of the Globe Theatre what kind of pictures his audiences liked best, he said there was no choice except that the subjects must be good. "You would hardly believe it," he told me, "but picture audiences are just as discriminating as audiences paying $2 for seats. Our comedies go strong if they are really good, but they fall utterly if weak and poorly constructed. It is the same with our melodramatic subjects. Patrons are demanding the best and with men like Rex Beach writing picture plays you may be sure we are not disappointing our patrons. Poor picture subjects, like poor plays, receive scant attention, but the good things are eagerly accepted."

A visit to the various picture theatres of the city shows that locality has much to do with the popularity of subjects. The downtown houses find audiences more receptive to good comedy, while the houses in the West End are divided between comedy and melodrama.

Manager Joseph Mack at the Hub Theatre declared that his audiences show a discriminating taste that is not exceeded in any of the high-priced theatres. "Patrons of picture houses," he explained, "have passed the point where the novelty of motion picture interests them—they have become educated to the real value of motion pictures as a staple form of dramatic entertainment. I do not believe, as many do, that the picture theatres are ruining business at the bigger houses as a matter of fact, I believe that we are creating new theatregoers from people who have never made it a practice to visit playhouses. We are teaching the beauties of the drama to those who could not afford to enjoy them in any other way, and in addition we are making future patrons for the higher-priced theatres. We are creating an appetite for good plays, which should not be overlooked by the managers of first-class houses."

LOCALITY A LARGE FACTOR.

The most convincing proof that locality governs the popularity of pictures is found at the Scenic Temple, which is right at the front door of a large residential section, and where the bulk of the patrons are women and children. A great deal has been said about the educational value of moving pictures, but this value lies principally in the willingness of patrons to indorse subjects that are purely educational. The pictures that show the beauty of India and other countries, carrying the patron by camera tours to far-away lands, are not the pictures that send the dimes into the box offices of downtown houses. Moving pictures are educational, of course, if taken with the improvement of one's mind in view; but, as far as Boston is concerned, the Scenic Temple is the only house where the instructive film gets a fair showing.

But the sun does not always shine for the "picture" men. The general Summer slump in theatricals has hit everybody this year and, with but few exceptions, the moving picture theatres of the city are playing to smaller receipts than last Summer.

And right on this comes the worst wallop of the season—the refusal of the Mayor to permit exhibitions of the Jeffries-Johnson fight pictures. The sentiment against the fight pictures is so general throughout the country that instead of millions in profits, the films may show actual losses to the manufacturers, who paid heavily for the picture privileges.

At the Majestic Theatre this week there is to be a revival of "Sapho," made from the French novel of the same name by Alphonse Daudet. The scenic features will be [illegible] given on Tuesday afternoon, and Miss Hall will present each lady [illegible] the performance with a handsome photograph of Richard Buhler, starting [illegible] week.

The version of "Sapho" which Miss Hall will present [illegible] last staging was [illegible] which was the scene of [illegible] when the piece was first produced. The cast will include [illegible] Fanny Le Grand and Mr. Buhler as Jean Gaussin. Mr. Dickey will appear as Flechette, Mr. Brooks as Uncle Cesaire, Mr. Herbert as Dimitri, Miss Steele as Madame Hetterie, Miss Temple as Julie and Miss Brownell as Aunt Divonne.

Paragon Park.

Manager Dodge is contemplating the establishment of a temporary roof garden on his Palm Garden at Paragon Park as the most feasible way of [illegible] rate of his greatly increased patronage this season. Although he had increased his former capacity of one thousand to [illegible] at times on the Palm Garden he would [illegible] the veranda, he still finds that it is an almost nightly occurrence that scores are kept waiting for tables in the rush hours. An extension of the Palm Garden would require too elaborate construction in the sea-

BOSTON SOCIETY ENJOYING A REST AT THE SEASHORE

Yachting, Tennis, Motoring and Even Aeroplaning Are Among the Sports That Divert the Minds of City Dwellers, Not Only by the Ocean Zephyrs, but in the Mountain Country and in Country Dells.

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

THE sea winds are reviving the drooping social spirits of the Hub's elect who have scattered to where the breezes blow on the flame of life. A brief respite, and then the hectic hegira plunges into the joys that are only when Summer is at its golden prime.

Yachting, tennis, motoring and aeroplaning are the most popular diversions for those who are located for the Summer in their seaside villas. The debutantes of the past Winter, though widely scattered, are loath to give up their point of vantage, and though the buds of next Winter are already creeping into prominence, the girls of last Winter still hold sway.

Miss Dorothy Draper, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Draper, who was the debutante par excellence of the Winter, and who had more brilliant hospitalities given in her honor than any other girl of this year, is now with her parents at their [illegible] Hall. She has already given some delightful [illegible] which in between her [illegible]

Miss Ruth Anthony, the pretty [illegible] daughter of the S. Reed Anthonys of Commonwealth [illegible] parents own a villa. Miss Anthony has gone in for [illegible] wave, entertaining large parties of [illegible] on board her father's yacht Doris, which flies the colors of the [illegible] Club.

Miss Josephine Wallace [illegible] has been the recipient of teas given at the Dexter cottage [illegible] parents, the Henry Whitneys, occupied at Winter, [illegible] Harbor, where she is starting the gayest [illegible] at that resort. Miss Dexter was a prominent and popular figure in the younger set. For the late Spring and early Summer Miss Whitney was with her parents at their country [illegible] house is adapted for delightful house parties. Mrs. Henry P. Whitney's aunt, is also at Bar Harbor, and she will do her [illegible] the pretty buds first season at this fashionable resort.

MISS WELD AT BAR HARBOR.

Miss Marion Weld of Milton, who was likewise a favored member of last Winter's crop of buds, is also to be at Bar Harbor with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. Minot Weld, who are at their attractive villa in The Field. This is Miss Weld's first Summer there, and she has already become a decided favorite with the [illegible] artest of the young set there.

Miss [illegible]ine Saltonstall of Milton, who had the gayest Winter [illegible]mable, is [illegible]er parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Saltonstall, at the [illegible] Summer [illegible] West Chop, where they are [illegible] handsome [illegible] both for Miss Saltonstall and for her sister, Miss Frances Saltonstall, [illegible] will make her debut next Winter.

Miss Mar[illegible]kman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parkman of Commonwealth av[illegible] is with her parents and sisters, Miss Edith Parkman and Miss Penelope [illegible]kman, at Northeast Harbor, Mount Desert, where things are growing livelier and livelier and the young folks, even this early in the season, are kept busy with the numerous gayeties.

Barbara Bolles, who was introduced last Winter at a dance at the Somerset, and who has been abroad for the late Spring and early Summer, sailed for home yesterday, and upon her return will be at the family country place at Cohasset.

Miss Constance Zerrahn of Milton is not to spend the Summer in Europe, as at first planned, but is with her parents at their suburban home, and her season is to be enlivened by numerous long automobile tours and several house parties.

NORTH SHORE DEBUTANTE.

Miss Katherine Putnam, daughter of the William Lowell Putnams of Beacon street, is among the North Shore debutantes and has been there since the arrival of the family from Europe. Their beautiful Manchester home is one of the show places on the shore.

But the debutantes are no more widely scattered than the other members of the set circles. Mrs. Louise Hamilton Sargent is with her father, the Hon. T. Jefferson Coolidge, at his cottage on Smith's Point, Manchester. Mrs. Kate Gannett Wells has closed her town house and is at her Campbello cottage, "Ka-loo-la-mon-qua." Her daughter, Miss Louisa Wells, who is one of our crack tennis experts and who is now in Europe, will return this month.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Whipple and their two young daughters are at their Summer home, Elmcroft, in Wareham.

Mr. and Mrs. Clement S. Houghton of Chestnut Hill, who deserted the North Shore last Summer and spent the season in New York State, are now at their Manchester home, where they will remain until late Autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Shaw Bradley of Commonwealth avenue, who have been making an extended tour through the West, are now at their Pride's Crossing home for the season. With them are their two interesting daughters, Miss Rosamond and Miss Leslie.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Burrage of Commonwealth avenue, who remained in town until after class day, when their son, Francis H. Burrage, who graduated from Harvard this year, was on the committee of seniors for the Hasty Pudding Club spread, have sailed to spend the Summer in Europe.

VISITORS IN MERRY ENGLAND.

Mrs. Edgar Harding will also be missed in the North Shore Summer colony this season, as she and her sister, Miss Robinson, have gone over to England to visit the former's daughter, formerly Priscilla Harding, who married James Sherrard of the English army at Emmanuel Church last February. Mr. and Mrs. Sherrard are now in London.

Mrs. Thomas O. Richardson, who has been in Europe for some time, returned on Tuesday and is now at her Newport villa for the Summer.

Mrs. Nathan Matthews of Beacon street is with her mother, Mrs. L. M. Sargent, at their Bar Harbor villa. Mr. Matthews has gone abroad to join his daughter, Miss Nathalie Matthews, who is in Paris.

Mrs. Alanson Tucker, who stopped at the Somerset for a few weeks after returning from Europe, is also at Bar Harbor for the season and is at her beautiful estate, Sea Fox.

The Misses Mary and Sally Woodberry of Chestnut street are at East Jaffrey, N. H., for the Summer, their aunt, Miss Robinson, with whom they make their home, having gone abroad for the season.

Mrs. Ronald Worthington and her daughter, Miss Theoda Worthington, have gone from their Dedham estate to their cottage at Hyannisport for the Summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Barton of Worcester, the parents of Miss Katherine Barton, whose engagement to Dr. William E. Ladd was recently announced, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Marsden J. Perry at their Newport villa over the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Leffingwell Spaulding (Katherine Ames of North Easton), who have been making an extended automobile tour abroad, are to sail for America from Cherbourg, Thursday, July 28th.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Brooks are guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. Mortimer Brooks at their villa in Newport.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, who have been at their Lancaster home since closing their town house earlier in the season, have arrived at their villa in Newport. Miss Sally Thayer, their daughter, is one of the most prominent of that gay resort's popular belles. Mrs. William S. Patten (Annie Thayer) has also arrived at Newport for the season.

An important engagement recently announced is that of Miss Carolyn Crossett, daughter of Mrs. D. R. Crossett of New York, and Arthur Halcombe of Cambridge. Mr. Halcombe, who is a Harvard graduate, is to become instructor in the economics department of that college in September. The young couple first met on board steamer returning from abroad.

MISS EDITH BIRD

FAREWELL TO CITY IS SOCIETY'S CRY

WITH such a continuous rush f[illegible] to foreign countries as the fashionables are [illegible] it is a pleasure to see that we are left to consider [illegible] on this side of the Atlantic during the height of the season. For [illegible] Mrs. George [illegible] Mrs. Cumberham is a daughter of Mrs. Charles L. Peraza.

Miss Alice Longfellow of Cambridge with her nephews, Henry Dana, Harvard '09, and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana, Harvard '08, Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Dana's sons, are also in Europe for the Summer. Grafton Cushing, our latest and wealthiest society bachelor, has also gone abroad for his annual holiday and will [illegible] much of the time with Howard [illegible] and his beautiful Hilton Head villa.

Mrs. [illegible] daughter Miss Miriam Ashton [illegible] Longworth Cassatt, a member [illegible] Penn F. Chester, of the New York, Penn[illegible] bara, N. H., have just arrived [illegible].

That interesting young couple Mr. and Mrs. Paul Roland Dickson, have gone abroad for their honeymoon. Mrs. Dickson was Miss Julia Sands and their marriage at Newport a fortnight ago when Wilding Appleton Lawrence, son of the bishop, was best man was one of the most brilliant functions of society of the early season.

Mr. Lawrence and David Sohier are now going over to Europe [illegible] to join some members of Harvard '11 for a [illegible] tour in England and on the continent. Mr. Sohier is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Sohier of Beacon street.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lowell Putnam, who sailed for Europe earlier in the season, directly after the close of grand opera, in which they were both devoted, have been enjoying life in Paris. The Putnams will be much missed at Bar Harbor this season, as they have become exceedingly popular in the Summer colony there.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Appleton Bell of Longwood and their pretty daughter [illegible] who recently arrived in Europe, are to spend several months abroad visiting their relatives, who have a large villa in Italy. They will also spend some time in the [illegible]

Lieutenant Lawrence Patten, Jr., U. S. A., and Mrs. Patten, who before her marriage was Miss Pauline Ayer, have returned from Europe, where they spent a brief honeymoon. [illegible] wedding took place in May at the beautiful country home of the bride's parents, the Frederick Ayers, "Ayerfield," at Beverly Farms. They have gone to Hempstead, [illegible] Patten's post at Fort Sheridan, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Motte of Commonwealth avenue, who [illegible] abroad at the [illegible] Summer, are this week [illegible] West Richfield, [illegible] they have [illegible] Mrs. Motte was Miss [illegible] Miss Motte [illegible] Mrs. Edwin Arthur [illegible] a party of their friends [illegible] town covers at the New [illegible] Club, Devonshire, [illegible] of their wedding.

Professor William H. Pickering, the eminent astronomer of Harvard College, and his daughter, Miss Pickering, were the guests of President William H. Wood of the Appleton Worsted Company at a week-end party at his estate on Cape Cod, [illegible] Mr. Wood is to [illegible] of the very [illegible] Mrs. Pickering [illegible] Mrs. James McMullen [illegible] aunt of the latter has just arrived from abroad to spend the Summer at the Farms.

Mrs. Samuel R. Sias of Lexington has [illegible] at the residence of her daughter, H. Curtiss Sias, to William Wellington Phillips of Seattle, Washington.

Mrs. Leigh Ames, Miss Mary Lindle and Miss Marie Louise Lindle are [illegible] their cottage at Pride's Crossing.

[illegible] have just returned to Europe, are now present in Newport, the guests of Mrs. Prince's sister, Miss Mason Sears, at the Thomas cottage, which they are to occupy, is being made ready for them [illegible]

ONE of the distinctly handsome girls of the exclusive set in Boston is Miss Edith Bird, member of the Vincent and New Riding clubs and M. F. H. of that select little coterie of huntswomen known as the Endean Beagles. Miss Bird is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bird and has figured conspicuously in several of the most important society events within the last months. She was maid of honor at the wedding of her sister, Miss Joan Bird, when she married Louis Agassiz Shaw and was one of the belles at the Country Club races and at the Harvard Class Day festivities. She is tall and slender, with medium coloring and perfect features, and there is no more popular girl in society.

TEA DRESS

A Whiner Can't Win

By Herbert Kaufman

—Copyright, 1910, by H

Don't yelp for help; then, chances are, no one will suspect you of failure and you'll have a breathing space in which to collar your courage and make another try.

If you don't post us, we'll go on thinking that you're a hopeful, determined plugger, and some tomorrow some one may invite you out to dine with Opportunity.

Prosperity isn't an accepted test of capability. Anyone can laugh while good luck is tickling him, but real manhood never looms so tremendously, power never shows to such superb advantage, as amidst the wreckage of defeat. The world doesn't frown on the loser—but on the loser's frown.

If you die out in the try-out, you're branded. Cowardice is as damning as the mark of Cain. Life is an incessant game of football; straight dashes to the goal are happy accidents—touchdowns are seldom made in one sprint—it takes six feet of pluck as well as two feet of speed to hammer and batter through the opposition of other men who are always trying to get to the spot and the thing that you want.

How many baseball scores are settled in the first inning? How long would you last in the league, if you didn't try for a run every time you came to the plate?

The best batsman has his off-innings, but when he does swat the ball and bang out a clean hit, the cheer of the bleachers carries with it full forgiveness for his earlier fizzle.

Football and baseball aren't a bit different from your work. It's a matter of innings—filled with setbacks—marked with temporary reverses—ahead today and lagging tomorrow.

Persistence is the keynote—survival is the problem—time is the test—temporary deprivation is a general rule—bruises are incidents—mistakes are written in every record—no man ever grew so great but that his judgment remained fallible.

Circumstances may bankrupt you of every possession, but your creditors can't seize your pluck. Keep that asset and you'll recover the others.

Nothing in these United States is nailed down. The resources of the continent are a communal right. The money in the banks is constantly shifting from one name to another. Competition is actively at work bestowing prosperity where it is deserved.

You still have your original building outfit—a sound body and a sane mind. Make sure your tools don't rust and dull—keep your kit bright and clean and sharp and start out again.

You can regain your level if you'll do your level best every day. If you can't bank profits, bank your vitality—in the long run they're the same.

Save your yearnings and your earnings until you accumulate a surplus of health as well as wealth. You can't stretch to your full length unless you maintain your full strength.

You've heard all this before? Of course you have. Sparta preached it; Roman elders poured it into their sons' ears. Some truths are fundamental, universal and perpetual. They are not altered by geography nor by period. Styles may change in politics and religion and morals, but THERE WAS NEVER A TIME WHEN A WHINER COULD WIN.

200 NEW UPRIGHTS
GO ON SPECIAL SALE
MONDAY, JULY 11

This is an unusually large number of Pianos to be sacrificed. Only once in the history of our business have we had so many fine instruments on sale at one time. To clear every one off the sacrifice floor before next Saturday night we have put a price on each of them that is so very low that it seems almost a shame. The price is really an insult to the pianos. But what are we going to do. We must sell them. That is all there is to it. The pianos are the world's best makes. We guarantee this. Any wise, economical buyer can have any one of these pianos on the easiest possible terms. Don't buy till you visit the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms.

NOTICE
No matter what make of piano you are thinking of buying, get the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms' price on the same instrument first.

$5 DOWN, $1 A WEEK

FREE Delivery Anywhere in Unmarked Wagons
Three years are allowed to test the pianos. If not satisfied same amount allowed on any of our 300 new pianos in stock.

QUARREL IN NEWPORT CHURCH IS AVERTED

NEWPORT, R. I., July 9. A threatened quarrel, among the society members of St. Mary's Church at South Portsmouth which is attended by well to do Newport cottagers seems to be averted by some mysterious device of peace. It is not exactly so far as that is concerned, for the annual garden party of the church guild at which Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt had promised to pour Wednesday at her cozy little cottage on Sandy Point, is to be held at Chepiwanoxet Hill instead.

The Rev. Frederic W. Goodman is rector of St. Mary's. He is highly popular with all those who when he arranged for a lawn party to take place last Wednesday at Reggie Vanderbilt's Sandy Point farm, several of the leading parishioners took exception to the plan as they asserted, they were not consulted. The Sandy Point fete at all events, however, was given and the garden party was held at Chepiwanoxet Hill instead.

The new Queen was the announcement by Mrs. William B. Dinsmore, Jr., Nor'west Point, Who is president of the society of St. Mary's, could not be seen today, but it is reported that some time on Wednesday Mrs. Dinsmore called on Mrs. Vanderbilt and informed her that Mr. Goodman preferred Sandy Point Farm to the front of a cottage on Chepiwanoxet Hill. The garden party will be held by Mrs. Dinsmore next Wednesday's fete of her own discretion.

The latest news today however was that next Wednesday's fete would be held in Chepiwanoxet Hill, which is a town building. While a large patronage could be counted upon to getting a clear day with all of Sunnyside Farm next Wednesday as they did at Sandy Point Farm last Wednesday, the change is a capital plan and it is also believed that a threatened breach in the church harmony has been successfully averted.

Skipper Tripp's Rosebush Is True Prophet of Fish

Why Shiver Your Timbers, the Dodgasted Thing Blooms Every Time a Haul Is Made!

BROCKTON, July 9.—Captain H. F. Tripp of Onset has a rose bush at his home in Wareham avenue which is a sure indicator of the arrival of the bluefish. The captain says that for several years the bush has not failed him.

One year it did not bloom and there were no fish. Last week a friend inquired of the bush was putting out any buds and the captain informed him that it looked as though the buds would open about Friday. Sure enough the roses honored on that day and the gamey blues appeared in too numerous to use and had to be rounded up the streets and is being made for the finding. Evidence discovered by the officers led to an arrest soon.

The first discovery of the fish was made Sept. 1st probably saved scores of lives. In order to keep the secret from the knowledge of the fact would be the beginning of the end. The fish were poured in finely over the bodies of the drowned.

Officers who went to the scene assisted the police in arousing the occupants.

POLICE HUNTING CHELSEA FIREBUG

Detectives From State Marshal's Office Gather Important Evidence.

The fire and fire officials of Chelsea who, said by detectives from the State Fire Marshal's office, are investigating the fire wh. yesterday destroyed the two story wood barn in the rear of No. 100 Second ave., in the belief that the fire was of incendiary origin. The officials have arrested one, the supposed incendiary, and the city barely escaped a disastrous conflagration, as the wind was blowing a gale from the south. Had the fire reached the lumber yard of the Chelsea Lumber Co. and had to be stopped at the street car line being made for the finding of evidence discovered by the officers led to an arrest soon.

BOSTON AMONG FIRST TO GET POSTAL BANK

BOSTON will be one of the cities in which postal savings banks will be established first understood in Washington, although no official announcement has been made. In fact, when asked about it Postmaster Maguire of Boston said:

"I haven't heard just what other first cities will be. The committee appointed to study the operation of other countries, and it may some time before a report is submitted to Postmaster General. There is a possibility that an experimental bank may be established in Boston, but I do not know. Other cities to be first, it is understood, New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Baltimore, Chicago, San Francisco, New Orleans, Detroit and Pittsburg. It is said that one of these cities will be selected in each of the nine districts throughout the country. Although the postal savings banks will not be established in Boston, it is expected that the city will be one of the first to start the plan because of its importance as a financial center.

Committee Developing Plan.

The committee appointed to work out the plan for the operation of the postal savings banks, consisting of the Postmaster General, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Attorney-General. Upon these gentlemen officers the work of organizing the system largely depends. Nothing can be done, it is said, until the committee has completed its report, which it is expected will be submitted to Congress at the next session.

Will Promote Thrift.

The board of trustees that will operate the bill will not start as far as known, but will eventually cover the whole country at once. The system is to be gradually developed. Its effect on savings banks in the various States remains to be seen. Bankers in Boston have no fear that the general result can be other than beneficial to the people of the United States. They say that the establishment of the postal savings banks will promote thrift and economy on the part of the people. Each of the Postmasters of the United States will be required to take an oath of office, which is to be administered by the Post Master, with a partial bond.

ALL IN THE DAYS WORK

The Tremendous Debt That Every Man Owes to the Workers Who Risk Their Lives, and Often Lose Them, That Others May Live Comfortably, Travel in Security and Enjoy the Luxuries Provided by Modern Ingenuity.

Copyright, 1910, by the Sunday American-Journal Examiner.

YOU who live in a fireproof, steam-heated flat, or a comfortable suburban cottage, who travel from town to town swiftly and safely in smoothly running cars, who have ice in your refrigerator to keep your food cool in Summer, and coal in your furnace to drive out the Winter's cold, how often do you think of what those luxuries cost—not to you, but to the men who really make them possible?

In a modern city, where the population swarms in tenements and apartment houses, the people depend for the safety of their homes and their very lives on the blue-coated men who spend the most of their time on watch in the fire engine houses.

An easy and idling life theirs seems when you see them off duty, but let a fire break out and instantly their lives are jeopardized for the sake of other lives. In any great city fires that but for the firefighting force might annihilate the whole city are of almost daily occurrence.

But the firemen are always ready, and they count their lives as nothing when the call comes for their services.

Consider the debt you owe to them. Do you fancy you could ever pay it with money?

Once in ten years or so there is a great strike in the coal mines. You read of thousands of men being thrown out of work, because they cannot maintain their families on the wages paid by the operators. You learn that thousands of other men, holding jobs that but little more than support them, freely join in subscribing to a fund to tide the strikers over their trouble.

And, smug behind your newspaper, you say:

"Let the other workingmen help out the strikers if they want to. But not I. I owe the strikers nothing. They get paid for what they do, and if they don't like their pay, or cannot live on it, it is no concern of mine."

Now, just do a little more thinking on that subject, and it is possible that you may change your mind about owing the strikers nothing.

Necessity compels you to live in a climate where Winter continues for three or four months every year.

The laws of Nature compel you to keep warm—under penalty of freezing to death.

How are you going to keep warm?

Somebody must dig coal for you. You cannot do it, for you don't know how, and you would not have the stamina or the disposition to do it if you did know how.

It is hard, grinding business digging coal.

The miner has to work long hours away from the sun, which is the symbol of light and happiness. He has to work for the most part in a stooping position that leaves him sore and exhausted at the end of the day.

The air is not of the best in the coal mine. Combined with it is a dangerous carbon product called firedamp, which, coming into contact with a flame from a miner's lamp, is likely to explode.

You read of such explosions often enough, and the newspapers for the next few days are filled with tragic stories of the rescue of the survivors and the removal of those who do not survive.

Running over such items you thank God that you are not a coal miner. Would it not be fitting at the same time to acknowledge that to those men, who risk and lose their lives "all in the day's work," you owe a debt which your sympathy and assistance when they are in trouble could only repay very meagrely.

In New York a million or more people cross every day the bridges that lead from Manhattan Island to Brooklyn. More millions travel through the subways and on the elevated roads.

Sometimes there are accidents on the transit lines, but seldom are they due to the men who operate the trains. And before those bridges could stand firmly founded and able to meet any possible strain upon them, a good many men had to toil in high pressure caissons, to stand at dizzy heights above the river tossing red-hot rivets to one another, or to spin cables over towers which ninety men in a hundred could not stand upon without turning sick with fright.

Every man who held a dangerous post in the building of any of the New York bridges or tunnels, or any other bridge or tunnel anywhere, placed the public who uses the bridges and tunnels under an everlasting debt.

For him was the world and the danger, with pay by no means adequate to the risks. For the rest of the people is the convenience of rapid travel, the safety paid for by other men's danger.

How many of the passengers on a Transatlantic steamship think when the fog whistle toots continually and breaks their sleep that their inconvenience is the merest trifle compared to the anxiety of the captain on the bridge?

To him is entrusted the responsibility of a thousand or more lives. The failure to hear another whistle through the fog, or to see in time to avoid it the misty bulk of a sailing vessel, would send his own ship and perhaps another to the bottom.

Night after night he and his fellow officers are on duty, watching and listening, sacrificing their sleep and their comfort, and only when all possible danger is past do they return to their regular system of relief and get what sleep and rest they can in their turns.

Do not fancy that your passage money pays for that sort of thing. That goes to the company, and is split up into dividends for prosperous stockholders who live ashore, troubled neither by wind or fog.

The company pays the ship's officers. It pays the stokers who work in the terrific heat of the furnaces that the ship may make her speed in fair weather. It pays all hands on board—living wages.

But no company, however rich, can pay for those sleepless vigils on the bridge or that heart-breaking shovelling in the stoke hold.

Those are things that men do, unconsciously perhaps, but nevertheless devotedly, for their fellow men. You who are the beneficiaries, who travel from one shore of the ocean to the other, with never a thought of danger or never a vision of a wreck to disturb your dreams—you can never pay the obligations you incur in the journey, but you can make a part payment in gratitude and in interest when there is an opportunity to help the men whose devotion to duty has made your life secure.

The marvellous mechanical ingenuity which has done away with so many of the discomforts of the past has never been able to make life easier for everybody.

A thousand guests live in a great metropolitan hotel, heated to a comfortable temperature in Winter and cooled to the same temperature in Summer. All the air that the guests breathe is taken from the lofty roof, strained and filtered, and then admitted to the sleeping and living rooms.

The lights are shaded to the exact requirements of the average human eye. Nothing that has been thus far thought of in the way of ease and comfort has been neglected.

But the moderate temperature in Winter is supplied at the expense of the miners of whom we spoke in the beginning of this article, plus the efforts of a large force of firemen who feed redhot furnaces with coal for long shifts every day. And even the cool air that comes pouring over ammonia pipes in Summer must be condensed by steam that is made in those same roaring furnaces.

And so all the luxury of that hotel is produced by men who live and work in anything but luxury.

The other day a man working in an ice factory was overcome by heat prostration. While the machinery of the plant was busy making ice to cool sweltering thousands he was shovelling coal into a firebox whose glare added a hundred degrees to the ninety degrees registered by the street thermometers.

It was all in the day's work, but it may occur to you on the next hot day that you owe something more than the price of your ice for your cold lemonade or your ice cream soda, and that the employer is not the only man who is in the debt of his employe.

From any window of any business street, in any factory district or along any wharf or water front may be seen the men who do the really hard and dangerous work of the world, and do it cheerfully and well.

They have accepted an inequitable division of labor without protest. Theirs is the toil and the danger, and with every ounce of muscle expended on even the humblest work that is well done there must go a very considerable expenditure of brains. The man who sits in an office and totals columns of figures or who directs a multitude of men, or who writes stories or editorials, or draws plans for houses or bridges has no monopoly of the brain work of the world.

Out there in the street the carpenter is working and thinking about his work, or he would never get it done. On the locomotive that pulls the fast express is an engineer whose mind must be as alert as his hands.

Look at the grave, serious faces of the tugboat captains in the harbor if you think that thought is not as necessary in the line of industry as it is in the office.

The teamster, the chauffeur, the factory hand, the mechanic, the day laborer, all have their share of duty and of danger.

To their clear headedness and sobriety you owe not only your conveniences, but your safety and security.

You may boast of independence, but you are not now and never will be independent.

You can free yourself from financial obligations, but you can never free yourself from the moral obligations to your fellow men, especially those who go in where you fear to tread, accept the risks and do the hard work.

For them everything is in the day's work—steeple climbing, bridge building, coal mining, the manufacture of dynamite for the building of railroads and the blasting of skyscraper foundations.

And you who live in peace and security, to whose comfort every day brings an addition, the least you can do is to remember your debt, and in your own way to pay off as much of it as you may while you share the enjoyments of this life.

SYN-PSIS

HAMILTON FYNES, young, but particularly prepossessing and giving no signs of great power, influence or wealth—quite an ordinary young man in fact—receives the immediate attention of the captain of the Lusitania on its arrival at Liverpool by the presentation of a mysterious letter. Because of the letter Fynes is permitted to land by special boat, while his other passengers must wait over night.

At the office of the manager of the Northwestern Railway another letter is the "open sesame" to a special train. In record time the special is made up, and all other trains are halted to give the flyer a free line to London.

Fynes took minute precautions upon entering the train, carefully examining the car and bathroom's car, and assuring himself that there could possibly be no one aboard who cannot not be there. In passage he repeated his scrutiny, and satisfying himself that there was no one, moved some mysterious papers.

The passenger was dead. He had been stabbed in the back. His papers were gone. Scotland Yard officials could find no clue. The train crew and guards failed to show how anyone could have accomplished the deed. Inspector Jenks begins an investigation.

Meanwhile, fifteen miles north of London a man, who spoke English perfectly, but who conversed in a stranger tongue with a servant who came to him in an automobile, was lying beside the road, but a short distance from the tracks, sorely wounded. He was driven to the home of Dr. Spencer Whiles and patched up, explaining he was hurt by a bicycle accident.

Miss Penelope Morse appears at the hotel where Fynes was to have stopped and startles the clerk by inquiring for him. She is told of the tragedy, tells of having had a dinner engagement with him, but seems to bear the news of his death without intense feeling.

Miss Morse was followed by reporters after being interviewed by Inspector Jenks, but eludes them and drives to the club frequented by Mr Richard Vanderpoe of the American embassy.

She tells him that young man he tellme him she has the secret of the murder of Fynes, that he was a government messenger of the Secret Service and that he was to have given her a message for delivery that night. The mystery that reena ned was, who had secured the papers, and what country would be most interested in securing them.

CHAPTER VI.

Mr. Coulson Interviewed.

The Lusitania hour specials ran into Euston Station soon after 3 o'clock in the afternoon. A small company of reporters, and several other men whose profession was not so distinctly proclaimed, were on the spot to interview certain of the passengers. A young fellow from the office of the Morning Herald was among the most successful, as, from the lengthy line from Liverpool, he was fortunate in securing Liverpool, he was fortunate enough to secure the only person who had been seen speaking to the murdered man upon the voyage.

"This is Mr. Coulson, I believe?" the young man said with conviction, addressing a somewhat stout, gray-headed American, with white moustache, a Homburg hat, and clothes of decidedly unfashionable cut.

"That happens to be my name, sir," he replied "You have the advantage of me, though. You are not from my old friends, Spencer & Whiles, surely?"

Spencer & [illegible] young man repeated thoughtfully

"Woollen firm in London Wall," Mr. Coulson added, "I know them well. I can see me directly I arrived, and they did say something about sending to the station."

The young man shook his head, and assumed at the same time his most engaging manner.

"Why, no, sir, I'm not attached," he [illegible] connection with that firm at all. The fact is I am on the staff of the evening paper A friend of mine in Liverpool—a mutual friend, I believe I may say," he explained, "secured me a passage across, and understand that you were acquainted with Mr. Hamilton Fynes."

Mr Coulson set down his suitcase for a moment in the [illegible]

"Well if I [illegible] to do so I [illegible] any reason why I should talk about him to you newspaper fellows. You'd better get hold of [illegible] them

But, by [illegible] the young man said, "we haven't any idea where they are to be found, and in the meantime you can't imagine what reports are in circulation."

An Insistent Reporter.

"Guess I [illegible] I'm pretty well, Mr. Coulson," he said, "and I'm sure we're not an evening press of our own in New York"

The reporter nodded

"Well," he said, "they'd be able to stretch a point and put it on a rate like this. You see," he continued confidentially "we are up against something unique. Here is an astounding and entirely inexplicable murder, committed in a most dastardly fashion by a person who appears to have vanished into the face of the earth. Now, I'm not [illegible] the [illegible] know whether he came from England business or pleasure. He may, in short, have been any one from a millionaire to a newspaper reporter, but the 'limited express train,' the reporter considered with a smile, "and the money which was found upon him, I imagine that he was certainly not the latter."

BEST STORIES TOLD LAST WEEK IN BOSTON

A Difference.

By Representative William H. O'Brien.

HAVE you ever noticed how the same act by different people can meet with praise or with rebuke? To illustrate, here's a little story.

Years ago I lived in a little town down in Maine that had no clergyman of its own but was visited occasionally by clergymen from a city some miles distant. Services were held every second or third Sunday. It happened that a Catholic priest and a Methodist minister used to visit the town on the same Sundays. Both were lovers of horseflesh. Both had fast horses.

Far be it from men to say that a priest and a minister would race their horses from their home city to this town on a Sunday morning. But one fine Sabbath morn as two benevolent Irish ladies were wending their way to church in this particular town, talking about anything and everything but their neighbors, they were startled by a galloping behind them and past them flew a horse and carriage, with bare-headed driver.

"In Heaven's name, what's that?" asked one startled old lady.

"'Tis that scamp of a Methodist minister; Heaven forgive him," said the other. "Look at that now, racing his horse on a Sunday morn."

The minister's carriage had hardly passed when up the road came another cloud of dust and another horse and carriage, with bare-headed driver flew past.

"Glory be," said the first old lady. "Is this more of it? What scandal for the Lord's Day!"

"Oh," said the second old lady. "Is it any wonder that the people here love good Father Hennessey? Look at him now, driving fast so he won't keep them waiting for mass."

How He'd Win.

WILLIAM T. HODGE, who for the last three years has been playing in "The Man from Home," was told by one of his rural friends that he could never make a farmer laugh.

"You look like a farmer and you act like a farmer," he said, "but you couldn't make a farmer laugh."

"Couldn't I, though," retorted Hodge. "Well, I'd just hitch up a yoke of oxen and try to plow. Every farmer who saw me would die laughing."

He Admits It.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN, the ex-champion, grew reminiscent one day and said:

"I have often wished I had taken a slant toward the drama. Now, I don't pretend to say I'm any Francis Wilson or De Wolf Hopper. That isn't my graft. I don't expect to make people laugh, but I guess I made them laugh, all right, when I was in that play, 'Honest Hearts and Willing Hands.'

"I remember there was one place where I had to stand on the stage near my forge and protect the heroine against the villain and say: 'If you step one foot further I will break your cowardly head, and you know I never break my word.' Well, when I said that in one theatre down South a small boy in the gallery yelled in the first hush:

"'John, you're all right, but you're rotten!'"

Teaches Teachers

By One of the Delegates.

THREE newsboys stood at the curb in front of National Education Headquarters Tuesday when David Starr Jordan, president of Leland Stanford, Jr., University, came down the steps and started toward his hotel. Mr. Jordan has an air of more than ordinary importance and the newsboys were quick to notice him as a "real somebody."

Instantly they swarmed around him crying their wares, but President Jordan moved on his way without noticing them.

"Who is de guy?" one newsboy asked another after their fruitless chase had been abandoned.

Best Offer

By Patrolman Thomas Smith of the Dorchester Station.

EARLY this Summer while patrolling my route one afternoon my attention was attracted to an unlucky individual that had partaken of too much refreshments, standing up against a telegraph pole in Pierce square, and trying very much to appear sober as I approached him.

I asked him where he lived, and as it was only a short distance from where he was I tried to get him to stop hugging the pole and go home. He finally got his bearings and proceeded in the direction of his house, being very quiet and orderly until he got inside his front gate, which he shut with a bang. Seeing that he was all right I started to leave him, but he opened up on me in a loud manner, daring me to place him under arrest and telling me what he could do to me.

While bringing him to the station in the wagon he asked me who the bail commissioner was, so that he might get bailed out. I told him, and asked him if he had any money to put up for bail.

He answered: "No, but Tom, you know that I have a nice home on your route; now don't you think that I could put up my latch key for surety?"

Western Spirit

By H. T. Connors of Dorchester.

"YOU'VE all heard the man talk who tells you he "has been to the West," and finally exclaims proudly it was as far as Buffalo, N. Y. You've heard the story of the Portland, Me., man who thought he'd go "way down East," so he took a trip to Bath. But this one is different. It wouldn't be nice for me to mention the name of the fellow who harped on this one, but he's a Boston newspaper man at present and he was home-eat in what he said.

"Did you ever see such a Fourth of July celebration as the one they had here in Boston?" he asked in his best knocking voice. "Everything was dead; utterly dead. The whole celebration lacked that Western spirit that they have out where I came from. That's what Boston lacks—the Western spirit. That's what has made my home city.'"

"Where are you from?" I asked, for I'd never thought of him as being a Western man.

"Why, from Pittsburg, of course," he replied.

Can you beat that?

It Reminded Him

THE women teachers had beaten the men at their own game and elected Mrs. Ella Flagg Young president of the National Education Association. The battle had waged for two hours and as a result of the heat and excitement the women, as well as the men who had struggled through the mazes of parliamentary problems were sadly dishevelled.

"Do you know what this reminds me of?" said former Vice-President Lorenzo D. Harvey of Menomonie, Wis.

"I knew a man who owned a parrot which had the usual swearing habit. But the owner found that as a rule the bird would stop its profanity if the cage were taken from the wall and swung rapidly about three times, as one would swing a water bucket in trying not to spill a drop.

"One day the wife of the minister came to call. The parrot began to show off and swear. My friend said: 'Do you want me to show you how easily I can stop that?' And he immediately grabbed the cage and began to swing it around and around, giving many extra flourishes in order to make sure of success.

"Then with a smile of triumph he hung up the cage. The parrot slowly tried to smooth its ruffled feathers and then suddenly gazing at the minister's wife shrieked: 'Say where in blazes were you when that cyclone struck us?'"

GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE YOU KNOW IN BOSTON

THE call of the ocean has finally been heard as far inland as the private offices at the Tremont Theatre, even above the clamor for tickets to the Carter De Haven show—and the unexpected has happened.

A well-set-up gentleman in the prime of life, gray, perhaps, but, nevertheless vicerous and alert, stepped into the private offices at the theatre the other day. He was dressed in gray. This was "Manager" Schoefel.

Pretty soon a gentleman of much the same appearance stepped out into the corridor. This man wore a suit of blue. "Captain" Schoefel of the good yacht "Prosit."

Thus the yaching season hereabouts was properly and formally opened.

The dean of Boston's theatrical managers president of their association, by the way—will naturally be [illegible] the playhouse a good deal [illegible] the Summer, but he expects [illegible] a lot of his time to the "Tre[illegible]" is year, and his friends everywhere [illegible] entertaining. [illegible] there's a run up the [illegible] Harper.

Fifteen years ago they wouldn't have considered this theatregoing weather, exactly, but times have changed. A success is a great success, nowadays, and one cannot look with the front doors while there's a "Girl in the Taxi" in the house and while thousands want to see her.

"Manager" Schoefel was delighted with the "hit" of course, but "Skipper" Schoefel was restless. So, on Tuesday, the Prosit backed into the water. The skipper couldn't wait any longer.

WONDERFUL how all the presidents have taken to railroading and steamboating these days. Here's Colonel Roosevelt just back from millions or billions of miles of it; here's Taft, who keeps the depot carriage waiting for him at the door of the White House until he can run up to [illegible] and change his shirt and catch another train; and now Matt Cummings has gone into it.

Matt, who was once in charge of Boston's street cleaning, and who was generally credited with having swept like a new broom in National President of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. Perhaps he mightn't be, if the election had to be passed upon by the Civil Service Commission—but we won't go into that.

The Hibernians hold their national convention this year away out on the Pacific coast, at Portland, Ore. It comes in July, too, not exactly the best month of the twelve for transcontinental traveling.

Somebody observed as much to President Cummings the other day, remarking how tough it must be to be the president of anything in hot weather, with the train catching that seat a to go with being a president these days, and the Neponset leader said:

"I don't mind it just got in this morning from Baltimore and would be willing to leave for Oregon tonight, if need be. I'm always in training for a fight."

Now what did he mean by that? He was gone before one could ask the question. Was it Reno, or the Civil Service Commission, or what?

HERE'S a question that some of the fellows are asking:

"Why does "Billy" Garcelon go in so much for lonely automobiling?"

You see, Mr. Garcelon—for, of course, he isn't "Billy" to everybody—has a reputation the very opposite of selfish. Up on Beacon Hill, where he came mighty near to being the Republican leader for three years, and where he is still a force, he got things done through real good fellowship when possible the mere fact that the organization wanted it done wouldn't have served. For Garcelon has a "way" with him

And so, how about [illegible] automobiling for one?" Everybody is quite worked up about it. There see Garcelon in a taxi every day, or twice a day, with room all around him; they find him as smiling and as genial as ever, and they—well, they d n't quite know what to make of it. It is altogether too early to have anything to do with the Harvard Athletic Association, and the campaign hasn't opened, and Mr. Loder but seriously believed to be in any danger, and so—

Well, if you see "Billy" Garcelon, ask him about it.

HENRY BERLIN, one of the youngest and most popular of the newspaper men at the State House, is blessed with that indefinable something that the novelists describe as a "manner."

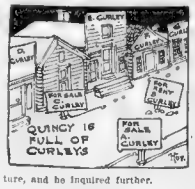
Mr. Berlin is a distingue, so to speak. He has great masses of coal black hair, arranged in the unconventional, natural pompadour style, and he wears French bro[illegible] h[illegible] h[illegible] h[illegible] almost the feet tall.

Henry entered the committee room at the State House for the ninth day of the Lyman School inquiry. He danced up to the newspaper table and took his place there, arranging paper, pens and pencils and nodding to Chairman Ham that the battle might now go on.

An elderly party from up-State could stand it no longer. Who is he?" the old gentleman asked.

"He?" repeated Sergeant-at-Arms Tom Pedrick. "He? O, that's Henry Berlin."

This didn't seem to signify as much to the old gentleman from up-State as it might to members of the Legislature, and he inquired further.



"Well," said he, "he's got a bigger State House than this, somewheres, ain't he?"

The which, being promptly repeated to Henry Berlin, cost that polished and much traveled young man $3.90.

JERRY GOOD was sailing through Tremont street the other day when a problem was propounded to him.

"Lookahere," it was put up to Jerry, "how is Jim Curley going to introduce his congressional aspirations to the people of Quincy? [illegible] wanted that he owns Ward 17, th[illegible] the South Boston wards have a f[illegible]dly feeling for him, that he is not a known in 16 and 20 and that they have even heard of him in remote Ward 24 and in Farthest Milton, but out, out, away out—in one word, Jeremiah, have they heard of James in Quincy?"

"Perhaps it will surprise you," answered the old Pembroke Academy grad, "to learn that Councillor Curley is as well known in Quincy as he is in 17. It's a fact. Jim Curley has eight uncles living, and every mother's son of them settled in Quincy. Most of them have done well out there and own some property. I couldn't begin to tell you how many cousins he has, but it's a powerful lot. One of his women relatives in Quincy died not long ago, and I attended the funeral with him. There were sixty-seven backs in the procession to the Scituate Cemetery, every one of them filled with members of the house of Curley.

Whereupon Mr. Good was permitted to proceed.

THEY were over in the sun room of the Parker House, on one of those sizzling hot days which immediately followed the rainy season, and George was making that ideal claret lemonade of his for them, when one of the younger members of the party observed that he would like nothing better than to be the man who owns Parker's.

Which, naturally, led straight up to the question. Here is Mr. J. Reed Whipple, the dominant personality in the Parker House, Young's and the Touraine. Where does he stop? Which house is favored with the constant and regular patronage of the chief?

"That's an easy one," said the man who knows everybody. "If you inquire from the folks at the desk you'll find that Mr. Whipple's home—so far as he makes any of the hotels his home—is right here in the Parker House, as it has been for many years.

"Naturally he is in and out of all three of them every day, but if he has any choice among them the Parker would seem to be his favorite. I understand however, that Mr. Whipple has a private house in Brookline and that his son-in-law, Mr. Pierce, vice-president of the company, is a Cambridge man."

Then everybody fell to discussing Mr. Whipple's taste in picking hotels to live in, and inasmuch as this was a party of Parker House regulars, with no insurgents present, it was unanimously agreed that Mr. Whipple is a connoisseur.

What would you say? Young's, the Parker House or the Touraine?

THE NEWEST JOKES TOLD BY THE COMEDIANS

"MY wife told me to stop in and buy her a bath[illegible]," I said to the clerk in a department store. "What are your sizes and prices?"

"We have a very nice one here," explained the clerk, "that I am sure she will like. A ten-dollar bill will just cover it."

"It isn't just about the size she wants," I answered. "How much is it?"

• • •

"I CAUGHT a street-car conductor, who owes me money, on the car platform, last night."

"Did you get your money?"

"No. He did the same thing my other debtors do."

"What's that?"

"Put me off."

• • •

"WHY did you wear that evening dress at the card party last night?"

"Why, what was the matter with it?"

"Don't you know when you play poker it's only necessary to show your hand?"

• • •

THE other day while walking along Broadway I met a friend from Chicago whom I hadn't seen for a long time.

"What are you doing here?" I asked him.

"I'm on here buying some goods."

"Where are you stopping?"

"Oh, I don't know about that," I replied, "there's some pretty big ones where I am."

• • •

I WENT into a restaurant the other day and ordered a steak. The waiter brought it in and it looked pretty good, but when I tried to cut it I found I couldn't do it. I complained to the waiter about it, but he said I would have to pay for it just the same.

"How's that?" I asked.

"Well, you've got it all bent up so that we can't use it again!"

• • •

THEN I told the waiter he could bring me a piece of pie.

"Will you eat it here or do you want to take it out?" he asked.

"If it's all the same to you," said I, "I'll do both."

"But don't you want something in place of that steak?" the waiter asked.

"Well, what have you got?" I inquired.

"Well," he said, "I have calves' brains, chicken livers, pigs' feet——"

"Were you born that way?" I asked him.

• • •

I TOLD him he might bring me some soup. In a few moments I noticed that the table cloth under the plate was getting wet.

"Say, waiter," I said, "this plate must be cracked."

"Oh, the plate ain't cracked," he said, "it's only a leek in the soup."

• • •

BUT I didn't want any more of that, so I ordered a salad. With the first dip of the fork I drew out a collar button.

"Now, Mr. Waiter, will you please tell me the meaning of this?"

"Oh," he said, "that's only part of the dressing."

• • •

SITTING at the next table to me was a man whose finger joints were all broken and swelled up. I asked the waiter what the matter was with the man's fingers, and he explained that the man was deaf and dumb, and used to have the habit of cracking jokes on his fingers.

• • •

I LEFT the restaurant and walked down the street a short distance to a place where a bunch of Irishmen were working in an excavation. Among them was an Italian, who didn't seem to be very popular among the sons of Erin. He worked diligently enough, but they didn't seem to think he knew anything or was worth much. The lone Italian started to roll a wheelbarrow across the trench when one of the Irishmen shouted at him:

"Here, drop that wheelbarrow. What do you know about machinery? Get a pick!"

• • •

A NOTION seller was offering a clock, nicely varnished and colored and with a looking glass in front, to a woman who wouldn't be generally considered hand-some.

"Why, it's beautiful," said the vender.

"Beautiful, indeed! Why, a look at it almost frightens me," said the woman.

"In that case, ma'am," replied the vender, "I guess you had better buy one that has no looking glass in it."

• • •

"I WANT some man to figure out how much electricity it will take to light my store. Whom would you recommend?"

"One of those lightning calculators, of course."

• • •

PAT REILLY, a good natured Irishman who was never known to quarrel with anyone, asked a Hebrew why his people were so clever and made so much money.

"My friend, it's because we eat 'geiter fish,'" replied the Hebrew.

"They sure must be wonderful fish," said the Irishman, "I would like to have one. What will you charge me for one?"

"Five dollars," replied the Hebrew.

"All right," said the Irishman, "here's your money. Give me one."

When he got the fish he put it to his nose, smelled it, and said:

To which the Hebrew solemnly replied:

"You're getting wise already, my friend."

BIXLEY & FINK

THE VAUDEVILLE COMEDIANS.

Bixley and Fink.

"WHEN was the first financial transaction?"

"In the ark, when Noah watered the stock."

"WHAT would you do for a million dollars?"

"I'm ashamed to tell you."

• • •

"I'VE got a new job—dressmaker in a cigar factory."

"Dressmaker in a cigar factory? How do you make that out?"

"I make wrappers for cigars."

• • •

"DO you know that I started life as a barefoot boy?" said a merchant who had been rather successful.

"Well, I wasn't born with shoes on, myself," answered his clerk.

• • •

WE had six umbrellas at our house, but they were all broken and needed fixing. My wife worried me so much one rainy day that I took them all down to have them repaired. I had umbrellas on the brain that day. When I left the restaurant after eating my lunch I absent-mindedly picked up an umbrella belonging to a woman sitting at the same table.

"Here," she exclaimed, "where are you going with that umbrella?"

"I beg your pardon, madam," I said, very much embarrassed. "I thought it was mine. I had one when I left home."

On my way home that night I called for my six umbrellas, and boarded a car. On the car was the woman whose umbrella I had started, unconsciously, to purloin at noon. She looked up at me and said:

"You've had a very good day, haven't you?"

• • •

WE had a servant at our house once who knew how to work hard, but not always how to work well. One day she was told to wash the windows. She washed them all clean inside, but never touched them on the outside. My wife asked her why she had omitted washing the outside, and she said:

"Shure, mum, I chaned them inside so we could look out, but left them dirty outside so folks couldn't look in."

• • •

ONE day when I came to the city I was watching some men at work painting a building. They were standing on a staging about ten stories from the ground. Just as I was about to leave, one of them slipped and fell to the ground, paint and all. I rushed up to him expecting to find, of course, that he was dead, but when he saw me he sat up and said:

"I came down with flying colors, didn't I? Well, I had to come down for more paint soon, anyway."

• • •

I GOT on a train one day and rode as far as Yonkers, and the conductor came around and looked at my ticket and said.

"Young man, you're on the wrong train."

I had to get off and walk all the way back to New York again. I got on another train and rode about thirty miles, and the conductor came around and looked at my ticket, and said:

"Young man, you're on the wrong train."

I had to get off and walk back to New York again. I got on another train, and, of course, was mad and began to swear. A minister, sitting in a seat behind me, said:

"Young man, stop that swearing. Do you know that you are on the road to hell?"

And so I had to get off again!

• • •

"BY jingo, Bill, I hate to speak of it, but I need a hundred dollars like the very old dickens today."

"What a singular coincidence, old chap; I do, too."

• • •

A CLERGYMAN was very anxious to introduce some hymn books into the church, and arranged with his clerk that the latter was to give out a notice about them immediately after the service. The clerk, however, had a notice of his own to give out with reference to the baptism of infants. Accordingly, at the close of he sermon, he arose and announced that "All those who have children whom they wish to have baptized, please send in their names at once to the clerk."

The clergyman, who was very hard of hearing, thought that the clerk was giving out the hymn-book notice, and when the clerk had finished he arose and added:

"And I should say, for the benefit of those who haven't any that they may obtain some from the ushers any day from 3 to 4 o'clock; the ordinary little ones at fifty cents each, and the special ones at seventy-five cents."

• • •

"HERE is another forcible temperance lecture," said a wife, reading from a newspaper to her husband, one evening. "This story I have just read tells of a young man in a boat being so intoxicated that he upset the craft, fell into the river and was drowned. You see, if he had never touched anything but water he wouldn't have lost his life."

"Let me see," mused the husband, "he fell into the river, you say?"

"Yes," answered the wife.

"Didn't die until he fell in?"

"Why, you're positively silly," laughed the wife; "of course he didn't die until he was drowned."

"Then it was the water that killed him."

TWO pavement artists were boasting how they could paint.

"Do you know," said one, "I painted a quarter on the ground one day and a beggar nearly broke his fingers trying to pick it up!"

"That's nothing to what I did," said the other. "I painted a leg of mutton on a stone, and it was so realistic that a hungry dog ate half the stone before he found ou his mistake."

A COMEDY SHIPWRECK

By NAT M. WILLS

(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association, Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

THE first thing you want to do when you go to sea is to get acquainted with the bos'n. The bos'n has a cinch job. All he has to do is to smoke bad tobacco in a pipe. He fills his pipe every morning, goes down to the sailors' boudoirs, and pipes all hands to breakfast. In the afternoon, he pipes off the gamblers in the smoking room, and every evening when the passengers want to sleep, he pipes them off over the transom.

Some sailors brag about being to sea, but a good bos'n gets to see more than any of 'em. This bos'n knew everything. He told me all about navigation. He said the first thing you had to do was to learn to weigh the anchor. You put the anchor on one side of the scales and a life preserver on the other, and if they balance each other, the ship can sail.

The bos'n and I got real chummy, and to show how much he thought of me, he took me down and introduced me to the bartender. The bartender had been on the boat for twenty years. I asked him if he ever saw a sea serpent, and he said, "No, but a lot of people who come down here have," and sure enough on my fourth drink I saw a dozen pink whales, seven alligators and a whole flock of sea serpents.

When I woke up I was in my berth. I felt an awful shock, and somebody yelled, "The ship is sinking." I was all dressed, but I thought the ship might sink, so I put on my rubbers and ran out.

The captain shouted down to the bos'n, "Pipe the crew on deck," but the bos'n says "No, I'll stay down here and pipe the girls." I went up to the wireless operator—I knew I was safe up there with him, because the vaudeville agents would get him before he could drown.

MR. WILLS.

The captain ordered all of the women into the boats first. One woman said she wouldn't go because the sea was full of sharks. The captain said: "That's all right, they are mangling sharks." When all of the women were off, the captain ordered all of the sailors to man the pumps.

Now, you see, a sailor doesn't wear suspenders or a belt, and he always has to keep hitching his trousers up with his hands. So a sailor can't pump with both hands without losing something. That's why they always send the women off a sinking vessel first—so the sailors can keep their mind on the pumps.

The wireless operator showed marvellous presence of mind. He says to me, "We'll drink all we can, and that will make less work for the fellows at the pumps." Then he sent a code message to the bartender, the magic letters, "R. Y. E.," followed by "P. D. Q." Somebody put the captain onto our scheme, and he said: "Great! I'll help you, and we may be able to drink the vessel dry."

After we worked for two hours, the captain said to the bartender: "Is there much left?" The bartender said: "There's four cases more." So the captain said: "You can all go. I'll stick to the ship. I'll get off last."

Then the wireless operator got busy again and flashed out the signal, "C. Q. D." meaning, "Come and help us." Then he flashed "C. D. Q.," meaning, "Come darned quick." Then the wires began to go, snap! snap! snap! and then came the biggest snap I ever saw from Keith & Proctor, offering the operator forty weeks in vaudeville. Just then the bos'n came chasing down, saying that we were right off shore near Coney Island. The captain seemed much relieved.

"There's a great life-saving crew at Coney Island," he said, "no one was ever lost there. Jump overboard, boys, they'll find you if it takes two weeks."

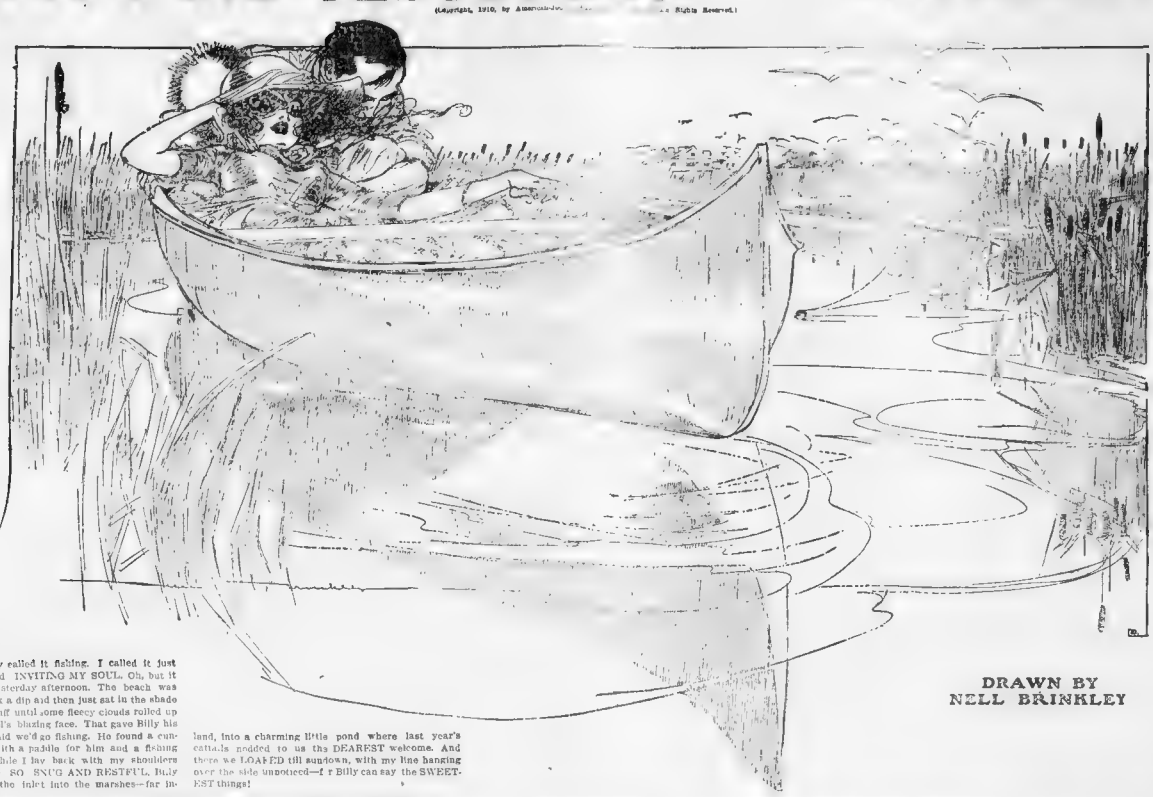
Then he ran up into the mast with a bottle of rye in each hand, and as we swam away his last words were:

"I'll stick to the ship lads—tell the boys I died in good spirits."

WHAT I DID YESTERDAY

ON MY SATURDAY AFTERNOON OFF.

(Copyright, 1910, by American-Jo[urnal-Exa]miner. All Rights Reserved.)



DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

HA, HA! Billy called it fishing. I called it just loafing, and INVITING MY SOUL. Oh, but it was hot yesterday afternoon. The beach was blistering. We took a dip and then just sat in the shade and drank cool stuff until some fleecy clouds rolled up and veiled old Sol's blazing face. That gave Billy his inspiration. He said we'd go fishing. He found a cunning little canoe with a paddle for him and a fishing rod for me, and while I lay back with my shoulders against his knees SO SNUG AND RESTFUL, Billy paddled through the inlet into the marshes—far inland, into a charming little pond where last year's cattails nodded to us the DEAREST welcome. And there we LOAFED till sundown, with my line hanging over the side unnoticed—for Billy can say the SWEETEST things!

SOME OF THE FUNNY THINGS THE CHILDREN SAY

"WHAT do you think, Elizabeth," said Aunt Betty, "a dear little new baby girl came to Mrs Brown's house last night at 10 o'clock."

"I suppose," said Elizabeth, "that was awfully late for a little baby to come out."

* * *

WILLIE went to a church picnic and, being a favorite with the ladies, was liberally supplied with good things to eat. Later in the day one of the ladies noticed the boy sitting near a stream, with a woebegone expression on his face and his hands clasped over his stomach.

"Why, what's the matter, Willie?" she asked kindly. "Haven't you had enough to eat?"

"Oh, yes'm," said the boy. "I've had enough. I feel as though I don't want to live."

* * *

AT the time of the eclipse of the sun Percy asked his mother if any one had ever seen God. His mother told him that God's brightness was so dazzling that no human eye could behold him. Percy pondered a moment and then said:

"Couldn't I see him through a piece of smoked glass?"

* * *

AUNTY (who is in a hurry to get little Howard to bed)—Come, now, Howard, say your prayers to aunty and get into bed.

Howard—I don't say my prayers to you, aunty, I say them to God.

Aunty—Well, say them to God, then, and get through.

Howard—No, I'm not ready. God is listening to some other little boys and girls, and it isn't my turn yet.

* * *

ONE day I noticed that two of my top teeth were loose. I told him that he must work at them and pull them out and that then he would have some new ones.

"Will they be gold ones?" he asked.

* * *

MOTHER (to little girl, as the contribution box is passed)—Put your penny in the box, dear.

Little Girl—What will come out then, chewing gum?

* * *

JIM, who had always thought his mother very young, was present when her age was being discussed. When some one asked if she was thirty-two, he answered:

"I'll just let you know my mother's no old maid!"

"DO you know, uncle," said my five-year-old niece, "mamma only ordered one baby, but when the doctor came he brought two, and they were so much alike and so pretty that mamma didn't know which one to choose, so she kept them both."

* * *

ARTFUL Jimmy, conscious of unprepared lessons, and desirous of staying home from school, said:

"Mamma, dear, what sort of illness is there that you don't have to take medicine for?"

* * *

A LITTLE boy asked his grandmother why she wore glasses, and she explained that it was to make things look bigger.

"Well, grandma," he said, "will you put them on next time you cut me a piece of pie?"

* * *

I WAS at my aunt's for dinner one evening when one of the dishes served was canned corn. Kenneth, aged four, was asked if he would have some of the vegetable. He looked at it, shook his head, and said:

"I don't like that kind. I like the kind on a stick."

* * *

MILDRED was in the bathroom one day washing. After staying there some time she came out and said to her governess:

"Miss G——, I looked at your toilet water, but I did not take any. Don't you think I am good?"

"Yes, indeed, you are, and I am so glad," replied the governess.

Mildred thought a few moments, and then said:

"You know, I just couldn't get the cork out."

* * *

TOMMY went fishing the other day without his mother's permission. The next day one of his chums met him and asked:

"Did you catch anything yesterday, Tommy?"

"Not till I got home," was the rather sad reply.

* * *

LITTLE MARY went into the country on a visit to her grandmother. Walking into the garden, she spied a peacock, a bird she had never seen before. After gazing in great admiration she ran into the house and cried:

LITTLE WAYNE had been playing with the cat and caught the cat's tail in the sweeper. While trying to get the tail out, the cat turned and scratched Wayne's thumb and set up an awful yell.

Wayne's mother, who was upstairs, came running and released Wayne and the cat. She turned and said to the boy:

"Wayne, why didn't you call me?" replied.

"Mamma, wasn't it enough when the puss called [illegible] said two little fellow between"

* * *

MY young nephew was reading his lesson to me one day, when he suddenly exclaimed:

"I'm Engl[illegible]."

"Why, no you're not," I answered.

"I am so! My teacher said so," he replied.

"Your teacher meant that your forefatuers were English," I said.

"Forefathers! Did I have four fathers, Auntie?"

* * *

WILLIE and Mary were playing in the street the other day, when an organ grinder and a monkey came along. Willie had a penny, which he was going to give to the monkey, but Mary cried:

"Oh, don't give it to him—give it to his father."

* * *

RUSSELL was being questioned by his mother regarding some mischief which he was supposed to have committed.

"Now, Russell," said she, "if you don't tell me the truth, I'll have to whip you."

"But, mamma, I've lied to you before and you never whipped me," replied the boy.

* * *

WHEN Joonny saw his newly born brother for the first time he was very much surprised to see how red his skin was. He turned to his mother and said:

"Mother, I think it must be very warm in heaven, 'cause my little brother is so sunburned."

* * *

ARTHUR had been soundly spanked and sent to bed. Half an hour after his mother came in and asked him how he was feeling.

"Oh, mamma," he replied, "I feel just like I'm sitting on a mustard plaster."

* * *

DURING his first visit to a farm, little Willie came into the house, crying sadly.

"What is the matter, dear?" asked his mother.

"I went out to see the cows, and they didn't give nothing but milk," sobbed the boy.

"What did you expect?" inquired his mother.

"I'm not sure what I expected," replied Willie, "but, mother, where does beef tea come from?"

* * *

MY sister had come home from school and was telling the family about a certain stout man that had lectured to them in the morning. When through her father said:

"What nationality was the man, daughter?"

"Broken English," she replied.

* * *

FIVE-YEAR-OLD Dorothy had just returned from her first visit to the city. One of the most interesting things she had seen there was an elevator.

"An' when I grow up," some days later she was telling her sister, "I'm goin' to build a castle awful high, an' 'stead o' stairs, I'm goin' to have a span'-down little house in it."

* * *

HERBERT'S father's arms are covered with thick, black hair. One day as Herbert was sitting on his father's knee stroking his arm, he looked up with a puzzled expression and said:

"Papa, what makes you have feathers on your arms? You isn't a rooster,"

I.

JAKE MEYER had a girl that he tried to win,
He took her to Coney one day;
They sat at a table to have some lunch,
"Oh, Jakey," the maiden did say:

Chorus:

"GIVE a look at the beautiful roses,
Kissed by the morning dew,
Don't they smell nice, them posies?
Buy me a bunch or two.
Roses mean love and June, dear,
Call the boy over, please, Jake.'
Then Jakey Meyer said, "Say, sweetie,
If we two shall have a nice steak!"

II.

JAKE MEYER lost his girlie right then and there,
She rode home without poor Jake;
She's married to rich Mr. Goldstein now,
And lives on both roses and steak.

Chorus:

"GIVE a look at the beautiful roses,
Kissed by the morning dew;
Don't they smell nice, them posies?
Buy me a bunch or two.
Roses mean love and June, dear,
Call the boy over, please, Jake."
Then Jakey Meyer said, "Say, sweetie better
If we two shall have a nice steak!"

SINCE BEANTOWN'S LEARNED TO FLY

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

(Copyright, 1910, by American Journal Examiner, Great Britain Rights Reserved)

THE boy stood on the flat house roof, whence all but him had fled,
And thumbed the smudgy pages of the thriller that he read.
He heard a buzzing in the air; he heard a motor cough,
And soon a steerable balloon came by and brushed him off.

MAUD MULLER, in the third floor back, was looking at the twilight,
And said, "I hate to have to pun, but they should keep this up!"

IN Malden, when the sun was low, a youth, by name Jack Horner,
Upon the flames there poured a rill of high-grade gasoline
From skyward, and aforesaid Jack has never since been seen.

WHEN Jack and Jill went up the hill to get a can of suds
They both were modishly arrayed in classy Sunday duds.

MISS MUFFET, on a tuffet, sat alone in Franklin Park,
When Wilbur Wright's magneto up aloft began to spark.
The sparks came softly settling down, and ere she was aware

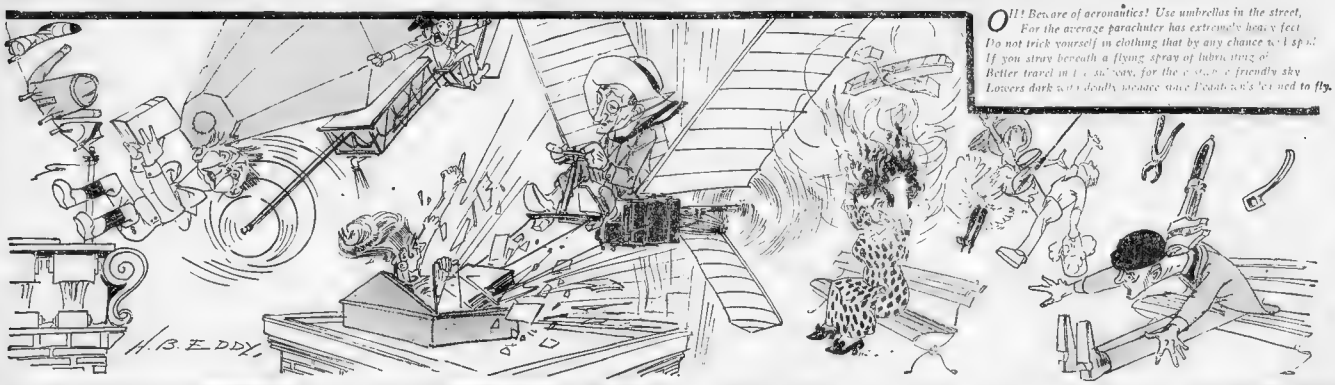
A UNION mechanician on an airship in the blue
Dropped his tools and quit the instant that the evening whistle blew,
Which peeved a fussy lounger on a Boston Common bench,
Who happened to obstruct a large and weighty monkey wrench.



O!! Beware of aeronautics! Use umbrellas in the street,
For the average parachuter has extremely heavy feet
Do not trick yourself in clothing that by any chance will spark;
If you stray beneath a flying spray of lubricating oil
Better travel in a hansom cab, for the careless friendly sky

MEGAPHONE MAN AT DUDLEY STREET

Station. Time, 5 p. m. Any Day. Residents of Dorchester and Roxbury running about aimlessly. Trolley gongs clanging. Mighty hubbub. Enter Megaphone Man, escorting a party of fourteen including one child. Rubbernech wagon can be seen through the Zeigler Street Fence, at anchor.

MEGAPHONE MAN—This is the Dudley Street Transfer Station, one of the largest terminals in the world.

MEGAPHONE MAN—That's because you can't see it all at once. This is only the lower level, and only half of that. Standing here and looking to the right——

TROLLEY GONG (directly behind)—Clang, clang, clang.

Megaphone man jumps and so do his followers. Harvard Square car stops. There is a mad rush of would-be passengers, who crawl under the bar of the open car and scatter the Bubbenreck Party in all directions.

MEGAPHONE MAN (through the megaphone)—This way for Seeing Dudley Street. This way.

WOMAN WITH HATPIN—A man pushed me almost under that car.

MEGAPHONE MAN—It may not have been his fault, madam. Some woman was probably pushing him from the depths below and makes a dash for a Dorchester car. He lands successfully on the running board and turns his face towards the Megaphone Party.

WELLESLEY GIRL (speaking French)—Cherchez la femme.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Kindly stand to one side for a moment. Now (he produces a rope and ties it around his waist), everybody take hold of this line and don't let go on your life. Are we ready to cross the tracks?

The exploring party makes a safe passage and approaches the staircase leading to the inbound Elevated trains. Child sees pretty turnstile leading to south-bound surface cars and playfully pushes through it.

MOTHER—What shall I do?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Pay another fare to get back or stay there until we come. We shall enter that part of the station presently.

Child weeps bitterly and mother declares she will have her money back.

MEGAPHONE MAN (leading the way upstairs)—We are now on the upper level where cars may be taken for Dorchester via Warren street and Blue Hill avenue. Many distinguished residents of Boston live in this section of the city.

A tall, heavily-built man emerges from the depths below and makes a dash for a Dorchester car. He lands successfully on the running board and turns his face towards the Megaphone Party.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Why, that's ex-Senator Thomas Leavitt of Dorchester. He has just finished a term as School House Commissioner and is devoting his attention to his suburban newspapers. We are very fortunate, ladies and gentlemen.

PRETTY GIRL FROM WORCESTER (pointing towards a staircase leading skyward)—Where are all those people coming from? Surely there aren't any cars up there?

MEGAPHONE MAN—That is known as Lovers' Lane. It is about half a mile long and crosses the whole station. You leave the Elevated train over on Dudley street. Saunter along this high-covered passage and after five or ten minutes' walk you emerge here and take the car for Dorchester. The Boston Elevated is proud of Lovers' Lane. The passengers on the Elevated get a chance to take a little exercise and it saves wear and tear on the surface cars.

MAN FROM NEW YORK (with a grin)—I don't see many saunterers. They are all doing it at a run. This reminds me of the Brooklyn Bridge.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Well, if there isn't Michael J. Sughrue, the counsel for the Finance Commission. And there is Judge Henry S. Dewey, one of the most remarkable men in Boston.

ELEVATED EMPLOYE (truculently)—Say, you, are you going to keep this gang of rubes obstructin' traffic all day.

MEGAPHONE MAN (with dignity)—Come, my friends. We will now descend to the south-bound lower level.

WOMAN FROM WEYMOUTH—Mister, how do you ever learn which of these stairs is which?

MEGAPHONE MAN—Experience, lady. It costs a nickel every time you guess wrong.

MEGAPHONE MAN—Excuse me, I took the wrong stairs.

Is about to go up another staircase when he sees a familiar turnstile across the tracks.

MEGAPHONE MAN Oh, we can get out this way.

All push through the turnstile, but the rope gets entangled in it and has to be abandoned. The crowd here is enormous, but there is a glad cry and the long lost mother and child rush forward.

MEGAPHONE MAN—How the child has grown. We are now on the lower level, south bound. Cars for Meeting House Hill, Dorchester, Neponset, Quincy and other places leave here.

STRANGE MAN (approaching party timidly)—Would you mind giving me a piece of bread or cake?

KIND-HEARTED WOMAN—My poor man, what's the matter.

STRANGER—I've been waiting here two days for an Adams street car, and I haven't had anything to eat.

Mother of child gives him child's pop corn. He eats it eagerly.

MEGAPHONE MAN—It's a strange thing, but we frequently hear of people who have waited hours and even days for certain cars, and yet the Boston Elevated can prove that they run every fifteen minutes.

Megaphone Man bumps into dignified gentleman endeavoring to board a Dudley street car. "Excuse me, Mr. Rothwell," in a stage whisper. "That is Bernard Rothwell, president of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and one of the most prominent men in Boston."

WOMAN FROM WEYMOUTH—How is it when the cars come to a stop they are all filled with men?

MEGAPHONE MAN—The men have no chance of getting aboard when the cars stop, because the women trample on them, so they walk half way to Dorchester and meet the inbound cars. In that way they are on board when the cars reach the terminal.

MAN FROM NEW YORK—Well, in my town no woman ever has to stand in a street car.

MEGAPHONE MAN—We now mount the Eifel Tower, otherwise known as the Forest Hills Elevated Platform. There are no elevators and those who are not accustomed to narrow mountain paths need not come.

Leads the way to a narrow staircase down which a steady stream of people is pouring. High up in the air can be seen the Elevated platform. Megaphone man tries to go up stairs, but is pushed back by the homeward bound mob.

MEGAPHONE MAN—I think we shall omit the mount. In climb to-day You can see pretty well from here how it looks. We shall also omit the west platform upper level, where you take cars for Jamaica Plain and West Roxbury, since it is exactly the same as the East platform. Is there anything more you would like to see at Dudley street?

CHORUS (loudly)—No.

Then this way to the automobile.

STORIES THEY TELL ON TOM SHARKEY

OF all the men who have been connected with the American prize-ring, few are more widely known than Tom Sharkey—the man who gave Champion Jeffries his hardest fight.

Like every great fighter "Sailor Tom" figures as the hero of innumerable anecdotes which sporting men are fond of telling. Whether Mr. Sharkey actually had all the experiences that the story tellers attribute to him is a question—but, at any rate, the stores are good and Mr. O'Rourke has gathered together some of the best of them on this page to-day.

By Tom O'Rourke.

SOME of his friends were eating with him in a chop house one evening, and had finished dinner, when Tom said he would have a cup of coffee. One of his friends said he would have a demi-tasse. Tom hailed the waiter and told him to bring him a cup of coffee and demi-tasse, too.

* * *

ANOTHER evening he was with his friend Henry Schrauel and they ordered broiled lobsters for two—on Schrauel, as usual. The waiter brought the lobsters, but there was a claw missing on the one he set before Sharkey. Now you know Sharkey never pays for what he doesn't get.

"Here, waiter, wot's this, a lob-ster with one claw?" said Tom.

"Oh," chirped the waiter in return, "very often we get them that way, sir. You see, they put them in sacks when we get them, and they get to fighting, and sometimes they lose a claw or two."

"Take this away!" yelled Sharkey. "Bring me in the winner!"

* * *

AFTER Sharkey's return to the training quarters, the first time he beat Ruhlin at Coney Island, he was explaining how he hit Ruhlin and stood him upon his head.

"I hit him on the jaw and he fell on his dimple," he said.

They all laughed, and Walcott said;

"Tom, you mean he fell on his temple, not his dimple."

"No matter, that's what I call it."

* * *

WHILE at the training table one day with George Dixon, Sharkey, Bob Armstrong and the rest of the training staff, Walcott noticed that Tom was a sword swallower, and said:

"Tom, aren't you afraid? Some of the boys might come and hit you on the back and you'd cut yourself."

"No, I have been eating this way for thirty years," said Sharkey, "and I have not cut myself yet."

Dixon fell off the chair when he heard this reply and Tom wanted to know what the matter was.

* * *

WHEN he attained a little prominence in San Francisco, after his first meeting with Corbett, Sharkey thought he would run down to Vallejo and see his former shipmates in the navy, quite a number of them being about their discharge from the service. Numbers of them were loitering about, spending money, and waiting to ship over for another three years. A great many of them were pleased to see Tom and wanted to shake the hand that handed out the wallops to Corbett.

The principal saloonkeeper of Vallejo was quite an admirer of Sharkey's, and had one of the first pictures Tom had taken hanging at the end of the bar. The boys kept treating Sharkey until it came time to close, which is 11 o'clock in Vallejo. Tom had all he cared to drink for the evening, and had taken a cigar accidentally, until his pockets were filled to overflowing. When the proprietor said: "Eleven o'clock, boys, time to close up," Tom spoke up and said:

"Hold on, boys, it's my turn to treat; have a cigar with me," and he handed out the cigars he had been taking on his shipmates all night.

* * *

"DUTCH," a young man who was commissioner for Senator Sullivan, tells another cigar story on Tom. One day they were with a party of friends at the Occidental Hotel, when "Dutch," who was treating to cigars, asked Sharkey if he would have a perfecto. Tom replied.

"No, if you don't mind, I will have a cigar."

* * *

TOM took a trip to Ireland after he had made considerable money and his name had become prominent in the press. He thought it was up to him to visit the old folks, whom he had not seen since he ran away from home at the age of twelve. When he arrived in the little town of Dundalk he was dressed in the latest style, with his "stovepipe" hat, as he called it. He inquired for Mr. Sharkey, asking if he lived in the same cabin. He was told he did, and the boys and men followed him. Tom thought his fame as a fighter had preceded him to this little town and he thought they were admiring him as such. But such was not the case. They thought he was a strange clergyman or bishop who had newly arrived in Dundalk, and they kept doffing their hats to him in reverence.

Tom walked along, swelling himself by throwing out his chest, until he came to his father's cabin and pulled the latchstring. He darted in, so as to give the old folks a surprise, but Tom forgot the stovepipe hat. This was swept from his head by the low cabin door. His folks did not know him, not having seen him since he was a little boy, until Tom told them he was the prodigal son returned. After a while Tom went out and bought the fatted calf himself. The boys in the street who had followed him, ran away with the hat as soon as they learned he was not a bishop.

The Idol of Paris

A GROUP OF PHOTOGRAPHS OF MME. LANTELME, WHICH SHOW HER MELANCHOLY BEAUTY

Paris, June 7.

THE boulevards have a new idol. It is Mlle. Lucie Lantelme, a little actress at the varieties. Paris has to have at least one new idol of beauty a year, and Mlle. Lantelme has stepped into the place held by a long line of very wonderful French fascinators. But where others have won their throne, temporarily, of course, but none the less triumphantly, by dash and go and wit, the curve of a mouth, the shape of a head or the turn of an ear, Mlle. Lantelme has discovered a new charm.

It is her "glorious sadness" that has won her her place. Mlle. Lantelme's eyes are peculiar and pensive and she turns them upward so that a thin crescent of white appears under their luminous iris. It almost looks as though she would cry at a word. She has a sweet, ethereal sadness, although she weighs 135 pounds and seems well nourished. Pensiveness hangs over her like a mystic aura.

All this has set Parisians by the ears, it is so new and novel, and, withal, so charming.

So, when Mlle. Lantelme rides out in her demure carriage along the Bois de Boulogne the boulevardiers congregate upon each side and watch her as she passes. Sympathetic tears almost dim their eyes as they watch her sorrowful orbs, staring directly in front and looking neither to the right nor to the left. For that is another charm of Mlle. Lantelme. She does not cast roguish glances at her admirers nor smile upon them sweetly. Instead, she always looks sorrowfully straight ahead.

Mlle. Lantelme is only twenty-three years old, but at twenty-five she may be a princess! Who knows? Perhaps that is what she is thinking about when she rides along the boulevards, with her sorrowful eyes cast down, while Paris forgets the green hour to toss up its hats and shout its appreciation.

Mlle. Lantelme has set a sorrowful fashion. There are Lantelme mantles, Lantelme hats,

That Most Amazing Miss Sears

What CAN She Be Trying to Do to Society With Her Walking Marathons, Five-O'Clock Risings, Mermaid Activities, Trouser Wearing, Polo Playing, Wild Horse Riding, Feminine Cigarette Defending System—Her New Social Open-Air Code.

Miss Sears Wearing 'Em for Horseback Riding

Miss Eleanor Sears, the Boston Heiress, in Her Walking Hat.

MISS ELEANOR SEARS of the moderate, discreet smoking by women, Boston-Brahmin set which had "More women smoke cigarettes to-day than ever before," says Miss Sears. just shocked conservative society again by coming to the defense of "It is a form of indulgence which men have enjoyed for centuries and we can-the woman cigarette smoker—of course not say that it has weakened their moral fibre.

"There is a different attitude taken to cigarette smoking by women. There is less objection to-day in our social code."

This interesting remark of Miss Sears has set Newport and Boston society wondering just what Miss Sear's conception of the social code is and whether her very wonderful manner of doing things is not a well-worked out plan to soften the backbone of the Back Bay aristocrats and to create a rival Sears manner of living in America's upper set.

When Miss Eleanor Sears marries Harold Vanderbilt, as the gossips still keep on saying she will do, her family and wealth, united to the Vanderbilt millions, will make her one of the most potent influences in American society.

If she insists upon a "follow the leader" policy there will be no place for the fair, shrinking, timid and frail debutante. For Miss Eleanor Sears, of Boston, Massachusettes, is a dead game sport.

"Deeds, not words," says the poet, and by an analysis of Miss Sears's deeds here would seem to be the requisites for a society leader:

Play tennis four hours at a stretch.

Jump in automobiles on the fly and in the stiffest wind.

Ride horseback.

Ride horses astride in trousers.

Drive four-in-hand and tandem and play polo.

At least once a month put on corduroy breeches and boots and walk sixty-six miles.

Smoke cigarettes if you want to—and it's nobody's business.

Miss Sears does not lay open claim to be trying to reform American society, but her dearest friends suspect her, like that other earnest young twentieth century woman, Miss Inas Milholland, of harboring theories that she holds to be the lever to overturn her world.

Perhaps the greatest shock the extraordinary Miss Sears gave to Back Bay aristocracy was when she discovered that she ought to wear trousers. One day she came riding into the polo grounds at Burlingame, Cal., in riding breeches and a cutaway coat of thoroughly masculine style. A famous team of polo players from England had been visiting Burlingame, and Miss Sears wanted to play.

"Come on, you fellows; let's have a practice game," she called to some men who were riding about the field.

The first man she addressed happened to be Major Rotheram, of the English team. He stopped in amazement.

"Ah, well! ah, Miss,"—— stuttered the Major. "I hardly know what to say. I say, tell me what to say, Gill," he continued turning to another member of the English team, F. A. Gill.

Gill hardly knew what to say either, and, after a glance of admiration at Miss Sears's breeches, he rode away. Then John Lawson, the manager of the Burlingame team, told Miss Sears that she could not play.

"Why can't I play, Mr Lawson?" she shouted. "I can play as well as any of you."

She had nothing to do but stay off the field. She was very indignant, and could hardly control herself as she commented on the man players.

"I suppose they think that I can't do anything because I am a girl. Well, I can play as well as any of them, and better than most of them. Gee! Look at that duffer! If I couldn't play better than that I should want to wear skirts.

"Will you tell me why a girl shouldn't wear anything she pleases, as long as it's decent? No man has a right to compel us to wear a dress that endangers our lives and prevents us from doing anything useful and makes it impossible for us to be healthy.

"And then, why should anybody tell women they mustn't play polo. It's simply impossible to play it in a side-saddle, but riding astride they can do it perfectly well."

So Miss Sears went right on wearing her trousers. Last season she organized walking clubs of women and girls at Burlingame. Her strong lieutenant was Miss Jennie Crocker, heiress to millions, who appeared in the same daring clothes that Miss Sears affected. Shortly they had many converts, and the California roads were dotted with "Sears Clubs," all composed of jaunty, charming, unembarrassed young women in tight-fitting knickerbockers and loose coats that came down half-way to the knee.

"Oh! It's only that extraordinary Miss Sears and her friends out walking," they would say, as the very striking procession passed their houses early in the morning.

It is Miss Sears's greatest disappointment that she has not yet been able to organize these walking clubs in Boston, but soon she may succeed, and the classic streets of the Hub will be shocked by young women in the clothes their brothers used to wear.

It is hardly necessary to speak of Miss Sears's determination—that wager of $200 of hers with Mrs. Walter Martin and Miss Jennie Crocker that she could walk from Burlingame to Del Monte, 106 miles, has become a legend in California. It is to be recorded, that she did not succeed.

Miss Sears herself smokes cigarettes now and then. She and Alice Roosevelt, now Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, used to be great friends in Washington, and they both liked the same brand. Then they used to quite shock the prudes, but Miss Sears is, as has been indicated, very determined. She never does anything without having justification. And so Boston now shrugs its shoulders and says, "Well, if Eleanor is going to make us smoke cigarettes I suppose sooner or later we will all be smoking cigarettes."

"But it is the impression that all society women smoke cigarettes," said an interviewer to Miss Sears regarding her latest campaign. "There are," she said, do not disapprove of the smoking habit "many society women who are inveterate and yet who could not be induced to take cigarette smokers and they have thereby injured themselves very much. But it is the overdoing, not the cigarette, that brings about the harmful effects."

"Now, don't misunderstand and think I say all society women smoke cigarettes. Any one would know better than that. There is a class who do not care for smoking. They do not smoke simply because they don't wish to. They have no objection to it, and do not see anything improper or injurious in a moderate use of the weed, but as they don't care for it they don't smoke.

"Women are becoming broader in many of their views. Not all women, but many of them, many of the more intelligent ones, are thinkers. Still there are innumerable women who look aghast upon the woman who smokes, although personally I don't believe that moderate cigarette smoking could have any harmful effect upon the morals of the smoker.

"Now, drinking might. In fact, I believe it does. In a comparison of the two habits, smoking and drinking liquor, I should say that by all means the latter is the more harmful.

"Our trouble is in overdoing a habit; that is, making the habit a harmful one. Apply the rule of temperance in cigarette smoking and I do not feel that it can do any great harm.

"It's sometimes hear that girls of six teen in wealthy homes smoke cigarettes. Of course that is not true to any great extent. You can hear many things about the homes of the wealthy that are not true. Just as a small boy likes to steal a smoke sometimes, so a girl of sixteen may. But this does not imply that girls of that age are smokers, or are showing any unusual tendency in that direction.

"There is a large class of women, who do not disapprove of the smoking habit; has any baneful effect on a woman, morally or physically."

Of late more and more rumors have been afloat that the old attachment between the Boston girl and Mr. Harold Vanderbilt has been resumed. It was said in Southern California that in her sixty-six-mile walk she stopped thirty-three times to telegraph to Harold. It was also said that at least twenty telegrams a day were interchanged between the two while Miss Sears was in the West and Mr. Vanderbilt in the East.

Just before Miss Eleanor met Harold Vanderbilt she said: "I like to see a real man. I don't think there are any in our set. They are all sissies."

If Mr. Vanderbilt wins Miss Sears it would seem that this would call for all the masculine virtues.

But will she succeed in changing society to her ideas?

Lanteime weists and Lanteime manners. A Lanteime devotee can be told by the pensive manner, the gentle signs and the modest shrinking which attends contact with the rougher humanity.

Yet Mlle. Lanteime's beauty is not that of a recluse. Indeed, it is a combination of a peculiarly humorous and distracting style with the sadness that brought the French to her feet. Parisian women, when they are very beautiful, often have that peculiarity which the French call "la beauty de Diable." This does not mean that its possessor is wicked. Not at all, but that it is a very wicked sort of loveliness. Hence the fascination of the contrast.

So the Lanteime admirers haunt the varieties, crowd the stage door and frequent the Avenue des Acacias in the Bois, where she drives in the afternoon, just to catch a fleeting glimpse of her.

It has been said that this lovely woman has set a good many fashions that American women are wearing without knowing their history. For instance, the fur-bordered shawl-like mantle of velvet edged with fur that is seen in one of the photographs is of her designing, and she was the first to wear it. One sees any number of them in New York, for it was a style that immediately caught the feminine fancy.

The wearing of the hair in a deep-waved bang or fringe quite to the eyebrows was her invention, and the little turban wound about the hair was also her idea.

It is predicted by the great French critics that she will be the greatest French actress of the decade; that she will stand forth as Relane and Bernhardt have, for she has all the qualities of a great artist, and has gone straight forward along the way to success. No modern actress, in fact, ever fell into such a bed of roses as she has or had the way swept wide open for her some might fancy that to have things made so easy for her would cause her to lose that sad look; but no, she is too well balanced to have her head turned by flattery or sudden success.

No Matter How Fast Automobile Racer Lewis Strang Went He Couldn't Out-Speed Hard Luck—And Now His Pretty Actress Wife Is Taken From Him.

HOW fast have you got to go to outspeed a hoodoo? That is what Lewis P. Strang, the "mile-a-minute man," the fairest and squarest and most daring automobile racer the tracks have ever seen, is asking.

No matter how fast Mr. Strang went—and for several years he has been going considerably faster than a mile a minute in the various automobile races in which he has participated—he couldn't outspeed hard luck. Even when he went a mile in the record-breaking time of 57 3-5 seconds he couldn't do it.

After seizing well-earned victories in half a dozen races from him just at the last moment, and through accidents which neither Strang nor any one else could have foreseen or prevented, that hoodoo has now whirled him upside down in an aeroplane, and has finally snatched from him his pretty little wife, who on the stage is known as Louise Alexander, who does that dreadfully shocking dance with Julian Mitchell in "The Follies of 1910" and who is the heroine of one of the most romantic automobile courtships known.

That is what makes "Whirlwind" Strang feel worse than anything was Back in 1908, when his name began to be a household word wherever the automobile was known, the racer married little Jeanne L. Spaulding, who had been for a short time on the stage. It was no idle infatuation. She had determined that she would never go back upon the stage.

But after a year of apparent happiness Miss Alexander found the call of the footlights too strong for her, and she went back to "The Follies of 1908," where her clever and sensational dancing earned her at once a place among the stars of the glittering production.

They decided to separate, but the automobile man felt that sooner or later his wife would tire of the stage and come back to him. No one knew that they had separated formally.

Strang entered every big automobile race that came along. No matter what car he rode, whether it was a Renault, an Isotta, a Marion or a Buick, of foreign or American make, Strang was always the favorite.

In the twenty-four-hour race held at the Brighton Beach Racetrack course on October 1, 1908, Strang drove his car. He was a strong favorite. For hour after hour he flew around the course at the head of all competitors. There wasn't a mile which he didn't run in less than a minute. The terrible pace told on his rivals, and car after car came to grief. One man was killed and five were dangerously wounded. Strang kept the lead, and with a smile of confidence looked back from time to time at George Robertson, who was struggling desperately to overtake him. But he had a more formidable antagonist than George Robertson in fate. His motor was to give out. He had covered over 840 miles, and was speeding upon as a sure winner, when, without any warning, the connecting rod of his machine parted, tore through the crank case and put the car out of business. George Robertson finished an easy winner, making 1177 miles in the allotted twenty-four hours, thus breaking the previous record of 1107 miles for the time. The official records show that Strang was beaten by Robertson, but Strang himself lays his defeat to the hoodoo which overtook him.

Only a week later, at the initial meet on the Motor Parkway course, Strang met defeat again, when Lytle, in an Fiat, won out after an exciting race. The course was 234 miles long. Strang led most of the way, but before he had completed three-quarters of the course his engine began to balk and Lytle gradually overcame his lead. Strang was driving a [illegible] and was making over sixty miles an hour when he came to grief. He was able to finish the race, in fact he made the distance in 239 minutes, or just about at the rate of a mile a minute, but Lytle beat him out by eleven minutes and won the event. No one could have foreseen that balking engine.

Nothing daunted, Strang came to the scratch in the same type of car again in the great Vanderbilt Cup race on October 24, 1908. Again he was the general favorite. Notwithstanding his two previous defeats that month, which were generally attributed to the hardest kind of luck, enthusiasts figured that his great skill, dauntless courage and conservative driving methods would undoubtedly bring him out a victor in the historic race. The course was 258 miles long, and the race was splendidly managed. Soldiers were stationed all along the line to keep the spectators back and thus avert the tragedies which had characterized every previous race of a similar nature.

For two days previous to the race, Strang tried out his car and remedied its weak points, and when the hour of the great event arrived, the machine was apparently in perfect condition.

Strang took the lead right from the start and held it for three hair-raising laps, when he discovered that his clutch wasn't working properly and his engines were balking. His mechanician was nonplussed, and with tears in their eyes, the two saw their antagonists creeping up on them. It was of no use to doctor the machine; it was simply stubborn and wouldn't work. Before the fourth lap was over, Strang saw that it was useless to continue, and retired from the race.

This mile-a-minute-man is out of the "give-it-up" calibre, however, and in the very next important race scheduled, the Automobile Club of America's meet at Savannah, Georgia, had on November 26, 1908, he competed again, still driving a Fiat car. The prize was a $5,000 gold cup. This time the course was 402 miles.

For over one-half the distance, Strang kept in front of the other racers. He was going somewhat over a mile a minute and seemed to hold the race well in hand. The only man he feared was Louis Wagner, in an Italian Fiat car, who was making a grand fight. But once again his adversary was there. And it got him. Before he finished his two hundred and fiftieth mile, he experienced trouble with his tires, and began to lose ground. Then a little later his clutch refused to work, and yard by yard Wagner commenced to gain upon him. Before three hundred miles had been run, Wagner was ahead, and from that time on Strang was not in the reckoning, as one by one his other antagonists overtook him. Wagner won the race in 370 minutes and thirty-one seconds, which was considerably better than a mile minute, and Strang came in sixth.

It did "Whirlwind" Strang no good to change cars. In the Cobe Cup race at Crown Point, Indiana, in June, 1909, Strang drove a Buick. It was a 250-mile race. Before it was half over Strang broke a cotter pin and met with other troubles which forced him to retire, and Chevrolet in the same type of car won the cup.

At the Brighton Beach race track twenty-four-hour race a few months later Strang drove a Marion, but one mishap after another delayed him, and he finished fifth. In the Vanderbilt Cup Race in October, 1909, Strang made his effort in a Fiat. Once again he was a strong favorite.

This time his hoodoo made very short work of him. Before the first lap was over Strang smashed his radiator, and though he made every effort to replace it, he was unable to continue in the race.

Only last May Strang had another similar experience. He was at the Brighton Beach racetrack course in the twenty-four hour race. W. F. Bradley, the mechanician in the car, was instantly killed when, while rounding a dangerous curve, the car skidded and went through a fence. Strang took up the race in the same car, and at the very spot where Bradley met his death, the car went through the fence again, and put an end to Strang's chances. Incidentally, both he and his mechanician were very severely bruised, and, though they continued in the race, they had no hope of winning. Al Poole, in a Simplex, came out the winner.

Strang is very brave, but he is also discreet, and when he reviewed his many disastrous experiences, he began to feel that his luck was very clearly against him. No matter how fast he went, his hoodoo always caught him. Then he resolved to hoodwink the hoodoo. He decided to give up these slow-moving racing cars, which had never been able to do better than a mere two miles a minute, and to take up aviation instead, where he hoped he might eventually be able to get up enough speed to outdistance anything.

So young Strang joined the Aeronautical Society and tried aeroplaning. His first aeroplane attempt took place at the Mineola grounds a couple of weeks ago. Strang sat in his wicker chair, smiling that old smile of confidence, and, turning on the power, prepared to let out a contemptuous "ha, ha" at that plagued hoodoo. But something went wrong. The aeroplane moved but it wouldn't rise. Around the broad aviation grounds of the Aeronautical Society the machine sped, like a big wounded bird, gaining momentum at every lap, but nothing that Strang could do would make it rise. It bumped along the hillocks and shook the aviator up so that he could hardly keep his seat, and then without any warning it suddenly dug in its nose in the turf, turned turtle, and flung the astonished Strang out upon the grass.

Bruised and pussied, Strang returned to his aeroplane shed. As he entered he was met by an exuberant scribe, who smiled cheerfully and said:

"I suppose you've heard, Mr. Strang, that your wife's been named as corespondent in the Mitchell divorce case?"

Strang can stand a hard blow as well as anyone, but this one nearly knocked him off his feet. "What!" he exclaimed, hoarsely, "my Jennie named as corespondent in a divorce case? Well, that's the limit!"

Strang takes it all philosophically. "I am not going to lay down because of a few defeats," he said. "I haven't given up auto racing by any means, nor will my mishap with the aeroplane keep me from trying again. I shall enter all the important races this year and I shall keep on trying to fly. But as for the matrimonial game, I'm through with that. Named as corespondent, eh? Well, that's the limit!"

Miss Alexander—Mrs. Lewis Strang—As the "Vampire," in Her Extraordinary Dance with Mr. Mitchell in "The Follies of 1910."

When Mr. Strang's hoodoo got to work Miss Alexander was suddenly named by Bessie Clayton, herself a well-known dancer, as co-respondent in the suit of divorce began against her husband, Julian Mitchell, who is Miss Alexander's partner in that "Vampire" dance.

Whether there is any justification for Bessie Clayton's complaint is a matter that the courts must settle. Mr Mitchell and the friends of both in the theatrical world say that his interest in Miss Alexander is purely platonic and professional; that he found in her an ideal partner for the weird and eccentric dances with which the gifted stage manager likes to sprinkle the Ziegfeld productions. Miss Clayton and her mother are quite serious that the interest is not platonic, Mr. Strang defends his wife, but admits that it is a most uncomfortable position and that he certainly does not approve of the very undraped form of entertainment of which the "Vampire" dance is the pinnacle of perfection.

Strangely enough, Mr. Strang had just tumbled from an aeroplane in which he was qualifying as amateur when the news of his wife having been named as correspondent in the Clayton case was brought to him.

"Two knockouts together," exclaimed Mr. Strang. "This is the limit."

To take up Strang's troubles chronologically it is necessary to go back to the Fall of 1908, when, having won the Briarcliff trophy in an Isotta car, and a number of other important races, he had gained for himself an international reputation as one of the most daring and skilful drivers in the world.

HERE COMES OUR OWN PET SALARIED SULTAN OF SULU

Real Comic Opera Potentate Who Wanted to Be Mr. Roosevelt's Son-in-Law and Is Now on His Way With Guards and Harem to Sell Pearls and Find a Pretty Sultana for His Son.

He's ours because we pay him, but he's a Sultan in his own right, and in his own right he's a lot of other things. For instance, he's godfather to a comic opera. Yes, he's that same Sultan of Sulu that George Ade discovered and did such record-breaking press agent work for.

It seems that all this publicity has incited the Sultan of Sulu to undue extravagance. He's been living beyond his income, and as Uncle Sam cannot see his way at present to raise his salary he's on his way over here with a few buckets full of pearls for sale.

Speaking of pearls, our own and only Sultan is full of them. He simply reeks of pearls. Over on the off side of our Philippines he grows an island surrounded by thousands of acres of sea bottom covered with oysters that have nothing to do but manufacture pearls by royal command. Before buying your Fall and Winter stock of pearls elsewhere, wait for the Sultan of Sulu. His motto: Large sales and small profits; satisfaction guaranteed.

There's no doubt about the purity and other valuable qualities of the Sultan's pearls. Mrs. Nicholas Longworth still has those he gave her when she was Miss Alice Roosevelt. In the excitement of declining his hand in marriage, perhaps, she forgot to hand them back. Or maybe he begged her to keep them as a future reminder of a throne she might have shared. At any rate, they are said to be beauties, and a fair sample of the lot which the Sultan is about to throw on this market.

Technically, the Sulu Islands and those thousands of acres of pearl oysters belong to Uncle Sam, just as the Sultan himself does. We bought the whole outfit from Spain along with the Philippines—which was kind of us as we already held them by right of conquest.

But a Sultan is a Sultan. He is probably our only citizen of royal birth and estates, and therefore a curiosity. As we are a nation of curiosity-lovers we benevolently permit our Sultan to continue on at the old stand in the same old way. Hence his harem, his choice band of head-hunters, his power of life and death over his 4,000 subjects, and the buckets full of pearls he reeks with.

In the interests of strict truth, at the present writing the Sultan's rights in the slavery, head-hunting and life-and-death line have to be considered in the Pickwickian sense. He is a depot in theory, but no longer to any dangerous extent in practice. The late President McKinley, in placing him on our salary roll at $125 per month successfully frowned on most of His Majesty's un-Christian practices, except polygamy.

The Sultan became so fond of General Scott that he grew quite amenable to moral suasion, and wept bitterly when General Scott left the islands at the close of the Philippine insurrection. He wanted to come over to the Pacific with the General, but was dissuaded at that time. Now he is coming with his bargains in pearls, and, incidentally to pay his respects to President Taft and his old soldier friends.

In true royal style, he is accompanied by a suite of high officials, including Hadji Butu, his Prime Minister and the chief Mohammedan priest of Jolo, his capital.

In the good old times before civilization began to overpower him, even down to the date of President Taft's visit to his country with a party including Miss Alice Roosevelt, the Sultan of Sulu was a most picturesquely interesting person. His harem contained the flower of the Sulu population, and a fascinating bunch of the others constituted the royal ballet, for the Sultan is a connoisseur of the art terpsichorean

On this page you will see a photograph of Sulu ballet ladies in action. Note the costume. In so doing you will no longer see any mystery in the origin of the modern coryphee.

Before the Spanish War the Sultan, like other despots with no restraining hand on their actions, had several amusements which he now lacks. For instance, if he felt bored he could summon his trusty followers, cross over to the nearest Philippine island, snap his fingers under the nose of some two-spot chieftain of Moros and carry off everything lying around loose, including sweet potatoes, beads that had been laboriously separated from the mother oysters and handsome native ladies for the corps de ballet.

The Sultan was pretty fresh from one of these forays at the time he lavished those pearls on Miss Roosevelt. He had already presented her with a magnificent saddle—for the Sulu Moros are famous workers in leather—saying through his interpreter:

"The Sultan has the honor to present you with this saddle, and the Sultan and the entire Moro people hope that you will remain with us always."

Miss Roosevelt's gracious acceptance excited the burning jealousy of a wealthy young Moro who seemed unable to separate his gaze from the charming American's face. He whispered in the Interpreter's ear and handed him a bit of paper in which were wrapped three fine pearls. The interpreter offered them to Miss Roosevelt on behalf of her monarch, but rich admiree. With Secretary Taft's permission she smilingly accepted them.

At this the Sultan boiled over. Slipping from his finger his choicest possession, a heavy gold ring set with an enormous pearl he made a personal offering of it to Miss Roosevelt. Though embarrassed, she accepted the gift, under instructions from Mr. Taft.

This was all good diplomacy. No bloodshed was threatened when Miss Roosevelt had to decline the Sultan's offer of marriage, but if she had refused that ring there would have been war between the armies of the Sultan and the young Moro, for the latter was chief of a strong tribe and was burning to get even for one of the forays on his territory growing out of the Sultan's tendency to boredom.

It is said that the Sultan has not yet allowed civilization to wash out of him his truly Oriental system of being sure that he gets all that is coming to him out of his pearl fisheries. His divers are required to deliver to him one-third of all the pearls they find.

Now suppose a diver who has had good luck for some time and regularly turned over his toll of a third comes across a lot of indolent oysters that have allowed love of ease to interfere with their business of pearl-producing. The outlined oyster landlord probably would dismiss the matter with a word of sympathy for the man who had had all this labor for nothing

Not so the Sultan of Sulu. He says—and his word goes

"Give me, then, one-third of the pearls you found yesterday."

So he gets his "third" anyway, besides inspiring the divers with determination to every day find oysters with pearls in them.

Having visited American battleships, the Sultan is fairly familiar with the miracles worked with push buttons, electric light switches and other modern inventions. He can be trusted to domicile himself in a Washington or New York hotel without fear that he will flee or commit suicide out of superstitious terror when a section of the floor of a small room suddenly rises to transport him to the top of the building.

He even knows something about moving pictures and the gramophone. It was the latter mechanism, in fact, that played an important part in conducting the treaty between the Sultan and this Government.

The scene was aboard the cruiser Charleston. The Sultan's mother, a determined old lady in barbaric costume, was in his suite. During the preliminaries to the treaty signing, an officer of the ship set his gramophone going, regaling the royal party with a choice line of songs and vaudeville "patter."

At first the Sultan and all his party were much alarmed. The exhibition struck them as demoniacal, but they finally accepted it as belonging to the same sort of phenomena as push buttons and electric light switches, and the Sultan's mother especially could not get enough of its performances.

At length the treaty was ready for signature. The Sultan took up the pen—and then laid it down. His mother positively refused to countenance the proceeding. The treaty was all off.

All the diplomats on board the Charleston set their wits to work. They negotiated certain small concessions to the Sultan over and above those that had been agreed upon. Nothing doing. Finally the old lady was appealed to personally. What was her objection to the conclusion of the treaty? What would induce her to sanction the Sultan's signature.

"She wanted that "talking machine!" She got it—the Government found means of inducing its officer-owner to relinquish the toy in the interests of patriotism.

When Lieutenant-Colonel Sweet was Military Governor of the Sulu Archipelago he benevolently and most incecently let himself in for a tremendous army joke at his own expense.

The Sultan had a lot of new rules to obey, owing to his connection with Uncle Sam, but Colonel Sweet sugar coated these rules with so much pleasant moral advice that the Sultan came to love him as a father.

Now, as heir apparent and heir presumptive to his throne were the sultan's two brothers, whom the Sultan's mother referred to constantly as "fatherless." Without paternal authority, these brothers indulged in expensive vices, which cost the Sultan a lot of money. What a pity that they had no father to properly control and discipline them!

Ah, the fatherly Colonel Sweet, was just the man. The Sultan spoke to his mother about it. She thought it an excellent idea. The Sultan put it to Colonel Sweet in a way that touched the Colonel's most fatherly feelings. Why, certainly, he would adopt the most wayward one, the heir presumptive. And so the ceremony was performed to the satisfaction of everybody.

Colonel Sweet was so true to his trust and his fatherly duty that marked reformatory measures were soon visible in the heir presumptive. The Sultan had more money to buy his own pleasures with, and the Dowager Sultana rejoiced openly over the mended ways of her wayward offspring

Suddenly Colonel Sweet discovered his amazed embarrassment, that the Sulu Moros make no fine distinctions between fatherhood natural and fatherhood adoptive. It was all in the family! The Sultana was growing more and more affectionate toward him, and was openly referring to him as her "honored husband!"

The Colonel hastened to inform the Sultana that that relationship was not included in the bond of adoption—but it was too late. The whole army, and most of the navy was "on."

And now our Sultan is about to make his first visit to the country which has adopted him. It seems a pity that by this time he must be pretty nearly as well tamed and suppressed and trained as are the majority of his fellow citizens of the United States.

Of course he's a Mohammedan and a polygamist But those details are no longer matters of consternation in this country of rapid-fire divorce and experimentation with exotic religions. Doubtless the choice Italian of representatives of his harem which the Sultan is bringing with him are perfectly modest and well-behaved young women.

It was to be mentioned that it may not be necessary to furnish cash in payment for at least one fine assortment of the Sultan's pearls he has for sale. He is prepared, both parties being satisfied, to take it out in trade.

The Sultan's heir apparent needs a wife No. 1, who will be Sultana when he comes to the throne. Having been unable ever to forget the charming face of Miss Alice Roosevelt, the Sultan has the fixed idea that the future Sultana exists somewhere in the country. To find her is one of the objects of his visit.

If she appears to fill the bill she can dip her pretty hand as deeply into those buckets full of pearls as she pleases. Also papa and mama can indulge in a pearl feast on their own account.

Probably the heir apparent is in the Sultan's suite, though there seems to be some uncertainty on that head. It is a matter of small consequence, however, as the Sultan himself yields to no man respecting his ability to recognize a desirable Sultana when he sees her.

WHY THEY "SHOOK" THEIR UNCLE SAM

Frank Gould, For Little Miss Kelly and Peace, Mr. Drexel, Because He Had to Pay $1.75 for Breakfast— The Newest Revised Roster of Our Expatriates' Club.

Miss Edith Kelly, the Cute Little Musical Comedy Actress, Who, It Is Said, Is Now Mrs. Frank Gould.

Mr Frank Gould, Who Has Announced His Expatriation.

"Miss Liberty Should Dance With Joy."

The Charming Mrs. Chauncey, a Fair American Expatriate in Her Ostend Bathing Gown

Isn't it enough to make the Statue of Liberty quench her enlightening torch to a point with indignant scorn at the ships which bear away her sons and daughters, never to return to these shores except as tourists?

But the circumstances are so absurd that really, Miss Liberty should dance with glee at the spectacle.

Why do they do it? Years ago it began, and has been kept up ever since, by fair daughters of the Land of Liberty lured away with promises of titles and coronets which were theirs for the asking. Books of the Peerage and Social Registers in half a dozen languages contain their names by the column.

Then came the shocking example of William Waldorf Astor—shocking because none of the expatriates owes more to his native land than does the stay-at-home to the British throne. Yet all knew why William Waldorf Astor sailed away with the income of his $50,000,000, which he regularly wrings from the soil of Manhattan Island and spends in Europe.

This is the Astor who turned his back on his native land because his fellow citizens considered themselves his equal. His fish himself superior, of an exalted class, and so he went to England, where there are "classes," and bought a castle, and subscribed to all the King's charities, and educated his children at schools patronized by the nobility, and married his daughter to an English army officer, and bought a newspaper in which he printed a pedigree to show that he was descended from a royal family, and got a great deal of notice in return for his liberal spending—but still remains in English society neither flesh, fish nor fowl.

Quite a number of American men and women who have sailed away to establish residences in London or Paris still retain their citizenship and their homes here. They are simply leaders of the London and Paris American "colonies," living there, perhaps, half the year, and cannot justly be called expatriates. It is probably true, however, that the larger part of their incomes is spent abroad—which does not seem quite fair to their Uncle Samuel.

Richard Croker took part of his family and sailed away when he grew New York, are an example. Year by year for a long time more and more of the Drexel money has been spent abroad. where Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel has cut more and more of a figure in the London and Paris American colonies. Recently the marriage of her beautiful young daughter to an English nobleman—Viscount Maidstone—has torn loose another Drexel root from American soil.

But there is a tang to the very latest Drexel rebuff to Uncle Sam that really must make Miss Liberty smile through her tears. Anthony J. Drexel, coming over and looking in on us recently declared that there was a feature of life in New York City that probably would send him back to Europe, bag and baggage, for good and all. This was the cost of living here. Imagine it!

Upon his arrival Mr. Drexel found it convenient to take breakfast at a New York hotel. It wasn't much of a breakfast, as he described it, yet it cost him $1.75. Mr. Drexel's millions are quite a few less than those of William Waldorf Astor, and $1.75 gone all in a lump just for breakfast struck him as outrageous. Why, in London or Paris he could get a dinner for that amount! So, good-by, Uncle!

The Gould family, and the Gould dollars, too, are flying away from us. We can't seem to stop 'em. In Jay Gould's time it was different. No matter how we jumped on the old railway magnate and called him hard names, he stuck to his Uncle Sammy. His money stayed here, too. And instead of "showing it in" for imported luxuries he enjoyed nothing more than permitting the English to send over their millions to join others sucked down in his Wall Street whirlpools.

After Jay Gould died it was different. George Gould did all he could, and is still doing it, to keep the Gould family and the Gould money in the United States; but his sister Anna was mistress of her portion, and, first Count Boni de Castellane and then the Prince de Sagan, as her successive husbands, showed her with what neatness and dispatch it could be scattered over Europe.

Now George Gould's daughter has married a younger Drexel, and her father's influence may keep them faithful to their Uncle Sam—along with their aunt, Helen Gould, who, as everybody knows, is rooted as solidly in this soil as Plymouth Rock itself. But how about Howard Gould and Frank Gould and their millions? Howard, freed from his American wife, and a habitual globe trotter, probably sees nothing to prevent him from packing his securities in a burglar-proof trunk and taking them ever to Paris or London for keeps.

AT to Frank Gould, the blow seems to have fallen. He is an amiable young fellow, fond of pleasure and free from business cares, and lately married—according to report—to a pretty English girl a musical comedy favorite, who, as mistress of millions, naturally can cut a wider swath in her native country than here.

In fact, the Paris cables of recent date say that France is to be the future home of the Frank Goulds. The young man is said to have complained that the notoriety attending his divorce from his first wife—including the alleged Bessie de Voie "conspiracy," which sent Mrs. Ben Teal to prison, though she was afterward exonerated—cost him many friends and embarrassed him to such an extent that further residence in this country has become most distasteful to him.

So it is the former Miss Edith Kelly who played at the New York Casino in "Havana" and won Frank Gould with her pretty face and her charming singing of "Way Down in Pensacola," who is directly responsible for his determination to make his home abroad. He sailed away one day before we had got the Bessie de Voie affair out of our minds. When he shortly followed her, we began to see some light, and when the news of their reported marriage was flashed under the Atlantic many things were explained.

Frank Gould has been living in a fine Paris apartment pending elaborate preparations for both a Paris establishment and a magnificent country home at Chantilly, where he has a fine estate. He and his pretty bride will neither confess nor deny their reported marriage. When she sails for Paris she is her purchases are sent home to "Mrs. Frank Gould."

Yes, it looks very much as though Miss Liberty has seen Frank Gould, as a citizen of the United States, sail away for the last time.

Although that beautiful and rich American widow, Mrs. George Law, has lived mostly abroad during the last ten or fifteen years, we have been accustomed to consider her in the main faithful to her Uncle Sam. At different times she has been reported to be engaged to marry eligible noblemen of almost every country in Europe, not to mention several in this. But in all such reports have died a natural death, it seemed that Mrs. Law had no intention of really routing herself in foreign soil.

Just now, however, there is a rumor that she will marry Craig Wadsworth, for a long time connected with our English Embassy in London. During that time Mr Wadsworth's American-ism has been limited mainly to the fact of this employment. For him to be absent from London or some other European capital for more than a month or two at a time would create comment, so much of a European figure has he become.

Accordingly, if he wins Mrs. Law and her millions Uncle Sam will be justified in considering that both have finally deserted him altogether.

So it appears also in the case of another rich and beautiful widow—Mrs Samuel Sloan Chauncey, who has vied with Mrs. Law respecting rumors of imminent exalted marriages in foreign circles. Among the reported bridegrooms-to-be were Lord Rosebery and Lord Kitchener. But lately Mrs. Chauncey's friends on this side have come to believe that she will not marry again.

The reason why Mrs. Chauncey is breaking off all family relations with Uncle Samuel is said to be her growing preference for life abroad, particularly in England, where, in London, she has a beautiful home. Her nearest relative, her sister, is the wife of Lord Newborough. Thus family ties, as well as her own preference, urge her to withdraw entirely from America, except as among other places to be visited once in a while.

Richard Croker took part of his family and sailed away when he grew tired of his long tenure as the autocratic ruler of Tammany. But he was born in Ireland, and can perhaps be excused for wishing to spend his declining years on his native sod—being now able to own quite a comfortable fortune at it.

Without any intention of causing Miss Liberty's indignation to cause her to retire on her pedestal, it should be remarked that some Americans are threatening to move to England because of recent talk about a "dictatorship" for these United States. Eugene Zimmerman, who married his daughter to the Duke of Manchester, has threatened to go if anything like that happens.

The shock of this threat was somewhat allayed when Mr. John L. Sullivan remarked that this country could spare Mr. Zimmerman and his wealth better than his noble son-in-law probably could.

Quite a few dressmakers and dealers in diamonds, laces, Spring bonnets, gloves, homery and other luxuries have given Uncle Sam warning because he confiscated the contents of their pockets and trunks when they had forgotten to pay duty on the same. This is a sore point with a rapidly growing class of our citizens who have a habit of buying such luxuries abroad and neglecting to mention the fact to revenue officers down the bay.

Recently this matter of duty on imports has served to determine disputed points of residence. For instance, it has long been supposed that Mrs. Goelet was a resident of New York City, Newport and other places all in the United States. The natural error is explained when the Government attempts to collect from her the annual average tax of $7 per ton on her foreign built pleasure boats.

Mrs. Goelet refuses payment on the ground that she is a permanent resident of Paris, France, and that her yacht in still doing it, to keep the Gould family and the Gould money in the United States; but his sister Anna was mistress of her portion, and, first Count Boni de Castellane and then the Prince de Sagan, as her successive husbands, showed her with what neatness and dispatch it could be scattered over Europe.

"THE GHOSTS OF THOSE ANCIENT ALCHEMISTS BENDING OVER MME. CURIE IN HER LABORATORY WOULD SEE IN HER EXPERIMENTS WITH RADIUM AND POLONIUM THE SCIENTIFIC REALIZATION OF THEIR EXTRAVAGANT FANCIES."

THE astonishing death of Charles C. Dickinson, president of the Carnegie Trust, and the equally astonishing disclosures concerning the alchemistic Dr Lange, have revealed to the world that alchemy is still a widely followed pursuit.

Modern alchemists are still industriously plodding in the footsteps of Hermes Trismegistus, Friar Bacon, Paracelsus, Cagliostro, Parisgorous and other ancient worthies, and they are encouraged in their efforts by the unquestioned discoveries of science.

There is, indeed, a rather striking similarity between radium and the philosopher's stone which the alchemists sought, the stone described by old Michael Sendivogius as "the stone of wisdom, the heavenly balm, the divine water, the virgin water, the carbuncle of the sun, the old dragon, the basilisk, the phoenix and the grand arcanum."

It is interesting to know that avowed alchemists have never ceased to flourish in France. The Alchemical Association of France, a society directly descended from the ancient Alchemists, still holds regular meetings. Among the well-known members are Camille Flammarion, the astronomer, and August Strindberg, the Swedish writer.

During the seventeenth century alchemy became involved with the horrible practices of devil worship in France. The alchemists and devil worshippers participated in a hideous travesty of the mass. Madame de Montespan, the celebrated favorite of Louis XIV was involved in these orgies and fell in disgrace with the King on account of participation in them.

The mediæval alchemists sought the secret of transmuting the baser metals into gold and silver, and also, among other things, the secret of preserving eternal youth.

Many of the dreams of the alchemists have been realized by modern science, and others are apparently on the point of being realized. But there are still men who prefer to pursue the objects of the ancient alchemists in mysterious ways, under the shadow of the baleful crocodile, the emblem of Egyptian magic, rather than by methods of orthodox science.

Dr F W Lange, of Scranton, Pa., belongs to this class of mystics. He works with boiling crucibles, poisonous gases and secret formulæ amid mysterious surroundings. Lange is said to have discovered a process whereby he took a silver matrix and by additions caused 100 per cent more of the chloride and nitrate of silver than had ever been produced before. In other words he produced more silver than originally existed. This is practically alchemy. The doctor also suggests that he is on the trail of a process by which he can do the same thing with gold.

Mr. Dickinson, the Trust president, who was interested in the experiments, stepped too close to the doctor's furnace, where metals were being subjected to a heat of 4,000 degrees, inhaled the deadly, poisonous gases arising from it and died.

It is admittedly possible that legitimate chemistry may attain one great object of the alchemists. Nearly all chemists now believe that all matter is made up from one universal element—the original world-stuff. The old theory, not long ago laid down as a permanent truth, that matter is divided into many elements which cannot be further split up has been generally abandoned.

The present theory is that the whole universe was originally formed from one element. The apparent difference between the elements as we see them is merely due to a difference in the way the atoms comprising them are combined.

The aim of the chemists is to find this original element and the method of combining it into other substances. When this can be done, chemistry will be able to make all things, including gold, and thus the dreams of the old alchemists will be more than realized.

A hundred observations tend to show that there is only one element, and that all the present elements can be split up. The astonishing behavior of radium is one of them. Radium is believed to be matter in a state of atomic instability changing from one form to another, the emanations of radium having been observed by Sir William Ramsay to change into helium, hitherto regarded as an element.

Sir William Ramsay, who is the leading chemist of the world, has also found that copper under certain conditions degrades into lithium, and both these were formerly counted as elements.

Professor Charles Baskerville, director of chemical laboratories at the College of the City of New York, a very well known authority, consented to point out some of the experiments that led chemists to believe in the convertibility of elements, although he was personally disposed to take a very conservative attitude on the subject.

In the first place he pointed to this statement in a standard American text book:

"At the present time there is a strong inclination among chemists toward a belief in a mutual convertibility of chemically similar elements. This view is based on the supposition that all the chemical elements are combinations of different quantities of one primal element, and on the particular conduct of certain recently discovered elements—for instance, radium. In fact, the belief in the transmutation of atoms is in close agreement with the present theories of atomic disintegration, but this is based upon new discoveries and on correctly interpreted chemical problems, and not upon false assumptions or experiment."

One Blood Corpuscle Magnified to the Size of the Outer Circle Compares to the Finest Particles of Gold Discernible Under the Microscope as That Circle Here Is to the Dots Shown Here.

The appearance of gold specks in experiments with silver is one phenomenon that still leads many chemists to believe gold will be produced from other metals.

"It has long been known that gold specks would occasionally show themselves in silver solutions," said Professor Baskerville, "but could not be obtained at will. This phenomenon has often led to the notion that silver might be transmuted into gold. Silver can be converted into this form by the reduction of silver by ferrous tartrate. The solutions are rather dilute and must be freshly made. A red powder is precipitated; this turns black, and on the filter has a bronze luster. After washing, it is removed to a porcelain dish and allowed to dry spontaneously. The form of silver is very permanent, and it dries into lumps resembling pellets of gold. By brushing a thick paste of this powder over clean glass beautiful, gold-colored mirrors are obtained. The stronger acid, when much diluted, instantly converts the allotropic form of silver into the ordinary gray silver, the change being effected by means of a ferrous salt.

"Using Lea's method, described, as a starting point, Professor Emmens thought to examine Andrew's doctrine of critical temperatures. By the use of the effect of impact and low temperature, the former was produced by his forces, and a substance was obtained which was claimed to be composed of both gold and silver, which he has named argentaurum. Of this kind of silver was said to contain three-quarters of an atom of gold. It was stated that the chief source of experimental error occurred was in the tiny amount for bringing about the molecular change.

"Sir William Crookes did not succeed to satisfaction in repeating the work. Dr Emmens stated that during that time Cabel Whitehead, manager of the mint at Washington, accepted six ingots of the alloy, approximately a thousand dollars in value.

"Any discussion of the transmutation of elements must involve a clear understanding of what we mean by the term element. In agreement chemists regard an element as a substance which shows a characteristic spectrum and a definite combining weight. Until such characterization is inadequate, the ground upon which the characterization is founded may be shifting sand, and not the firm rock we are wont to liken it to. This does not involve the present topic, as the above basis suffices for our purpose.

The Work of Mme. Curie, the World's Most

Paris, June 22.

THAT marvellous woman, Mme. Curie, is still making discoveries which are placing the world on a new basis.

Mme. Curie, with her husband, discovered radium, the most remarkable scientific discovery of our generation. It was supposed that M. Curie was the creative genius in the researches and that his wife was only a patient laboratory worker.

But since his death she has made many new discoveries even more remarkable than those which the two had made together.

If Mme. Curie had lived a century ago she would have been regarded as a witch. Her discoveries have been more destructive of the laws of modern science than Galileo's theory that the earth revolved to the orthodox views of his time. She has upset the laws of gravitation and the conservation of energy.

She has unveiled the processes of creation. She has discovered the disintegration of the atom.

Mme. Curie was a Pole by birth, her name being Marie Sklodowska. She and her family suffered from the cruel oppression that the Russian Government has inflicted on the Poles.

She studied science as a baby. Her nursery was a laboratory, and instead of dolls she played with test tubes, retorts and crucibles.

She came to Paris as a girl of seventeen and lived and carried on her studies on an income of $10 a month. She captured every prize for which she tried, although her competitors had every possible advantage of wealth and costly tuition.

At twenty she met Pierre Curie, a French professor of chemistry. They found that they were pursuing exactly the same line of scientific research—the radio-active substances. They married. It was probably the most perfectly harmonious marriage that ever happened.

They lived in a severely simple little house, with a nice garden, in a quarter of Paris noted for its murderous and criminal characters, near the outer fortifications of Paris. It was a haunt of the Apaches. The professor and his wife dressed so plainly that the ruffians of the neighborhood never disturbed them. They went back and forth every day between their house and the college, a long distance, on bicycles.

They kept only one servant, and Mme. Curie, the great scientist, did her own marketing and most of her own housework. At the back of their little house, so incongruously situated, they had a charming little orchard, and here their two little girls found health and happiness.

This ideal union was cruelly shattered one day when Professor Curie, walking along, absorbed in scientific speculations, was run over by an omnibus in the street and killed. One would have expected Mme. Curie to be prostrated by such an irreparable loss, but the day after her husband's funeral she was busily pursuing her researches into the newly discovered emanations of radium.

She has been accustomed to suffering from her childhood. She has the saddest face conceivable, so sad that no fresh emotion of sadness can ever disturb it.

She has declined nearly every honor offered her. She declined the decoration of the Legion of Honor offered her by the French Government. But she accepted the position of professor of chemistry at the Sorbonne, the highest academic position in France, formerly held by her husband. She is now carrying on the duties of this appointment the first woman who has ever done so.

Mme. Curie has declined to associate herself with any of the women's suffrage societies, but what attitude she takes on the great question of the vote cannot be ascertained. She is too busy with her scientific work to discuss it.

In spite of the fame she has won, she lives as simply, almost penuriously, as ever. This woman who has discovered a substance that is worth $40,000,000 a pound scarcely bothers her head about its commercial possibilities, but devotes all her time to studying its scientific characteristics.

"Madame, I have swallowed a pin."

"There, there, don't cry," said Madame soothingly, "here is another you may have."

It is interesting to know Mme. Curie's opinion on the two most obscure points in the study of radium.

"I think radium is an unstable element composed of atoms which undergo spontaneous transformation, and that helium is one of the products of this transformation," she said to your correspondent.

One of Mme. Curie's recent achievements has been to explain the true nature of polonium, a strange metal which she discovered years ago.

Polonium is about 5,000 times more rare than radium, and it is doubted whether there is more than a pound of pure radium in the whole world. Polonium loses weight and disappears in 140 days, while radium will take thousands of years to be exhausted. Polonium is an active germicide and destroys certain types of ulcers.

Polonium is one of a series of allied metals. Uranium decomposes into ionium. Ionium decomposes and forms radium. Radium gives off emanations which change from one substance to another, and one of these is polonium. It is suggested that lead may be the relic of radium left after thousands of years of activity.

Polonium would work miracles if there were enough of it. A grain of polonium would heat 100,000,000,000 gallons of water two degrees. An ounce would tow a battleship two and a half million miles. The same quantity would drive a 30-horsepower automobile four hundred times around the world at a rate of thirty miles an hour.

Madame Curie kept her polonium in a vial of pure quartz, the toughest substance known, but soon found it cracked and split. The bombardment of the rays had broken the vessel. But polonium can be kept in glass, because the rays pass between the molecules of the vessel. In other words, through the invisible holes in the glass.

Madame Curie has made a vast mass of new observations concerning radium. We have as yet only an imperfect conception of the nature of this amazing substance and it will probably require many years before we understand much of its uses.

Radium gives off three forms of rays (the alpha, beta and gamma rays) and also an emanation which changes into other things. First is Radium A, which lives for a quarter of an hour and then changes to Radium B, which in turn lives three-quarters of an hour. Radium C lives for all these disappear. Then C Radium D. been limited to efforts to prepare the noble metals. Fittica's investigations on the action of ammonium compounds on phosphorus in the presence of air led him to the conclusion that a true transformation of phosphorus into arsenic takes place, and that arsenic appears to be a nitro-oxygen compound of phosphorus, namely, PN^2O. The formation of arsenic from phosphorus appeared to be accomplished best under proper temperature conditions. This is contrary to Fluckinger's results on 'black phosphorus,' as the latter regarded this modification as arsenic, it is true, but considered that the phosphorus contained arsenic. Although Fittica claimed that his phosphorus was arsenic free, Winkler asserted that this could scarcely be the case, according to the work of Wittstock and Hjelt. Undaunted, Fittica maintained that by varying the conditions antimony, as well, could be produced from phosphorus.

"With the discovery of the Becquerel rays, eventuating in the isolation of radium compounds by the Curies, lines of investigation were opened up leading to truly remarkable disclosures. According to the agreement, certainly radium may be regarded as an element, as it has a characteristic spectrum and well-defined atomic weight, as recently verified by Madame Curie and Sir T. E. Thorpe.

"Radium compounds give off an emanation, a gaseous body, as discovered by Rutherford. Ramsay assigns it an atomic weight of 216.5, but no definite spectrum has been assigned the emanation, although it has been plotted by Ramsay and Collie. Rutherford and his associates have shown that the emanation passes through a number of changes, giving Radium-A, Radium-B, etc. So far definite atomic values and spectral data have not been obtained for these transitory disintegration products of the emanation. The lives of some of them are very short. The greatest dignity we may assign them is meta-elements.

"The formation of helium from the emanation was first shown by Ramsay and Soddy, and later confirmed by Indrikson, by Debierne, by Curie and Dewar, by Giesel and by Himstedt and Meyer. Helium, a conventional element which is devoid of any evidence of chemical affinity, is produced by or from radium, a conventional element, but the most active substance known. This occurs when the emanation is dry, and we have reason for assuming that the emanation may in reality be an active allotropic form of helium, as ozone is of oxygen.

"Some time since we were thoroughly aroused by Ramsay, who in collaboration with Cameron not only verified the above statement, but proved that when the emanation was allowed to traverse its downward career in the presence of water neon, and not helium, was the gas produced. The emanation becomes one conventional element or another, dependent upon the environment. Helium, neon and argon, with the respective weights, 4, 20 and 40, were produced from the supposititious allotrope of the one with the lowest atomic weight.

"Ramsay determined the presence of these gases by their spectral conduct; but perhaps the most remarkable portion of this work had to do with the solutions of the copper salts in which the emanation performed its devolutions. These solutions after the removal of the copper showed the presence of lithium, the smallest metallic member of the first family in the periodic classification.

"The emanation, in passing through its transformations, evolves much the greater portion of the energy produced by radium and its educts. Metaphysicians, among whom are many of the most matter-of-fact men of science, have long speculated upon the constitution of matter. Time and again it has been urged that the heavy chemical elements would eventually be broken down by the lighter ones; but Mme. Curie did not succeed in confirming Ramsay's work, and so far we have no actually proved case of elemental degradation and no successfully undisputed experimental facts have been offered in substantiation of these philosophic considerations."

Radium has made it possible to show that we can knock elektrons out of any atom and that elecktrons are the same, no matter whether they are derived from oxygen, hydrogen or any other element.

This leads to the conclusion that all atoms contain identical elektrons, which in turn points to the conclusion that all matter is originally one element.

All the elements are believed to be only different aggregations of the one and only primordial matter—the elektron. This is one of the problems upon which Mme. Curie is engaged, and she has done more than any scientist alive to solve it.

If We Could All Make Gold!

By MAURICE L. MUHLEMAN,

Ex-Deputy Assistant United States Treasurer. Author of "The Money of the United States," Etc.

WHAT would happen if gold could be produced at a fraction of what it now costs is mildly indicated in the reign of high prices which is now oppressing the country, and which is caused mainly by the over-production of gold.

For every ounce of gold that is brought to the United States Treasury, the Government will hand over the counter $20.67⅓. To produce an ounce of gold, taking into consideration every factor involved up to the time the metal is presented at the Treasury for conversion into money, costs on the average about $15. When gold is particularly plentiful, it can be produced for as low as $10 an ounce, but the Government nevertheless pays the fixed price of $20.675 for it. In these circumstances, when gold is plentiful, the mine-owners are enriched, bank deposits increase, and prices of commodities rise almost immediately. But while the whole country is affected by the increased prices, only 5 per cent. perhaps, enjoy any direct benefit of the increased production of gold, while the other 95 per cent receive no greater income with which to meet the advanced prices.

That is just what is happening now. In the past few years not only have new gold fields been discovered, but improved mining methods been perfected, all of which have made gold-mining a very profitable undertaking and have combined to bring about an over-production of the precious metal and a consequent rise in prices.

But if modern alchemists succeed in making gold out of clay, let us say, by some process which is not particularly costly, so that an ounce of gold could be manufactured for, say, $5, while the Government still went on paying $20.675 an ounce, as it has been doing for the past seventy-five years or so, and the process became generally known, prices would soar to an intolerable height, while incomes would not be augmented sufficiently to meet them, and a social upheaval would be the almost inevitable result. Gold as a standard of value and a medium of exchange would no longer serve its purpose, and the nations would simply be compelled to seek a substitute.

Where would they turn? They could, of course, adopt some other metal as the medium, but experience has proven that no other metal is stable enough to answer the purpose. They could adopt the bushel of wheat, perhaps, as the standard of value, and measure the value of labor or commodities in that manner, but, then again, wheat is perishable and would, for that reason, make a very unsatisfactory medium of exchange.

They could return to the ancient system of barter and exchange, but that would take us back thousands of years, and make further progress out of the question.

But there is another plan which would perhaps be better than any of these, a plan which has often been suggested by ingenious economists. I refer to the plan which Professor John R. Commons, of the University of Wisconsin, I believe, suggested, and which recommended the establishment of what he called a "natural standard," instead of the metallic standards now used by the nations of the world.

The "natural standard" would be a standard based on the ascertained value of labor and commodities. The medium of exchange would be certificates made of paper or any other substance chosen independent of its intrinsic value. These certificates, issued in various denominations for the sake of convenience, would entitle the holder to so many units of value, which for the sake of argument we will call "dingbats." The laws of demand and supply would ultimately fix the number of dingbats obtainable for labor or commodities, and if the system were generally adopted there is every reason to suppose that it would be far superior to any system thus far used. The Government might perhaps find it necessary to go even further and fix arbitrarily the number of dingbats to which each man would be entitled for his labor or commodities. Such a plan would be paternalistic in the extreme, and smacks strongly of socialism, but if the monetary standards of the world were upset by the sudden discovery of a way to make gold, measures of a very radical nature would have to be speedily adopted.

Here's the Newest French Freak.

The Ridiculous "Clothes-Pin Gown," Successor to the "Hobble"—Will Women Wear It? They Do—Says Lady Duff-Gordon.

LADY DUFF-GORDON.
(Posed by Campbell Studios, Waldorf-Astoria.)

LADY DUFF GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, the foremost fashion designer in the world, writes each week the fashion page for this newspaper. Lady Duff Gordon is the recognized dress authority of England. This week she takes up the curious successor to the "hobble gown"—the "clothes-pin gown," now the rage in Paris.

By Lady Duff-Gordon, (Lucile.)

SAD and sorry I am to say it, but the fact remains, that in placing the whole-hearted admiration which one can usually accord to the Parisienne one is, nowadays, being forced into an equally whole-hearted condemnation. For it would seem that quite suddenly and also quite completely, she has lost her sense of proportion and in a fit of let's have only temporary — mental aberration has transformed herself from a thing of beauty into a veritable eyesore—laide a faire peur!

And all this because she will adopt without the necessary discrimination and modification, a style only suited to the few (to the slender slip of a girl whose figure of almost boyish straightness and absolute suppleness and youth is fatal to the woman of full age and figure.

I refer to the very newest French freak of fashion—the "clothes-pin gown," worthy successor to the "hobble gown," which I described in my last letter. The "hobble gown" would consecutively adapt itself to the peculiar style of one woman in ten thousand and that is the reason the other nine-ty-nine hundred and ninety-nine should not wear it. I should say that the "clothes-pin gown," while not quite as bad as that, is harmonious with not more than one woman in a thousand. In the "hobble gown" the skirt's extreme shortness is accentuated by its holding in about or even above the ankles by a deep band of plain material, whose circumference of from one and one-half to two yards is obviously and entirely insufficient for either grace of outline or freedom of movement.

Then from beneath this bandage—it almost might be termed hobbled—these protrude feet which, hampered into such prominence, would almost always give the impression of ugliness, although this is accentuated by the wearing of exaggerated long and spoon-filled toned shoes.

Now the new "clothes-pin gown" takes this bandage and lets it go. From below the knees it hangs plain to the ankles—but this hem is no wider than when it was bandaged. Just above this sheer fall of muslin or lace or cloth begins to protrude enormous masses of material. It is cut in ground the bottom like a bell and drops from toward the hips voluminously with curved or straight lines whichever the wearer's figure dictates. Look back at our dear old panniered skirts of 1820, and you will see the effect. Then it is crowned by enormous plume-adorned hats which add the perfect topheavy effect, indeed!

The Americans who are in Paris, and who have caught the infection of this freak fashion fever—and caught it badly, too!—make matters even worse by adopting the high and closely fitting neckwear, which is so extremely out of keeping with the "little girl" style of attire, so that with their "fashionable" headpiff necks, broad shoulders and busts, and accentuated and abbreviated skirts—their appearance is indeed fearful and wonderful!

The Old-Panier—Half the New Fashion

The Clothespin Is Clearly Not Made for Fat Women

Another Newest Clothespin Effect.

A Clothespin Skirt with the Enormous Eye-Hiding Hat.

To see a never-ending procession of women thus dressed—and disfigured—is to lose all the pleasure one usually finds in a visit to Paris. If only they could see themselves as others see them! —but, though each woman must surely be well aware of the weirdness of the other women's appearances she probably imagines that she herself is the one delightful exception to the rule; and that some supreme personal charm of figure, or movement is lending distinction and beauty to her own attire.

The only thing to disabuse her mind would be to have her specially photographed and set her down to watch the subsequent cinematograph display of her movements. She would, I think, have to be pulled down, too, if her presence to the bitter end were to be insured, for the revelation of such pictures must surely open her eyes to the fact that is thus following the prevalent mode—and mania—she is absolutely ruining her appearance and depriving herself of that need of admiration which is a necessity of existence (and certainly of happiness) to the average woman.

Always understand, though, I beg of you, that my wholesale condemnation by no means applies to the little dress whose straight and scanty lines are left unbroken from the high natural waistline and ankles, for this is graceful and, moreover, is becoming to women as well as girls, presuming, of course, that their figures be slender, and that they retain a certain youthfulness of face and style, and, moreover, that they invariably adore the down-turned collar which is the only form of neckwear at all suited to such dresses. The hat, too, should be of moderate size—and of picturesque, rather plain, ultra-smart tendencies, and then these points carefully considered and carried out—the effect will be all that could be desired, either by the actual wearer or the mere onlooker.

But the abomination which I wish to see wiped out, and which I for one, shall decline to make, is the gown which, after defining the waist all too closely, introduces a distinct fullness into the skirt only to catch it in tightly below the knees, the result necessitating being hideous beyond expression. Viewed from what aspect you will—one rather must, for no one would willingly gaze upon these pearls of fashion—have I said enough? I think and hope so, and therefore I will pass to something more pleasant and chronicle the latest chic in Paris—to-wit: a long and almost invisible scarf of black silken gauze, wardily and narrowly edged with ermine, whose snowy whiteness is enbroken by the little black tipped tails, which, however, come into their usual and decorative prominence on the inner end of this band of fur. This dual and different trimming is of such delightful effect, when the scarf is draped about the shoulders or swathed around the body, though, of course, if it be not adjusted with the necessary "knack" it would be better far to display that other simple new scarf, whose black satin mousseline is lined with white and whose much narrower folds are caught in at either end with handsome ornaments and tassels of silk and cord.

Another entirely unreasonable but eminently smart use for fur has also been devised by some inventive genius and welcomed with enthusiasm by those women who are already delighted that their possession of some superb sables or ermines should be publicly proclaimed during the Summer, instead of as usual merely arousing masculine admiration and feminine jealousy in the Winter. And so it is that there are already to be seen in Paris several coats and wraps of mousseline de soie whose fragile transparency is waistcoat by a deep bordering of Russian sable, while collar, stole and cuffs of equally important size and gorgeous effect are also added. One such cloak is, in fact, my most pleasant memory of Paris, and almost makes me forgetful of the nightmare of the tied-in skirt, whose effect upon myself has been to turn my thoughts still more insistently toward those Oriental draperies whose lines are all grace and whose inspiration shall be evident in next season's creations.

It is not in the least necessary to introduce any fussiness or fulness into the skirt—that would be equally undesirable—but there must be unbroken and, in the case of older women, lengthier lines.

A woman's principal and strongest power is when she is and looks alluring. Now, as in the present Parisian fashion, she only looks like a jelly bag turned upside down.

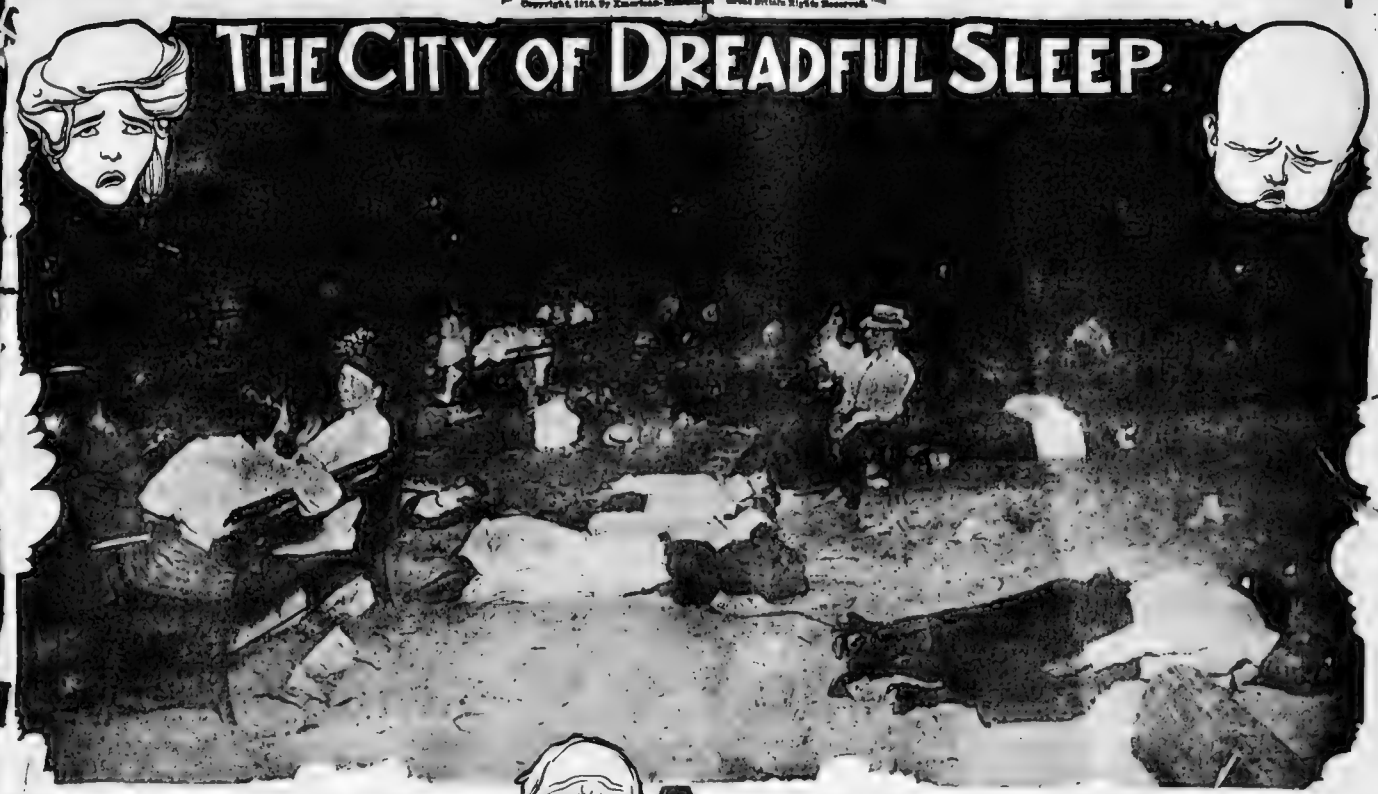
THE CITY OF DREADFUL SLEEP.



Study These Very Remarkable Photographs of Those Who Seek Troubled Rest Away from the Smothering, Death and Madness Breeding Heat of Crowded New York—What Do YOU Think Ought To Be Done About It?

Covering the Coney Island Sands Like Bodies on a Battlefield, Under Benches and on Benches Men, Women and Children Who Have Fled from the Sweltering, Crowded City Sleep Fitfully Until the Dawn.

ather place in the world can show— the struggle of a people to live through the night; the fight of a mother against the impalpable enemy that is choking out her baby's life; the terror of a youth, who has just brought in his wife from the country, sure that he was going to conquer the big city; little tragedies of the streets and of the people who have given up trying.

First, go down to Coney Island, where millions of New Yorkers seek their Summer pleasure. The flaring electric lights that outline the parks in lines of fire are out. Walk down to the beach. In the glare of the arc lights along the water front the strips of sand are black with people. It is as though a tidal wave had swept these sands up and down and left them there. In the debris of the day, empty bottles, torn and stained lunch boxes, wisps of paper and cloth, here they lie by the thousands; men, women and children who have fled from the tenements and the flat houses of the city.

On the benches sit the more conventional, who sleep fitfully until dawn. But they are not all the poorer foreign people. Here is a girl who has had gentle upbringing; by her side is her young husband; a couple lured from pleasant fields by the call of New York; here is a little baby upon its mother's white petticoat, while the young mother crouches at its head nodding on her hands; here are the old and the young men and women and children cast up on this lip of the immense caldron which is the life of New York.

Go down to the Battery. Under the sea wall, along the sea wall, more hundreds sprawl. Go past the great foot of the Brooklyn Bridge and over into the City Hall Square through which the Mayor walks so merrily each morning. On the City Hall steps, lying on papers are more men, women and children, faces upturned to a sky from which no cool breeze blows. Go through the outer corridors—if you can. There are more men. Walk over to the fountain. In its dried basin sleep others, and on its steps they are massed like the dead in a gigantic battlefield. Go anywhere where there is an open place in New York and look at these people. They crowd the roofs, fire escapes and steps. They lie in every little park and every little place that greed has not been able to fill with stone and brick.

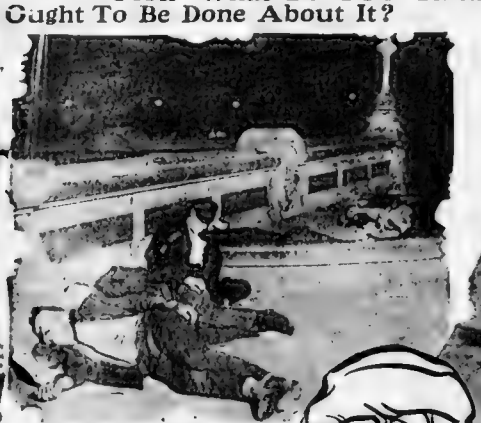
Study these pictures. They are rather remarkable. But they are only a few of hundreds that might be taken.

Then think of the helplessness and misery of these people and try to find some way to lift them out of it.

Over in New Jersey and on the outskirts of Greater New York are hundreds of acres of unoccupied land where thousands of these city dwellers could live healthfully and happily; where the women and men could attain health to bring strong children into the world and where the children could develop into rugged, happy little people.

Other thousands of dollars could be spent by the land owners and by philanthropists in improving the tenements and the little flats. Conceivably one hundred thousand dollars spent to create conditions in which men and women would have space to think might be better than the same sum spent for a library useless to stunted brains.

There are organisations that are doing with limited means the best they can to lessen the evils these pictures reflect. But that the evils are far ahead of the remedies, the pictures prove.



They Crowd the Empty Fountains and the Walks of City Hall Park.

WHEN the smothering heat of Summer drops down upon Greater New York, death and madness walk through the swarming tenements and along the thronged streets where the toilers live.

Then New York becomes the city of dreadful night, indeed, and the city of still more dreadful sleep.

In the tenements, little children who in environments of helpless neglect and disease have no chance to grow strong and healthy as the Creator meant children to be, gasp for breath on the iron of the bristling fire escapes, while from the street come waves of blistering heat and from above the heat drops down on them like blankets. Young men and women, mated to bring other children into the world, lie on roof tops and on steps, their strength and vitality slipping from them; old men and old women lie in their sweltering corners longing for the last sleep of all to take them out of their torment.

Insanity, death and disease come with the Summer into these hives of humanity.

But not only in the tenements does the brutal grip of New York seize by the throat those who have to live and sleep in it. Into the crowded rows of houses, where live those who struggle on in New York on the minimum wage and live in one or two small rooms, the heat comes. It strikes the youths and girls of gentle upbringing, who have come to New York to make their fortunes—and who have been caught in its teeth; men and women who have accepted their yoke, babies and little children, who are receiving a little more care than the tenement children, but are just as much slaves to New York.

Now, in the Borough of Manhattan, which is New York proper, there are 2,000,000 souls, and these 2,000,000 souls live upon 21.93 square miles. It is true that the famous Black Hole of Calcutta contained more men, women and children to its square foot than this, but the tragedy of the Black Hole is the tragedy of New York when the heat sweeps down upon it.

When this happens go out about midnight and walk about the city. There you will see scenes that no

My Secrets of Beauty

No. 80—Sea Bathing For Beauty

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri, the Most Famous Living Beauty.

"Those young women whom we see walking along the beach with their hair floating over their shoulders show that they know the beautifying value of the air and sun for the hair."

MME. CAVALIERI writes today on the timely topic of bathing for beauty—which means also, of course, bathing for health. She declares that there is no better tonic than sea air, and at the same time warns against the over-stimulation which results from a too prolonged stay at the seashore, as well as over-doing the bathing part. And she gives valuable advice about injuries to the skin and complexion, which are often the result of inattention to these details by those who indulge in sea bathing. The subject of Mme. Cavalieri's article next Sunday is "How to take care of the feet in Summer."

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

IF you go to the seashore make the most of it as a beautifier. Be careful also that it does not rob you of your beauty. There are two sides to the shield.

There is no greater tonic nor more complete invigorant than sea air. Charitable folk, knowing this, send the ailing babies of the poor out to the sea in ships free of charge, and the little ones are often saved by that one day at sea. They build hospitals on the seashore and the patients mended or worn bodies mend faster there than anywhere else, for a time. Whatever makes the blood bound through the pulses is a beautifier temporary or permanent, and wherever great floods of sunshine are gathered and focused upon humanity is a natural sanitarium.

But there is, according to some authorities, over stimulation in a long stay by the sea, and some great hygienists have said that a six weeks' stay at the shore is long enough. Certainly, viewed from the standpoint of beauty alone, those life long dwellers by the sea, as for instance the brown-faced, withered visaged folk one sees in the villages on the New England coast, have not gained by having the ocean as a neighbor.

Some young persons spend more time in the surf than they should. It is better to be conservative in salt bathing as in all other matters. Twenty minutes are long enough for a dip. A warming by being buried in the sand, another plunge to remove the clinging sand, a cool fresh shower and then a quick dressing are best.

Don't let the sun burn or wind burn become too deep. There is a danger line that must not be passed in the ravages of the sun and wind upon the delicate complexion. That passed, the complexion is irretrievably spoiled. The danger is ruin to the tender skin. If the skin itself is scalded by the sun's rays they lose their renewing power.

The ocean wind is a rude companion in its mildest midsummer mood, and a woman must prepare to protect herself from it. For instance, it may bring a train of freckles. Look rather to the prevention than the cure of these. One of the best means I know of keeping the ugly freckles at a distance is applying this upon the face at night.

White of one egg.

If you have a bad case of freckles, don't let them grow worse by the seaside. Apply this once or twice a day:

Spermaceti	6 drams
Oil of almonds	1 dram
Citrine ointment	1 dram
Attar of roses	3 drops

Another, old-fashioned but reliable, treatment for freckles is to rub fresh buttermilk into the skin at bedtime. This is a harmless remedy and often effective.

If you have regard for your complexion don't lie on the sand and invite the rays of the midday sun to do their worst. It is a very bad habit, and it is never wise to defy the sun. If you want to spend some hours on the sand before or after the bath, or instead of it, protect the skin by massaging it well with cold cream and powdering it lightly with face powder. This is a mask that keeps off the sun.

When you reach your room remove this with more cold cream. Leave a little of the cold cream you have used for cleansing, on the face. Do not wash the face after coming in from the sea air, or before going out and exposing your face to it. The cleansing with water should be done at night.

Those young women whom we see walking along the beach with their hair floating over their shoulders show that they know the beautifying value of the air and sun for the hair. This daily walk on the beach, with the hair floating is one of the best beautifying results from a stay on the shore. But the great drawback of it is that the sun fades the hair. To counteract this effect massage the hair nightly to release the oils and it gives tone to the pigment that lies at the roots and gives the hair its color. Again the egg, humble aid to beauty, is of value. Rub the whites of an egg thoroughly into the roots before washing it. Also this is a useful tonic to be rubbed into the scalp before washing the hair:

Whiskey, one-half pint.

Beat the whites of the eggs into the whiskey and apply just before shampooing. Or, if the hair is sufficiently cleansed by this mixture without soap, then rinse the hair thoroughly in fresh water.

Do not wash the hair in sea water. If your hair becomes wet by bathing do not allow the salt water to remain on it, but rinse it carefully out.

Take your large rubber gloves with you to the seashore, and be sure to wear them at night after rubbing an ointment upon them.

Glycerine	1 oz.

If you cannot go to the seashore take long walks in the morning and evening wherever you are. Try the tonic effect of a salt rub every morning. With a handful of table salt rub the skin vigorously from neck on feet. Then take a plunge or shower bath and you will have practically the results of a dip in the surf, and you will have a better complexion in the Fall.

A Jersey City "Reader Reader" asks "How can I develop my bust from its present meek remove of thirty-two inches to thirty six inches the size it should be to make my figure of right proportions?"

I have known the bust to be developed more than that in a year by exercises that develop the chest. Placing the clenched hands above the bust and extending the arms straight forward. Then back and forth again, with quick vigorous motions, is a good developer. So is deep breathing. Good emollients for that purpose are pure cocoanut and olive and almond oils. Your best hope, I had almost said "best bet," is exercise coupled with eating nourishing and fatty foods. This formula has been successfully used, by applying it to the breasts with a light, firm touch every night before retiring.

Fresh lard	100 grams
Alcohol, 80 per cent.	20 grams
Essence of rosemary	15 drops
Essence of bergamot	15 drops

"What can I use to keep my hair dry and curly?" writes a little maid from a Fourteenth street address. This is good for oily hair:

Bay rum	1 quart
Alcohol	½ pint
Water	½ pint
Tincture of cantharides	½ oz.
Carbonate of ammonia	¼ oz.

This dandoline will keep the hair in curl:

Tragacanth	1½ oz.
Rosewater	1½ pints
Oil of almonds	½ dram

From Brooklyn I have a request for advice about building up a thin neck and low shoulders.

Hold yourself upright, with the shoulders well back. Rub into the

"For freckles rub fresh buttermilk into the skin at bedtime."

Spermaceti	½ lb.
White wax	½ lb.

A Hoboken girl complains that her hair is very thin and oily. It is not only that I cannot make it stay up on my crest. It hangs over my forehead as though it were dead. What can I do for it?"

Try this tonic, massaging the scalp three times a week with it until you note an improvement.

Tincture of cantharides	½ oz.

For years I suffered from brown freckles and pimples, which no amount of cosmetics or powders could hide. I tried everything I could hear of, but nothing seemed to help me. Then I read a recipe for a simple home remedy. I got the ingredients, prepared it and used it according to directions. In two weeks my skin was as clear as a baby's, and my friends were asking me what I had done to improve my appearance so much. I will send you the recipe free. If you will write for it today. VERY ODD PETS.

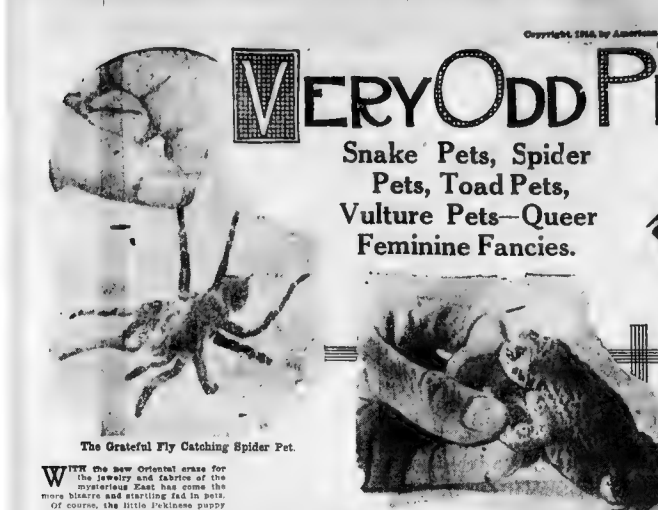
Snake Pets, Spider Pets, Toad Pets, Vulture Pets—Queer Feminine Fancies.



The Grateful Fly Catching Spider Pet.

The New Rock Python Pet of England.

WITH the new Oriental craze for the jewelry and fabrics of the mysterious East has come the more bizarre and startling fad in pets.

Of course, the little Pekinese puppy that is shown on this page and which won a prize at the recent Dog Show for Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt is only a prettily grotesque. But how about snakes and toads, and lizards, vultures and spiders?

The fashion in snakes has been given quite an impetus in England by the production of Conan Do le's new play, "The Speckled Band," which has to do with the use of the deadly Indian rock python by the villain of the play. The rock python, Mystery, which takes the part of the "Speckled Band" at the English theatre is probably the only snake actor in existence. He has five understudies, who has to be left alone for three days after each meal. As the rock python only feeds once every two weeks, however, this is not as bad as it sounds.

But Mystery has shown himself such a docile reptile that he has started a fad for snakes in London society. In the boudoirs of Mayfair and Belgravia even the deadly cobra—fangs extracted, of course—can be found. Not long ago Dorothy Tennant, who loves to do startling things, was seen at an Asquith reception with what was apparently a wonderfully carved bracelet representing a snake of blue and gold. It was only when the bracelet lifted its head and stuck out a little red tongue that shocked onlookers saw that it was the real thing. The snake had is rapidly becoming popular, and it will only be a question of time, probably, before it crosses the Atlantic.

But one more repulsive than this is the cultivation of spiders—notably the large, harmless spiders of the West Indies—as companions. This is a new fad, and many women in England are addicted to it. Down in the West Indies the spiders are quite as household pets for a useful purpose. These West Indian spiders are said to be very practical and intelligent, and the most perfect fly-traps known.

Toads are coming quite into fashion. The toad is described by one of its devotees as being one of the most intelligent, quaintest and individual pets one can have. It readily grows to know its owner; to greet her with croaks of delight; to feed from her hand, and if she is a gardener, to show its affection by keeping her planes clear of all the nasty, crawling things a garden collects. The beauty of a toad lies in its ugliness and in its adaptation to the Oriental effects which women this season are affecting. Note the look of gratitude and intelligence upon the face of this toad in the picture. It can be seen at once that he recognizes the hand that feeds him.

The Toad That Loves the Feeding Hand.

From China—and Looks It.

Wild Birds Are Not Such Weird Pets.

Birds are not odd pets, perhaps, but they are when such birds as vultures, buzzards and so on. The vulture had a name from Egypt, where in ancient centuries it was the Goddess Isis's pet bird. Some vultures does not grow very well in northern countries, but English residents in India and Egypt find them very amusing and useful pets. There is no very modern scavenger department in those countries and so taking one pet vultures from a house is quite as much a social grievance as taking one's pet cook is up north

Sir Wilfred Baden-Powell, the Boer war hero, is very fond of making pets of wild birds. He does not put them in cages, but takes pride in striking up an acquaintance with them and feeding them. The little wild birds have grown so to know Sir Baden-Powell and will perch over his hand and head whenever he goes out.

No one has yet succeeded in making a pet of a tarantula, but this will probably come later.

Even the larger animals have been adopted by fashionable folk as household pets. The family of Warner Van Norden, the New York banker, has a zebra which has been broken to harness and is said to draw a pony chaise.

The Countess of Warwick has a number of curious pets. The most unusual perhaps is an African ant eater. The Countess has a small elephant, too, and on her arm she often carries a tiny marmoset. In fact, marmosets are not infrequently prized as household pets by ladies who have abundant time for their care. They are very small and odd-looking creatures, and though they are real monkeys they bear a strong resemblance to squirrels.

They are delicately formed, with hairless faces, eyes that are large and bright, and long, bushy tails. They have long hair, which is abundant and silky. Some of them have ruffs of hair on the top of the head, which stands up like a ruff. They look more like toys than animals, and they are very cute and lovable

Miss Winona Van Ohl, who runs a regular ranch in Pinalefald, N. J., has had a number of unusual pets. She has a tame raccoon and a wolf. The raccoon runs loose around the house, but the wolf is kept tied to a stake, as it is not considered safe as yet to give it its liberty, although it has shown itself to be very friendly to its young mistress.

The Princess Troubetskoi, who was formerly Miss Amelia Rives, has also chosen a wolf as a pet. Hers is of the Russian variety, and was given to her by her husband's family when it was quite a puppy. It is now a gigantic creature of the pale gray variety common to the Russian wilds, and though it looks particularly ferocious it is in reality perfectly tame.

Monkeys of different varieties are sometimes chosen as household pets, but their mischievous nature when can never be entirely subdued, makes it rather a risky experiment where there are valuable pieces of bric-a-brac or jewelry around.

Logically there is no reason why other animals besides the eternal cat and dog should not be chosen as household pets, except that the latter have proved themselves particularly well fitted for the purpose. The latter are purely tamed animals, as has been shown, they make just as reliable pets as those of the domestic varieties.

Reasons Why Nearly All Women Long for Love.

ONE of the most important questions frequently asked by women is whether love is an absolute necessity on their part. Most certainly it is, for the world is a cold, cheerless place for the unhappy woman who has never known what true love really is. It is only after true love comes to the fore that a female really lives; before its appearance she merely exists; after love's tender beams strike her life path she is transformed, and not she alone, everything, to her, takes on a more beautiful appearance—the most sordid things of life become brighter.

Therefore, love ought to play a most important part in the lives of women; in fact, it should be the chief end of their existence. But, alas! it is not. It used to be, but the time is almost past Love is with many a secondary consideration.

Women are undoubtedly taking a more prominent part in the affairs of the world than ever before. They have found occupations that our grandmothers would have thought quite masculine. Scientific studies, the profession of medicine, lecturing on special subjects, gardening and several work, teaching, trained nursing—all these have had a hand in relegating love to a back seat.

In these days a large number of women aim rather at distinction—ambition spurs them on, they are not content to settle down and lead a peaceful, if uneventful, married life. They clamor for excitement; they want amusement; they refused to be tied down to a round of domestic duties—in a word, many have revolted against the old and homely, and, be it said, correct rule which ordained that matrimony, following on love, was the be all and end all of life so far as woman was concerned.

Do women benefit by the change? Suppose a woman gains fame, with perhaps fortune thrown in, is that enough? Will she be thoroughly satisfied? She will, in the calmer days when she cannot read the secrets of her heart, but deep down there is a consciousness that something is wanting. The natural instinct has been thwarted, and the woman knows it. Instinct, in truth, clamors for something withheld After all, what is fame to a genuine woman?

It is the praise of the multitude fill a woman's heart with joy as much as an infant lisping its first simple words? Emphatically no! Marie Faraday Tubper says: "A child in a house is a well-spring of pleasure," but many a mother might add it is also a well-spring of worry. But would she be without it? Not for worlds. She is happier for than she knows. The young mother with her children about her is apt to let small worries cloud over the happiest time of her life. But when she looks back at it, when the young ones have all grown up and gone from her, she wonders at herself for having bothered about trifles.

Is there a living woman of, say, twenty-five to thirty years of age who has never come across thousands who have loved and lost, but their case is not so bad as that of the woman who has never known what very thought of love, in fact, is necessary for a woman's life is created for her. What is love? There are women who scoff and sneer at love outwardly, but little heed is paid to them. Are you possessing companionship, and that is the short and the long of it.

It might be asked, following on what has been written above, is love a necessity for the average girl? Is she shorn of her own, a husband who treasures her, and very likely children who adore her. And what is the result? Her life is made blank in her life. She knows she is incomplete—undeveloped, in fact. The sweet characteristics, the finer side of her nature, the true womanliness of these qualities for ruin? Very many do not are stunted. It requires love to bring them to maturity, and I assert that even maturity the woman may not be as beautified for the very purpose of loving and to have lived in vain.

What does love conjure up to the average girl? She should just think of it! being loved more or less; to her love is life. The woman who never loved, or never has one offered her, may be called one of life's most decided failures, for if a woman's life is to be a success love is a necessity.

On the other hand, man is a creature who can live without love. He has many a hundred and one other things take up his attention, and love with him, there fore, is not a matter of vital importance.

DAT SOITNLY WAS GOOD OF ADMIRAL BLICK TO GIVE US DIS FOOD.
DIS WOILD AINT DE WOIST PLACE TO LIVE IN AFTER ALL. THERES ALWAYS SOMEBODY READY TO DO YOU A GOOD TOIN!
AS SHAKESPEARE SAYS,— "LAUGH AN' DE WOILD LAUGHS WIT YOU."
LEAVE THAT BEER ALONE
WHAT DO YOU MEAN BY LETTING THAT BEAR TAKE OUR SLED?
HAVE MOICY!

ICE BOX
I'M GOING TO LET HIM OUT

12
PARENTS SHOULD HAVE LOVE AND A SENSE OF HUMOR
IT WILL COOL OVER IN A MINUTE

RESOLVED

THAT AS SOON AS YOU DO ANYTHING OUT OF THE ORDINARY YOU ARE EITHER HOOTED OR CONDEMNED BECAUSE PEOPLE ARE SUCH SLAVES OF CONFORMITY AND RULE. I DIDN'T DO ANY HARM, I THOUGHT THAT THE PSYCHOLOGICAL EFFECT OF A SLEIGH WOULD BE COOLING ON A HOT SUNDAY. I AM NOT GOING TO BE ONE OF THOSE WHO DO THINGS BECAUSE OTHERS DO IT. I'LL TRY TO BE RIGHT AND TRUE AND HONEST. SOME PEOPLE CANT BE GOOD OR POLITE OR HONEST EXCEPT BY A SET OF RULES. AND THOSE SAME RULES WERE PROBABLY MADE BY SOME POOR OLD SOUL WHO DIED BEFORE RAIL ROAD TRAINS OR TELEGRAPH OR TELEPHONES OR WIRELESS OR AUTO MOBILES WERE MADE. HIS RULES WERE AS SILLY AS THE CANDLE LIGHT USED IN MAKING THEM. WE ARE MAKING RULES NOW UNDER HAPPIER, RICHER, AND MORE ENLIGHTENED CONDITIONS
